The text on which this edition of Shakespeare is based is that of Collier, carefully compared with the folio of MDCCXIII. and the impressions of Johnson, Steevens, Malone, Boswell, and Knight. Dyce's remarks have also been consulted.

Of the numerous editions in one volume, there is, perhaps, hardly one of which it may not be said that the size is too great, or the print too small. It occurred to the Publisher that considerable improvements yet remained to be made on the plan of the Englishman's Vade-mecum. He thought that by printing the names of the characters at full length, in the centre of the text, and in red ink, considerable relief would be afforded both to the memory and the eye of the reader, and that particular passages might be referred to with peculiar ease.

He ventures, therefore, to hope that the present edition of Shakespeare may be found, in purity of text, to equal, and in convenience of form to excel, any of its countless and multiform predecessors.

William Shakespeare

Was born at Stratford-upon-Avon, in the county of Warwick, on the 23rd of April, 1564. His father, John Shakespeare, was a glover, and at various times alderman and bailiff of the town; his mother, Mary Arden, was the daughter of an ancient but decayed family in the county. It is most likely that the poet received his education at the free-school of Stratford; and we have the assertion of Aubrey that he was for some time a schoolmaster, and the plausible conjecture of Malone, based upon the familiarity displayed in his writings with the technicalities of the law, that he likewise served in the office of an attorney. Nothing certain, however, is known of his youth, but that he married, soon after the 28th November, 1582, Anne Hathaway, of Stratford; and that their first child was christened on the 26th of May, 1583. Twins were born to them in 1585, soon after which event Shakespeare went to seek his fortune in London. The well known story that he left Stratford in order to avoid the consequences of stealing deer from the park of Sir Thomas Lucy at Charlecote rests upon a tradition, picked up by Betterton, the actor, some fifty years after the poet's death, and neither shaken nor strengthened by the diligence of many subsequent inquirers. We first hear of him in London in 1589, as a shareholder and player in the Blackfriars Theatre; and he had doubtless already commenced author, by altering or adapting the writings of others to the stage; for a passage in Spenser's "Tears of the Muses," in which he seems to be alluded to as "our pleasant Willy," proves that in 1591, when the poem was first printed, he had achieved a considerable reputation as a dramatist. In 1593 he published his poem of "Venus and Adonis," and in 1594 that entitled "Lucrece." Both works were dedicated to Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, who rewarded the author with a gift of a thousand pounds. It was this bounty, perhaps, which enabled him to become a leading shareholder in the New Globe Theatre on the bankside in Southwark, built by the Blackfriars company, and opened in 1595. In summer, the same company used to perform at a theatre at Newington Butts. Shakespeare remained on the stage till 1604, when his name ceases to be found amongst the actors. He continued, however, to live in London—near the Bear Garden in Southwark; and to write for the stage until 1612 or 1613, when he took up his permanent abode at Stratford. There his gains had been from time to time invested in a substantial house called the New Place, and built by Sir Hugh Clopton in the reign of Henry VII., some other detached tenements, a hundred and seven acres of land, a garden and orchard, and the great tithes of the parish—property which may have been worth between two and three hundred pounds a year. This property must have been acquired mainly by the representations of his plays, and his own exertions as an actor. From his printed dramas he seems to have derived no profit, nor to have looked for any fame; indeed, he seems neither to have been concerned in their publication, nor to have bestowed the least care in the revision of the text. His name was even affixed during his lifetime to several plays which his friends and fellow actors saw fit to exclude from the first collected edition printed by them in 1623. Of his sonnets, written, many of them, before 1598, though not printed until 1609, the dedication to "their only begetter," Mr. W. H., initials which have as yet never been deciphered, was signed, not by the author, but by the publisher, Thomas Thorpe. Aubrey was informed that Shakespeare "did act exceedingly well." But he certainly did not hold amongst actors the prominent place which he occupied amongst authors. In his own plays, he is said to have sustained the parts of the Ghost in "Hamlet," and Adam in "As You Like It;" he likewise acted in Ben Jonson's "Every Man in his Humour;" and his last recorded appearance on the stage was in that author's "Sejanus." His person and manners are thus briefly described by Aubrey. "He was a handsome, well-shaped man, very good company, and of a ready, and pleasant, and smooth wit." He died at Stratford on the 23rd April, 1616, aged 53 years. By his widow, who survived him till 1623, he had three children: Susanna, married to Dr. Hall, a physician of some eminence; Hamnet, who died aged eleven in 1596; and Judith, the wife of Thomas Quiney, a wine merchant at Stratford. Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Hall and widow of Sir John Bernard, who died at Abingdon in 1670, was the last lineal descendant of Shakespeare. —The poet was buried on the north side of the chancel of the great church of Stratford.

Within seven years of his death a monument was erected there to his memory, containing his bust, and inscribed with these verses:

Stay, Passenger, why goest thou by so fast?
Read, if thou canst, whom envious Death hath plast Within this monument: Shakespear; with whom Quick natvre dide; whose name doth deck yt Tombe
Far more then cost; sieth all yt he hath writt
Leaves living art bvt page to serve his witt
Oblit ym doj. 1616.
Ætatis 53. die 23 Apr."

The house of New Place passed to the Poet's daughter, Mrs. Hall; and while in the possession of her daughter, was for three weeks the residence of Queen Henrietta Maria in 1643. It afterwards reverted to the Cloptons, descendants of Sir Hugh, and at last fell into the hands of the Rev. Francis Gastrell, vicar of Frodsham, in Cheshire. Quarrelling with the magistrates of Stratford in 1756, this divine immortalized himself by razing the building to the ground, having previously cut down a mulberry tree in the garden, planted, according to the tradition, by the hand of Shakespeare.

The Dedication prefixed to the Folio of 1623.

To the most Noble and Incomparable Paire of Brethren. William Earle of Pembroke, &c. Lord Chamberlaine to the Kings most Excellent Maiesty.

And Philip Earle of Montgomery, &c. Gentleman of his Maiesties Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good Lords.

Right Honourable,

Whilst we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many favours we have receiued from your L. L we are faile vpon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diuerse things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the successe. For, when we valew the places your H. H. sustaine, we cannot but know their dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue depru'd our selves of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L. L have beene pleas'd to thinke these trifles something, heretofore; and have prosequuted both them, and their Author liuing, with so much fauour: we hope, that (they out-liuing him, and he not having the fate, common to some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you have done vnlo their parent. There is a great difference, whether any booke choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L. L likings of the seuerall parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We have but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of selfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of so worthy a Friend, and Fellow alioe, as was our Shakespeare, by humble offer of his playes, to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue lustly observed, no man to come neere your L. L but with a kind of religious addresse; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the present worthy of your H. H. by the perfection. But, there we must also craue our abilities to be considered, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach forth milke, creame, fruites, or what they haue: and many Nations, (we haue heard) that had not gummes and incense, obained their requests with a leauened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what means they could: And the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H. H. these remains of your servant Shakespeare; that what delight is in them, may be euer your L. L the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre so carefull to shew their gratitude both to the liuing, and the dead, as is

Your Lordshippes most bounden,

JOHN HEMINGE.

HENRY CONDELL.
Address "to the great Variety of Readers" prefixed to the Folio of 1623.

From the most able, to him that can but spell: There you are number'd. We had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Bookes depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well! It is now publique, and you will stand for your priviledges wee know: to read, and censure.
Do so, but buy it first. That doth best commend a Booke, the Stationer sales.
Then, how odd sooner your brains be, or your wisedomes, make the licence the same, and spare not. Judge your sixpen'orth, your shillings worth, your five shillings worth at a time, or higher, so as you rise to the lust rates, and welcome.
But, whatever you do, Buy. Censure will drue a Trade, or make the Jacke go.
And though you be a Magistrate of wit, and sit on the Stage at Black-Friers, or the Cock-pit, to arraigne Playes dailie, know, these Playes haue had their triall already, and stood out all Appeales; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of commendation.

It had bene a thing, we confesse, worthie to have bene wished, that the Author him-selie had liu'd to haue set forth, and ou-seen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you doe not envie his Friends, the office of their care, and paine, to have collected and publish'd them; and so to haue publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with divers stolne, and surreptitious copies, maimed, and deformed by the frauds and stealthes of injurious impostors, that ex-pos'd them: even those, are now offer'd to your view cur'd, and perfect of their limbea; and all the rest, absolute in their numbers, as he conceived th': Who, as he was a happie imitator of Nature, was a most gentle expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he witterd with that easinesse, that wee haue scarce receuied from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our prouince, who onely gather his works, and give them you, to praise him. It is yours that reade him. And there we hope, to your diners capacities, you will finde enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be lost.
Reade him, therefore; and againe, and againe: And if then you doe not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to understand him. And so we leave you to other of his Friends, whom if you need, can bee your guides: if you neede them not, you can leade your selves, and others. And such Readers we wish him.

John Heminge.
Henrie Condell.

To the Memory of the deceased Author, Master William Shakespeare.

Shakespeare, at length thy pious fellows give
The world thy works; thy works, by which outlive
Thy tomb thy name must: when that stone is rent,
And time dissolves thy Stratford monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still: this book,
When brass and marble fade, shall make thee look
Fresh to all ages; when posterity
Shall loath what's new, think all is prodigy
That is not Shakespeare's, every line, each verse,
Here shall revive, redeem thee from thy herse.
Nor fire, nor cankering age, as Novo said
Of his, thy wit-frught book shall once invade:
Nor shall I e'er believe or think thee dead,
(Though miss'd) until our bankrout stage be sped
(Impossible) with some new strain t' out-do
Passions of Juliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I hear a scene more nobly take,
Then when thy half-sword parleying Romans spake:
Till these, till any of thy volume's rest,
Shall with more fire, more feeling, be express'd,
Be sure, our Shakespeare, thou canst never die,
But, crown'd with laurel, live eternally.
To draw no envy, Shakespeare, on thy name,
Am I thus ample to thy book, and fame;
While I confess thy writings to be such,
As neither man, nor muse, can praise too much;
'Tis true, and all men's suffrage; but these ways
Were not the paths I meant unto thy praise:
For seallest ignorance on these may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but echoes right;
Or blind affection, which doth ne'er advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance;
Or crafty malice might pretend this praise,
And think to ruin, where it seem'd to raise:
These are, as some infamous bawd, or whore,
Should praise a matron; what could hurt her more?
But thou art proof against them; and, Indeed,
Above th' ill fortune of them, or the need.
I, therefore, will begin:—Soul of the age,
The applause, delight, the wonder of our stage,
My Shakespeare, rise! I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spencer; or bid Beaumont lie
A little further, to make thee a room:
Thou art a monument without a tomb;
And art alive still, while thy book doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praise to give.
That I not mix thee so, my brain excuses;
I mean, with great but disproportion'd muses:
For, if I thought my judgment were of years,
I should commit thee surely with thy peers;
And tell how far thou didst our Lyly outshine,
Or sporting Kyd, or Marlowe's mighty line:
And though thou hadst small Latin, and less Greek,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
For names; but call forth thundering Æschylus,
Euripides, and Sophocles, to us,
Pacuvius, Accius, him of Cordova dead,
To life again, to hear thy buskin tread
And shake a stage: or, when thy socks were on,
Leave thee alone, for the comparison
Of all that insolent Greece, or haughty Rome,
Sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
Triumph, my Britain! thou hast one to show,
To whom all scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time;
And all the muses still were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warm
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm.
Nature herself was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his lines;
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As since she will vouchsafe no other wit.
The merry Greek, tart Aristophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
But antiquated and deserted lie,
As they were not of Nature's family.
Yet must I not give Nature all; thy art,
My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part:
For though the poet's matter nature be,
His art doth give the fashion; and that he,
Who casts to write a living line, must sweat,
(Such as thine are) and strike the second heat
Upon the muses' anvil; turn the same,
(And himself with it) that he thinks to frame;
Or for the laurel he may gain a scorn,
For a good poet's made, as well as born:
And such wert thou. Look, how the father's face Lives in his issue; even so the race
Of Shakespeare's mind, and manners, brightly shines
In his well-torned and true-filed lines;
In each of which he seems to shake a lance,
As brandish'd at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon, what a sight it were,
To see thee in our waters yet appear;
And make those flights upon the banks of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our James!
But stay; I see thee in the hemisphere
Advanc'd, and made a constellation there:
Shine forth, thou star of poets; and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or cheer, the drooping stage;
Which, since thy flight from hence, hath mourn'd like night,
And despairs day, but for thy volume's light!

Other Spirits attending on Prospero.

SCENE, an uninhabited Island.

ACT I.

SCENE I. On a Ship at Sea.
A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Boatswain.

Boatswain.
Here, master: what cheer?

Master.

Good. Speak to the mariners: fall to 't yarely, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

Enter Mariners.

Boatswain.

Boatswain.

Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare. Take in the top-sails; tend to the master's whistle.—Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and Others.

Alonso.

Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boatswain.

I pray now, keep below.

Antonio.

Where is the master, boatswain?

Boatswain.

Do you not hear him? You mar our labour. Keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gonzalo.

Nay, good, be patient.

Boatswain.

When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence! trouble us not.

Gonzalo.

Good; yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boatswain.

None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor: if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority: if you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts!—Out of our way, I say.

Gonzalo.

I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks, he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallowes. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging; I make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable.

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boatswain.

Down with the top-mast: yare; lower, lower. Bring her to try with main-course.

A cry within.

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again! what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?
Sebastian.
A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphphemous, incharitable dog!
Boatswain.
Work you, then.
Antonio.
Hang, cur, hang you whoreson, insolent noissemaker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gonzalo.
I'll warrant him from drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell, and as leaky as an unseel'd wench.

Boatswain.
Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses: off to sea again; lay her off.

Enter Mariner, etc.
Mariner.
All lost! to prayers, to prayers! All lost!

[Exeunt.
Boatswain.
What! must our mouths be cold?
Gonzalo.
The king and prince at prayers! let us assist For our case is as theirs.

Sebastian.
I am out of patience.

Antonio.
We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards. — [lie drowning.
This wide-chapp'd rascal, — would, thou might'st The washing of ten tides!

Gonzalo.
He'll be hanged yet, Though every drop of water swear against it, And gape at wid'st to glut him.
[A confused noise, and cries within.
[Mercy on us! — We split! we split — Farewell, my wife and children! — Farewell, brother! — We split, we split, we split!]

Antonio.
Let's all sink with the king.

Sebastian.
Let's take leave of him.

Gonzalo.
Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea For an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, any thing. The wills above be done! But I would fain die a dry death.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Island: before the cell of Prospero.
Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Miranda.
If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them. The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch, But that the sea, mounting to the wellin's cheek, Dashes the fire out. O! I have suffer'd With this that I saw suffer: a brave vessel, Who had no doubt some noble creatures in her, Dash'd all to pieces. O! the cry did knock Against my very heart. Poor souls, they pe-Had I been any god of power, I would [rish'd! Have sunk the sea within the earth, or 'er It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and The fraughting souls within her.

Prospero.
Be collected: No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart, There's no harm done.

Miranda.
O, woe the day!

Prospero.
No harm. I have done nothing but in care of thee, [who (Of thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter!) Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing Of whence I am; nor that I am more better Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell, And thy no greater father.

Miranda.
More to know Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Prospero.
'Tis time I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand, And pluck my magic garment from me. — So:
[Lays down his Mantle. Lie there my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort. The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd The very virtue of compassion in thee. I have with such provision in mine art So safely order'd, that there is no soul — No, not so much perception as an hair, Befall to any creature in the vessel. [Sit down; Which thou heardst cry, which thou saw'st sink. For thou must now know farther.

Miranda.
You have often Begun to tell me what I am; but stopped, And left me to a bootless inquisition, Concluding, "Stay, not yet."

Prospero.
The hour's now come, The very minute bids thee ope thine ear; Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember A time before we came unto this cell? I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not Out three years old.

Miranda.
Certainly, sir, I can.

Prospero.
By what? by any other house, or person? Of any thing the image tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Miranda.
'Tis far off; And rather like a dream, than an assurance That my remembrance warrants. Had I not Four or five women once, that tended me?

Prospero.
Thou hast, and more, Miranda. But how is it. That this lives In thy mind? What seest thou In the dark backward and abyss of time? If thou remember'st aught, ere thou cam'st here, How thou cam'st here, thou may'st.

Miranda.
But that I do not.

Prospero.
Twelve years since, Miranda, twelve years Thy father was the duke of Milan, and [since, A prince of power.

Miranda.
Sir, are not you my father?

Prospero.
Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and She said, thou wast my daughter; and thy father Was duke of Milan, and his only heir A princes no worse issued.

Miranda.
The Tempest,
Act 1 Sc 2.
To give him annual tribute, do him homage, Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend The dukedom, yet unbowed, (alas, poor Milan!) To most ignoble stooping.

Prospero.

O, the heavens!

Miranda.

Mark his condition, and th' event; then tell me, If this might be a brother.

Miranda.

I should sin

To think but nobly of my grandmother: Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Prospero.

Now the condition.

This king of Naples, being an enemy To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit; Which was, that he in lieu o' the premises,— Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,— Should presently extirpate me and mine Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan, With all the honours, on my brother: whereon, A treacherous army levied, one midnight, Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open The gates of Milan; and, 't the dead of darkness, The ministers for the purpose hurled thence Me, and thy crying self.

Miranda.

Alack, for pity! I, not rememb'ring how I cried out then, Will cry it o'er again: It is a hint, That wrings mine eyes to 't.

Prospero.

Hear a little farther, And then I'll bring thee to the present business Which now's upon 's; without which this Were most impertinent.

Prospero.

Wherefore did they not That hour destroy us?

Prospero.

Well demanded, wench: My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not, (So dear the love my people bore me) nor set A mark so bloody on the business; but With colours fairer painted their foul ends. In few, they hurried us aboard a bark, Bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepar'd A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd, Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats Instinctively had quit it: there they hoist us, To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again, Did us but loving wrong.

Miranda.

Alack! what trouble

Was I then to you!

Prospero.

O! a cherubim [smile, Thou wast, that did preserve me. Thou didst Infused with a fortitude from heaven, When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt, Under my burden groan'd; which rais'd in me An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Prospero.

How came we ashore?

By Providence divine.

Some food we had, and some fresh water, that A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo, Out of his charity, (who being then appointed Master
THE TEMPEST.

Mastor of this design) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries, Which since have steadied much: so, of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
From my own library, with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Miranda. Would I might
But ever see that man!

Prospero. Now I arise:
Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princes can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Miranda. Heavens thank you for 't! And now, I pray you, sir,
For still 'tis beating in my mind, your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Prospero. Know thus far forth. —
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my presence
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions.
Then art i' th' land to sleep; 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way: — I know thou canst not choose.
[Miranda sleeps.
Come away, servant, come! I am ready now.
Approach, my Ariel: come!

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. All hail, great master; grave sir, hail. I come
To answer thy best pleasure; be 't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds: to thy strong bidding task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Prospero. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?

Ariel. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship: now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement: sometimes, I'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and join. Jose's lightnings, the precursors
O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-outrunning were not: the fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
Seem'd to besiege, and make his bold waves
Yea, his dread transient shake. [tremble,

Prospero. My brave spirit! I
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?

Ariel. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation. All, but mariners,
Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a-dre with me: the king's son, Ferdi-mand!

With hair up-staring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, "Hell is
And all the devils are here." [empty,

Prospero. But why, that's my spirit!
But was not this night shore?

Ariel. Close by, my master.

Prospero. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ariel. Not a hair perish'd;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before: and, as thou best'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.
The king's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Prospero. Of the king's ship
The mariners, say, how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' the fleet?

Ariel. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; In the deep nolle, where once
Thou call'd'st me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's
The mariners all under hatches stow'd; [hid:
Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep: and for the rest o' the fleet
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean Fote,
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the king's ship
wreck'd,
And his great person perish.

Prospero. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.
What is the time o' the day?

Ariel. Past the mid season.

Prospero. At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.

Ariel. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
[mis'd,
Let me remember thee what thou hast pro-
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Prospero. How now I moody?
What is't thou canst demand?

Ariel. My liberty.

Prospero. Before the time be out? no more.

Ariel. I prithee
Remember, I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakes,
Serv'd [promise
Without or grudge, or grumblings. Thou didst
To bate me a full year.

Prospero. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?

Ariel. No.

Prospero.
Prospero.
Thou dost; and think'st it much, to tread the core Of the salt deep, To run upon the sharp wind of the north, To do me business in the veins o' th' earth, When it is bak'd with frost.

Ariel.
I do not, sir.

Prospero.
Thou best, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot, The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and envy, Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

No, sir.

Ariel.
Thou hast. Where was she born? speak; tell me.

Sir, in Argier.

Prospero.
O! was she so? I must, Once in a month, recount what thou hast been, What thou forget'st. This dam'd witch, Sycorax, For mischief manifold, and sorceries terrible To enter human hearing, from Argier, [did, Thou know'st, was banish'd: for one thing she They would not take her life. Is not this true?

Ariel.
Ay, sir.

Prospero.
This blue-ey'd hag was hither brought with child, And here was left by the sailors: thou, my slave As thou report'st thyself, was then her servant: And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate To act her earthly and abhor'd commands, Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee, By help of her more potent ministers, And in her most unmitigable rage, Into a cloven pine, within which rift Imprison'd, thou diest painfully remain A dozen years; within which space she died, And left thee there, where thou diest vent thy groans [island As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this (Save for the son that she did litter here, A freckled whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with A human shape.

Ariel.
Yes; Caliban, her son.

Prospero.
Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban, Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st What torment I did find thee in: thy groans Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts Of ever-angry bears. It was a torment To lay upon the dam'd, which Sycorax Could not again undo: it was mine art, When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made gape The pine, and let thee out.

Ariel.
I thank thee, master.

Prospero.
If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak, And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ariel.
Pardon, master: I will be correspondent to command, And do my spriting gently.

Prospero.
Do so, and after two days I will discharge thee.

Ariel.
That's my noble master! What shall I do? say what? what shall I do?

Prospero.
Go, make thyself like a nymph o' the sea: be subject To no sight but thine and mine; Invisible To every eyeball else. Go, take this shape, And hither come in't: go; hence, with diligence.

Awake, dear heart, awake! thou hast slept well; Awake!

Miranda.
The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Prospero.
Shake it off. Come on: We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Miranda.
'Tis a villain, sir, I do not love to look on.

Prospero.
But as 'tis, We cannot miss him: he does make our fire, Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices That profit us.—What ho! slave! Caliban! Thou earth, thou! I speak.

Caliban.
There's wood enough within.

Prospero.
Come forth, I say: there's other business for Come, thou tortoise! when? [thee.

Re-enter Ariel, like a water-nymph.

Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel, Hark in thine ear.

Ariel.
My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.

Prospero.
Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil him— Upon thy wicked dam, come forth! [self Enter Caliban.

Caliban.
As wicked dew, as e'er my mother brush'd With raven's feather from unwholesome fen, Drop on you both! a south-west blow on ye, And blister all you e'er!

Prospero.
For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps, [urchins Side-stitches that shall пен thy breath up; Shall, for that vast of night that they may work, All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd As thick as honey-comb, each pinch more Than bees that made 'em. [stinging

Caliban.
I must eat my dinner. This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother, Which thou tak'st from me. When thou cam'st first, [would'st give me Thou strook'dst me, and mad'st much of me; Water with berries in't: and teach me how To name the bigger light, and how the less, That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee, And shrou'd thee all the qualifications o' th' isle, The
Act I

Exit his

Is, I

Which first was mine own king; and here you

stye me,

In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me

The rest o' th' island.

Prospero.

Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness, I have us'd thee,

[thee

Filth as thou art, with human care; and lodg'd
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Caliban.

O ho! O ho!—would it had been done!

'thou didst prevent me; I had peoplesed

Tuis isle with Calibans.

Prospero.

Abhorred slave,
Which any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee,

Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee

each hour

One thing or other: when thou didst not, savage,

Know thine own meaning, but wouldn't galble like

A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes

With words that made them known; but thy vile race,

[good natures

Though thou didst learn, had that in't which Could not abide to be with: therefore wast thou

Deservedly confin'd into this rock,

'Who hast deserv'd more than a prison.

Caliban.

You taught me language; and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid
For learning me your language! [you,

Prospero.

Hag-seed, hence! I

Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou'rt best,

To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice?

If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly

What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps;

Fill all thy bones with aches; make thee roar,

That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Caliban.

No, pray thee!— [Aside.

I must obey: his art is of such power,

It would control my dam's god, Setebos,

And make a vassal of him.

Prospero.

So, slave; hence! [Exit Caliban.

Re-enter Ariel, Invisible, playing and singing; Ferdinand following him.

Ariel's song.

Come unto these yellow sands,

And then take hands;

Court'sied when you have, and kiss'd,

The wild swains whilst,

Foot it lightly here and there;

And sweet sprites the burden bear.

Hark, hark! (Burden.)

[Burden.] Bowgh, wowgh. [Dispersely.

The watch-dogs bark.

[Burden.] Bowgh, wowgh.

Hark, hark! I hear.

The strain of strutting chanticere

Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

Ferdinand.

Where should this music be? I' th' air, or th' earth?

It sounds no more;—and sure, it waits upon

Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank,

Weeping again the king my father's wreck,

This music crept by me upon the waters,

Alaying both their fury, and my passion,

With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it,

Or it hath drawn me rather:—but 'tis gone.

No, it begins again.

Ariel sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies;

Of his bones are coral made;

Those are pearls that were his eyes:

Nothing of him, that doth fade,

But doth suffer a sea-change

Into something rich and strange.

Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:

Burden: ding-dong.

Hark! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

Ferdinand.

The ditty does remember my drown'd father.—

This is no mortal business, nor no sound

That the earth owes,—I hear it now above me.

Prospero.

The fringed curtains of thine eye advance

And say, what thou seesst yond'.

Miranda.

What is't? a spirit?

Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,

It carries a brave form:—but 'tis a spirit.

Prospero.

No, wench: it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses

As we have; such. This gallant, which thou

Was in the wreck; and, but he's something stain'd

[call him

With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st

A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows,

And strays about to find 'em.

Miranda.

I might call him

A thing divine, for nothing natural

I ever saw so noble.

Prospero.

[Aside.

It goes on, I see,

As my soul prompts it.—Spirit, fine spirit! I'll Within two days for this.

[Fread thee

Ferdinand.

Most sure, the goddess

On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer

May know if you remain upon this Island,

And that you will some good instruction give,

How I may bear me here: my prime request,

Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!

If you be maid, or no?

Miranda.

No wonder, sir;

But, certainly a maid.

Ferdinand.

My language! heavens!—

I am the best of them that speak this speech,

Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Prospero.

How! the best?

What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard thee?

Ferdinand.

A single thing, as I am now, that wonders

To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me,

And
THE TEMPEST.

ACT II, SC. 1.

And that he does I weep: myself am Naples: Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld The king, my father, wreck'd.

Miranda.
Alack, for mercy!

Ferdinand.
Yes, faith, and all his lords; the duke of Milan, And his brave son, being twain.

Prospero.
The duke of Milan, And his more braver daughter, could control thee, If now 'twere fit to do't.— [Aside.
They have chang'd eyes:—delicate Ariel, I'll set thee free for this!—
[To him.
A word, good sir; I fear, you have done yourself some wrong: a word.

Miranda.
Why speaks my father so angrily? This Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first That e'er I sigh'd for. Pity move my father To be inclin'd my way!

Ferdinand.
O! if a virgin, And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you The queen of Naples.

Prospero.
Soft, sir: one word more.— [Aside.
They are both in either's powers: but this swift business I must uneasy make, lest too light winning Make the prize light.— [To him.
One word more: I charge thee, That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself Upon this island as a spy, to win it From me the lord on't.

Ferdinand.
No, as I am a man.

Miranda.
There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple: If the ill spirit have so fair a house, Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Prospero.
Follow me.— [To Ferdinand.
Speak not you for him; he's a traitor—Come. I'll manacle thy neck and feet together; Sea-water shalt thou drink, thy food shall be The fresh brook muscles, wither'd roots, and Wherewith the scorched raddles. Follow. [Exeunt.

Ferdinand.
No; I will resist such entertainment, till Mine enemy has more power.
[He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Miranda.
O, dear father! Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle, and not fearful.

Prospero.
What, what! My foot my tutor?—Put thy sword up, traitor; Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward, For I can here disarm thee with this stick, And make thy weapon drop.

Miranda.
Beseech you, father!

Prospero.
Hence! hang not on my garments.

Miranda.
Sir, have pity:

Prospero.
Silence! one word more [What! Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. An advocate for an impostor? hush! [he Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as Having seen but him and Caliban: foolish wench! To the most of men this is a Caliban, And they to him are angels...

Miranda.
My affections Are then most humble: I have no ambition To see a goodlier man.

Prospero.
[To Ferdinand.
Come on; obey: Thy nerves are in their infancy again, And have no vigour in them.

Ferdinand.
So they are: My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up. My father's loss, the weakness which I feel, The wreck of all my friends, or this man's threats, To whom I am subdued, are but light to me, Might I but through my prison once a day Behold this maid: all corners else o' th' earth Let liberty make use of; space enough Have I in such a prison.

Prospero.
It works.—Come on.— Thou hast done well, fine Ariel!—Follow me.—
[To Ferdinand and Miranda.
Hark, what thou else shalt do me.
[To Ariel.

Miranda.
Be of comfort. My father's of a better nature, sir, Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted, Which now came from him.

Prospero.
Thou shalt be as free As mountain winds; but then, exactly do All points of my command.

Ariel.
To the syllable.

Prospero.
Come, follow.—Speak not for him. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE 1. Another Part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francis, and Others. Gonzalo.

Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have cause (So have we all) of joy, for our escape Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe Is common: every day, some sailor's wife, Themasters of some merchant, and the merchant, Have just our theme of woe; but for the miracle, I mean our preservation, few in millions Can speak like us: then, wisely, good sir, weigh Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alonso.
Prythee peace.

Sebastian.

Sebastian.
I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

Antonio.
And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gonzalo.
Ay?
Antonio.

Why, in good time.

Gonzalo.
Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh, as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Antonio.
And the rarest that e'er came there.

Sebastian.
'Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Antonio.
O! widow Dido; ay, widow Dido.

Gonzalo.
Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Antonio.
That sort was well fish'd for.

Gonzalo.
When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?

Alonso.
You cram these words into mine ears, against The stomach of my sense. Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rage, she too, Who is so far from Italy removed,
I ne'er again shall see her. O thou, mine heir Of Naples and of Milan! what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?

Francisco.
Sir, he may live. I saw him beat the surges under him, And ride upon their backs: he trod the water, Whose enmity he flung aside, and breathed The surge most swoln that met him: his bold head Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd, As stooping to relieve him. I, not doubt, He came alive to land.

Alonso.
No, no; he's gone.

Sebastian.
Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss That would not bless our Europe with your But rather lose her to an African; [daughter, Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Alonso.

Sebastian. Pr'ythee, peace.

You were kneel'd to, and importun'd other-by all of us; and the fair soul herself [wise Weigh'd, between lothness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she'd bow. We have lost your son. I fear, for ever; Milan and Naples have More widows in them, of this business making, Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's Your own.

Alonso.
So is the dearest of the loss.
THE TEMPEST.

ACT II. Sc. L

Antonio.

'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gonzalo.

Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Antonio.

What a blow was there given!

Sebastian.

An it had not fallen flat-long.

Gonzalo.

You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without chang-ing.

Enter Ariel invisible, playing solemn music.

Sebastian.

We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.

Antonio.

Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Sebastian.

No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?

Antonio.

Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep but Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio.]

Alonso.

What! all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts:
They are inclin'd to do so. [I find,

Sebastian.]

Please you, sir,

Do not omit the heavy offer of it;
It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth,
it is a comforter.

Antonio.

We two, my lord, [rest,
Will guard your person while you take your
And watch your safety.

Alonso.

Thank you. Wondrous heavy.—
[Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.

Sebastian.

What a strange drowsiness possesses them!

Antonio.

It is the quality o' the climate.

Sebastian.

Why

Doth it not, then, our eye-lids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.

Antonio.

Nor I: my spirits are nimble.

They fell together all, as by consent; [might,
The yellopp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What Worthy Sebastian? — O! what might? — No more: —
And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be. Th' occasion speaks
My strong imagination sees a crown [thee, and Dropping upon thy head.

Sebastian.

What, art thou waking?

Antonio.

Do you not hear me speak?

Sebastian.

I do; and, surely,
It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking,
And yet so fast asleep. [moving,

Antonio.

Noble Sebastian,

Thou let'st thy fortune sleep — die rather;
While's thou art waking. [wink'st

Sebastian.

Thou dost snore distinctly.

There's meaning in thy snores.

Antonio.

I am more serious than my custom: you
Must be so too, if heed me; which to do,
Treble thee o'er.

Sebastian.

Well, I am standing water.

Antonio.

I'll teach you how to flow.

Sebastian.

Do so: to ebb
Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Antonio.

O!

If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish,
While's thus you mock it! how, in stripping it,
You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed,
Most often do so near the bottom run
By their own fear, or sloth.

Sebastian.

Pry'thee, say on.

The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which throes thee much to yield.

Antonio.

Thus, sir,
Although this lord of weak remembrance, this (Who shall be of as little memory,
When he is earth'd) hath here almost persuaded (For he's a spirit of persuasion, only Professes to persuade) the king, his son's alive,
"Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd,
As he that sleeps here, swims.

Sebastian.

I have no hope
That he's undrown'd.

Antonio.

O! out of that no hope,
What great hope have you! no hope, that way,
Another way so high a hope, that even [is Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubts discovery there. Will you grant,
That Ferdinand is drown'd? [with me,

Sebastian.

He's gone.

Antonio.

Then, tell me,
Who's the next heir of Naples?

Sebastian.

Claribel.

Antonio.

She that is queen of Tunis; she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that from Naples
Can have no note, unless the sun were post,
(The man! the moon's too slow) till new-born chins
Be rough and razonable; she, from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast
And by that destiny to perform an act, [again;
Whereof what's past is prologue, what to come,
In yours and my discharge.

Sebastian.

What stuff is this! — How say you?
'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis;
So is she heir of Naples; 'twixt which regions there is some space.

Antonio.

A space whose every cubit seems to cry out, "How shall that Claribel Measure us back to Naples?"—Keep in Tunis, and let Sebastian wake!—Say, this were death That now hath seized them; why, they were no worse

Then we are there. There be, that can rule As well as he that sleeps; lords that can prate As amply and unnecessarily, As this Gonzalo; I myself could make A cloudburst of as deep chat. O, that you bore The mind that I do! what a sleep were this For your advancement! Do you understand me?

Sebastian.

Methinks, I do.

Antonio.

And how do your content Tender your own good fortune?

Sebastian.

I remember, You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Antonio.

True:

And look how well my garments sit upon me; Much farther than before. My brother's servants Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Sebastian.

But, for your conscience—

Antonio.

Ay, sir; where lies that? if 'twere a kybe, 'Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not This deity in my bosom: twenty consciences, That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they, [brother, And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your No better than the earth lie upon him, If he were that which now he's like, that's dead, Whom I, with this obdulent steel, three inches Of it, Can lay to bed for ever; whilsts you, doing thus, To the perpetual wince for aye might put This ancient morsel, this sir Prudence, Who should not upbraud our course: for all the rest, They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk; They'll tell the clock to any business that We say before the hour.

Sebastian.

Thy case, dear friend, Shall be my precedent: as thou got'st Milan, I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke [pay'st, Shall free thee from the tribute which thou And I the king shall love thee.

Antonio.

Draw together, And when I rear my hand, do you the like, To fall it on Gonzalo.

Sebastian.

O! but one word. [They converse apart.

Music. Re-enter Ariel, invisible.

Ariel.

My master through his art foresees the danger That you, his friend, are in; and sends me forth (For else his project dies) to keep them living. [Sings in Gonzalo's ear.

While you here do snoring lie, Open-ey'd conspiracy His time doth take. If of life you keep a care, Shake off slumber, and beware: Awake! Awake!

Antonio.

Then, let us both be suddenly.

Gonzalo.

Now, good angels, preserve the king!

[They wake.

Alonso.

Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you Wherefore this ghastly looking? [drawn?

Gonzalo.

What's the matter?

Sebastian.

While we stood here securing your repose, Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing Like bulls, or rather lions: did it not wake you? It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alonso.

I heard nothing.

Antonio.

O! 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear, To make an earthquake: sure, it was the roar Of a whole herd of lions.

Alonso.

Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gonzalo.

Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming, And that a strange one too, which did Awake I shak'd you, sir, and cry'd; as mine eyes open'd, I saw their weapons drawn.—There was a noise, That's veryly: 'tis best we stand upon our guard, Or that we quit this place. Let's draw our weapons.

Alonso.

Lead off this ground, and let's make farther For my poor son. [search

Gonzalo.

Heavens keep him from these beasts, For he is sure, 'tis the Island.

Alonso.

Lead away. [Exeunt.

Ariel.

Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done: So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exit.

SCENE II. Another part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

Caliban.

All the inferences that the sun sucks up From boggs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me, And yet I needs must curse; but they'll nor pinch. [mire, Fright me with urchin shows, pitch me I the Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but For every trible are they set upon me: [me, Sometimes like aeges, that moe and chatter at And after, bite me; then like hedge-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my bare-foot way, and mount Their pricks at my foot-fall: sometime am I All wound with adders, who with clowen tongues Do hisse me into madness.—Lo, now! lo!
Trinculo.
Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' the wind; yond' same black cloud, yond' huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond' same cloud cannot choose but fall by palfies. — What have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, (as once I was) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Leg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt. [Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberline; there is no other shelter hereabout: misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Stephano singing; a bottle in his hand.

Stephano. I shall no more to sea, to sea, Here shall I die a-shore.—
This is a very scurry tune to sing at a man's funeral. Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]
The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I, The gunner, and his mate, Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Martan, and Margery, But none of us care'd for Kate; For she had a tongue with a tang, Would cry to a sailor, Go hang: She lov'd not the savour of tar, nor of pitch, Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch; Then, to sea, boys, and let her go hang.
This is a scurry tune too; but here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

Caliban. Do not torment me: O! Stephano.

What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of India? Ha! I have not 'scap'd drowning, to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said, as proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground, and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Caliban. The spirit torments me: O! Stephano. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Caliban. Do not torment me, pr'ythee: I'll bring my wood home faster.

Stephano. He's in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Caliban. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: now Prosper works upon thee.

Stephano. Come on your ways: open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth: this will shake your shakings. I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Trinculo. I should know that voice. It should be—but he is drowned, and these are devils. O I defend me!—

Stephano. Four legs, and two voices! a most delicate monster. His forward voice, now, is to speak well of his friend: his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to make them. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help hisague. Come,—Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trinculo.

Stephano! Stephano.

Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Stephano!—if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me, for I am Trinculo:—be not afraid,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Stephano. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth. I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed! How canst thou be the sighe of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos? Trinculo. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke. —But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberline for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano! O two Neapolitans 'scap'd?

Stephano. P'rythee, do not turn me about: my stomach is not constant.

Caliban. These be fine things, an if they be not sprites. That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Stephano. How didst thou 'scap? How camest thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved over-board, by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast a-shore.

Caliban. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy true subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Stephano. Here: swear, then, how thou escap'dst.

Swam a-shore, man, like a duck. I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.
THE TEMPEST.

ACT III. Sc. 1.

Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Philo. O Stephano! hast any more of this?

The whole butt, man: my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf! how does thine age?

Caliban. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Philo. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Caliban. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee: my mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Philo. Come, swear to that; kiss the book: I will furnish it anon with new contents: swear.

Trinculo. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster:—I fear'd of him!—a very weak monster.—The man i' the moon!—a most poor credulous monster.—Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Caliban. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island; And I will kiss thy foot. I pr'ythee, be my god.

Trinculo. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster: when his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Caliban. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Trinculo. Come on, then; down, and swear.

I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster: I could find in my heart to beat him, —

Come, kiss.

Trinculo. —But that the poor monster's in drink. An abominable monster!

Caliban. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries; I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.
A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man!

Trinculo. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

Caliban. I pr'ythee, let me bring thee where crabs grow; And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts; Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmozet: I'll bring thee To clustering libeirs, and sometimes I'll get thee [with me? Young scameas from the rock: Wilt thou go Trinculo. I pr'ythee now, lead the way, without any more talking. —Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here. —Here; bear my bottle. —Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Caliban. Farewell, master; farewell, farewell. [Sings drunkenly.

Trinculo. A howling monster; a drunken monster.

Caliban. No more damn'd I'll make for fish; Nor fetch in firing At requiring, Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish; 'Bau, 'Bau, Caliban, Has a new master — Get a new man.
Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom! hey-day! freedom!

Trinculo. O brave monster! lead the way. [Exeunt.
Prospero.

Poor worm! thou art infected;
This visitation shows it.

Miranda.

You look earily.

Ferdinand.

No, noble mistress; 'tis fresh morning with me,
When you are by at night. I do beseech you,
Chieflly that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name?

Miranda.

Miranda. — O my father!
I have broke your hest to say so.

Ferdinand.

Indeed the top of admiration; worth
What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
I have ey'd with best regard; and many a time
The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues
Have I lik'd several women; never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd,
And put it to the toil: but you, O you!
So perfect, and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best.

Miranda.

I do not know
One of my sex; no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen
More that I may call men, than you, good
And my dear father: how features are abroad,
I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty,
(The jewl in my dower) I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of. But I prattle
Something too wildly, and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.

Ferdinand.

I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king;
(I would, not so); and would no more endure
This wooden slavery, than to suffer [speak:
The flesh-fly blow my mouth. — Hear my soul
The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart fly to your service; there resides,
To make me slave to it; and for your sake,
Am I this patient log-man.

Miranda.

Do you love me?

Ferdinand.

O heaven! O earth! hear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event,
If I speak true; if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief! I,
Beyond all limit of what else I the world,
Do love, prize, honour you.

Miranda.

I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.

Prospero.

Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain
On that which breeds between them! [Grace
Ferdinand.

Wherefore weep you?

Miranda.

At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take,
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself,

The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.

Ferdinand.

My mistress, dearest,
And I thus humble ever.

Miranda.

My husband then?

Ferdinand.

Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.

Miranda.

And mine, with my heart in't: and now farewell,
Till half an hour hence. [Exit.

Ferdinand.

A thousand thousand!

[Exeunt Ferdinand and Miranda.

Prospero.

So glad of this as they, I cannot be,
Who are surpris'd with all; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
For yet, ere supper time, must I perform
Much business appertaining.

SCENE II. Another part of the Island.

Enter Stephano and Trinculo; Caliban following with a bottle.

Stephano.

Tell not me: — when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em. — Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trinculo.

Servant-monster! the folly of this island! They say, there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Stephano.

Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee: thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trinculo.

Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tall.

Stephano.

My man-monster hath drown'd his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me: I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light. — Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trinculo.

Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no standard.

Stephano.

We'll not run, monsieur monster.

Trinculo.

Nor go neither; but you'll lie, like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

Stephano.

Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

Caliban.

How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trinculo.

Thou liest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justle a constable. Why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever man a coward, that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster?

Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trinculo.

Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I pr'ythee.

Stephano.

Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: if you prove a mutineer, the next tree—The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Caliban.

I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Stephano.

Marry will I; kneel and repeat it: I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, Invisible.

Ariell.

As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant; a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island.

Thou liest.

Caliban.

Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou; I would, my valiant master would destroy thee: I do not lie.

Stephano.

Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Why, I said nothing.

Stephano.

Mum, then, and no more. —

To Caliban.

Caliban.

I say by sorcery he got this isle; From me he got it: if thy greatness will, Revenge on it him—for, I know, thou dar'st; But this thing dare not.

Stephano.

That's most certain.

Caliban.

Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Stephano.

How, now, shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Caliban.

Yea, yea, my lord: I'll yield him thee asleep, Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.

Ariel.

Thou liest; thou canst not.

Caliban.

What a pied ninny's this! Thou scurvy patch! I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows, And take his bottle from him: when that's gone He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not Where the quick freshes are. — [show him

Stephano.

Trinculo, run into no farther danger: interrupt the monster one word farther, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trinculo.

Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go farther off.

Stephano.

Didst thou not say, he lied?

Thou liest.

Ariel.

Stephano.

Do I so? take thou that. — [Strikes him.

As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trinculo.

I did not give the lie.— Out o' your wits, and hearing too? — A pox o' your bottle! this can sack, and drinking do.— A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Caliban.

Ha, ha, ha!

Stephano.

Now, forward with your tale. Pr'ythee stand farther off.

Caliban.

Beat him enough: after a little time, I'll beat him too.

Stephano.

Stand farther.— Come, proceed.

Caliban.

Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him late the afternoon to sleep; there thou mayest brain Having first seiz'd his books; or with a log [him, Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake, Or cut his weazend with thy knife. Remember, First to possess his books; for without them He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not One spirit to command: they all do hate him, As rootedly as I. Burn but his books: He has brave utensils, (for so he calls them). Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal. And that most deeply to consider is The beauty of his daughter; he himself Calls her a nonpareil: I never saw a woman, But only Sycorax my dam, and she; But she as far surpasseth Sycorax, As great'st doer least.

Stephano.

Is it so brave a lass?

Caliban.

Ay, lord: she will become thy bed, I warrant, And bring thee forth brave brood.

Stephano.

Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will be king and queen: (save our graces) and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys.— Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

Trinculo.

Excellent.

Stephano.

Give me thy hand: I am sorry I beat thee; but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head.

Caliban.

Within this half hour will he be asleep; Wilt thou destroy him then?

Stephano.

Ay, on mine honour.

Ariel.

This will I tell my master.

Caliban.

Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure. Let us be jocund: will you twoll the catch You taught me but while-ere?

Stephano.

At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings.

Flout 'em, and skout 'em; and skout 'em, and skout 'em; Thought is free.

Caliban
Caliban.
That's not the tune.
[Strid plays the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.
Stephano.
What is this same?
Trinculo.
This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of No-body.
Stephano.
If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a devil, take'st as thou list.
Trinculo.
O, forgive me my sins!
He that dies, pays all debts: I defy thee. —Mercy upon us!
Caliban.
Art thou afraid?
Stephano.
No, monster, not I.
Be not afraid; the Isle is full of noises, Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments Will hum about mine ears; and sometime voices, That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep, ing, Will make me sleep again: and then, In dreams—The clouds, methought, would open, and show riches Ready to drop upon me, that when I wak'd I cry'd to dream again.
Stephano.
This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.
Caliban.
When Prospero is destroyed.
Stephano.
That shall be by and by: I remember the story.
Trinculo.
The sound is going away: let's follow it, and after do our work.
Stephano.
Lead, monster; we'll follow. —I would, I could see this taborer: he lays it on.
Trinculo.
Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another part of the Island.
Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and Others.

Gonzalo.
By'r la'kin, I can go no farther, sir; My old bones ake: here's a maze trod, indeed, Through forth-rights, and meander'd by your I needs must rest me. [Patience,
Alonso.
Old lord, I cannot blame thee, Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To the dulling of my spirits: sit down, and rest. Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd, Whom thus we stray to find; and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

Antonio.
I am right glad that he's so out of hope.
[Aside to Sebastian.
Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose That you resolv'd to effect.

Sebastian.
The next advantage
Will we take thoroughly.

Antonio.
Let it be to-night;
For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance, As when they are fresh.

Sebastian.
I say, to-night: no more.
[Solemn and strange music; and Prospero above, invisible. Enter several strange shapes, bringing in a banquet: they dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, and, inviting the King, &c. to eat, they depart.]

Alonso.
What harmony is this? my good friends, hark!

Gonzalo.
Marvellous sweet music!

Alonso.
Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

Sebastian.
A living drollery. Now I will believe That there are unicorns; that in Arabia There is one tree, the phoenix' throne; one At this hour reigning there. [Phoenix

Antonio.
I'll believe both; And what does else want credit, come to me, And I'll be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did Though fools at home condemn them. [Ile,

Gonzalo.
If in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? If I should say, I saw such islanders, (For, certes, these are people of the island) Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note, Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any.

Prospero.
[Aside.
Honest lord, Thou hast said well; for some of you there Are worse than devils. [present,

Alonso.
I cannot too much muse, Such shape, such gesture, and such sound, ex-pressing (Although they want the use of tongue) a kind Of excellent dumb discourse.

Prospero.
[Aside.
Praise in departing.

Francisco.
They vanish'd strangely.

Sebastian.
No matter, since They have left their viands behind, for we have stomachs.— Will't please you taste of what is here?

Alonso.
Not I.

Gonzalo.
Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys, Who would believe that there were mountaineers Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hang-ing at them
-Wallets
Walsets of flesh? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find,
Each puffer of one for five will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alonso

I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last: no matter, since I feel
The best is past.—Brother, my lord the duke,
Stand to, and do as we.

[Thunder and lightning. Enter Ariel like a harpy, claps his wings upon the table, and,
with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ariel.

You are three men of sin, whom destiny
(That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't) the never-surfeted sea
Hath caused to be ship washing, and on this island
Where man doth not inhabit: you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;

[Seeing Alonso, Sebastian, &c. draw their swords.
And even with such like valour men hang and
Their proper selves. You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of fate: the elements,
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
One dot he's that's in my plume: my fellow-ministers
Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,
And will not be uplifted. But, remember,
(For that's my business to you) that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero;
Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requity'd,
Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed
The powers, delaying not forgetting, have Incend's the sea shores, and yea, all the creatures,
Against your peace. Thee, of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft; and do pronounce, by me,
Lingering perdition (worse than any death
Can be at once) shall step by step attend
You, and your ways; whose wrath is to guard you (Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls Upon your heads) is nothing, but heart's sorrow,
And a clear life ensuing.

[He vanishes in thunder.
[Aside,
Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou
Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring.
Of my Instruction hast thou nothing 'd,
In what thou hast to say: so, with good life
And observation strange, my meager ministers
Their several kinds have done. My high charms
And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions: they now are in my power;
And in these slips I leave them, while I visit Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is
And his and my lov'd darling.

[Grown,

Prospero.

The name of Prosper : it did base my trespass.
Therefore my son i' the ooze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,
And with him there lie muddied.

Sebastian.

But one stand at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.

Antonio.

I'll be thy second.

[Exeunt Sebastian and Antonio.

Gonzalo.

All three of them are desperate; their great guilt,
Like poison given to work a great time after,
Now 'gin to bite the spirits.—I do beseech you,
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.

Adrian.

Follow I pray you.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1. Before Prospero's cell.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Prospero.

If I have too austerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends; for I
Have given you here a thread of mine own life,
Or that for which I live; whom once again
I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand!
Do not smile at me that I bestow her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
And make it half behind her.

Ferdinand.

I do believe it,
Against an oracle.

Prospero.

Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchased, take my daughter: but If thou dost break her virgin knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may,
With full and holy rite, be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barren hate,
Sour-ey'd disdain, and discord, shall bestrew
The union of thy bed with weeds so loathly,
That you shall hate it both: therefore, take
As Hymen's lamp shall light you. [heed,
Ferdinand.

As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 'tis now, the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st sugges-
Our worse genius can, shall never melt [Elion
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that day's celebration, [founder'd,
When I shall think, or Phæbus' steeds are
Or night kept chained below.

Prospero.

Fairly spoke.

Sit then, and talk with her; she is thine own—
What, Ariel? my industrious servant Ariel?

Enter Ariel.

Ariel.

What would my potent master? here I am.

Prospero.

...
Prospero.

Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
Did worthily perform, and I must use you
In such another trick. Go, bring the rabble,
O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place:
Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art: it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ariel.

Presently?

Prospero.

Ay, with a twinkle.

Ariel.

Before you can say, "Come," and "No,"
And breathe twice; and cry, "So, so, so, so, so;
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mopew.
Do you love me, master? no?

Prospero.

Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach,
Till thou dost hear me call.

Ariel.

Well, I conceive. [Exit.

Prospero.

Look thou be true. Do not give dalliance
Too much the rein: the strongest oats are straw
To the fire! the blood. Be more abstemious,
Or else, good night, your vow.

Ferdinand.

I warrant you, sir; the white-cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver.

Prospero.

Well.—

Now come, my Ariel! bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit: appear, and softly,
No tongue, all eyes; be silent.

A masque. Enter Iris.

Iris.

Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich loss
Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and peas;
Thy turfey mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep;
Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims,
Which spongy April at thy heat restrains,
To make cold nymphs chaste crowned; and thy Brookes groves,
Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being last-born; thy pole-clipt vineyard;
And thy sea-marsh, sterly, and rocky-hard, [sky,
Where thou thyself dost air; the queen o' the Whose watery arch and messenger am I, [grace,
Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign
Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport. Her peacocks fly amain:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

Ceres.

Hall, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who with thy saffron wings upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrubb'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth; why hath thy queen
Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris.

A contract of true love to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the blessed lovers.
Enter certain Nymphs.
You sun-born’d sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry.
Make holy-day: your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

[Enter certain Reapers, properly habited:
they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end wherein Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which,
to a strange, hollow, and confused noise,
they heavily vanish.

Prospero.
I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates, Against my life; the minute of their plot is almost come.—

[To the Spirits.
Well done.—Avoid;—no more.

Ferdinand.
This is strange: your father’s in some passion
That works him strongly.

Miranda.
Never till this day,
Saw I him touch’d with anger so distemper’d.

Prospero.
You do look, my son, in a mov’d sort,
As if you were dismay’d: be cheerful, sir,
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp’d towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex’d:
Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled:
Be not disturb’d with my infirmity.
If you be pleas’d retire into my cell,
And there repose: a turn or two I’ll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Ferdinand, Miranda.
We wish your peace. [Exeunt

Prospero.
Come with a thought!—I thank thee. —Ariel, come!

Enter Ariel.
Ariel.
Thy thoughts I cleave to. What’s thy pleasure?

Prospero.
Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.
Ariel.
Ay, my commander: when I presented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear’d,
Lest I might anger thee.

Prospero.
Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ariel.
I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drink—
So full of valour, that they smote the air [jing:
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet, yet always bending
Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor;
At which, like unback’d colts, they prick’d their ears,

Advanc’d their eye-lids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music; so I charm’d their ears,
That, calf-like, they my loving follow’d, through Tooth’d briers, sharp furzes, pricking gorge, and thorns, [them
Which enter’d their frail shins: at last I left
I’ the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There duncing up to the chins, that the foul
O’erstunk their feet. [lake

Prospero.
This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, go, bring it hither,
For state to catch these thieves.

Ariel.
I go, I go. [Exit

Prospero.
A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,

Re-enter Ariel, loaden with glistening apparel, &c.

Even to roaring.—Come, hang them on this line,
Prospero and Ariel remain unseen. Enter
Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Caliban.
Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may Hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell. [not

Stephano.
Monster, your fairy, which, you say, is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trinculo.
Monster, I do smell all horse-piss, at which my noe is in great indignation.

Stephano.
So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you; look you,—

Trinculo.
Thou wart but a lost monster.

Caliban.
Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
Be patient, for the prize I’ll bring thee to Shall hood-wink this mischance: therefore, speak
All’s hush’d as midnight yet. [softly;

Trinculo.
Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Stephano.
There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trinculo.
That’s more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Stephano.
I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o’er cars for my labour.

Caliban.
Pr’ythee, my king, be quiet. Scest thou here,
This is the mouth o’ the cell: no noise, and enter:
Do that good mischief, which may make this Theine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban, [island
For aye thy foot-licker.

Stephano.
Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trinculo.
O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is for thee.
Caliban.
Let it alone, thou fool: it is but trash.

Trinculo.
O, ho, monster! we know what belongs to a frippery:—O king Stephano!

Stephano.

Put off that gown, Trinculo: by this hand, I'll have that gown.

Trinculo.
Thy grace shall have it.

Caliban.
The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean,
To do that on such luggage? Let 't alone,
And do the murder first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with Make us strange stuff. [pinches;]

Stephano.
Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line: now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trinculo.
Do, do: we steal by line and level, and't like your grace.

Stephano.
I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for' th: wit shall not go unrewarded, while I am king of this country. "Steal by line and level," is an excellent pass of plate; there's another garment for't.

Trinculo.
Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers; find away with the rest.

Caliban.
I will have none on't: we shall lose our time,
And all be turn'd to barnacules, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

Stephano.
Monster, lay-to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hog's head of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to; carry this.

Trinculo.
And this.

Stephano.
Ay, and this.

[A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirtis, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about; Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Prospero.
Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ariel.
Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Prospero.
Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark!

[Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo are driven out.

Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make Than pard, or cat o' mountain. [them.

Ariel.
Hark! they roar.

Prospero.
Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour
Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:

Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou
Shalt have the air at freedom: for a little,
Follow, and do me service. [Exeunt;]
With his own bolt: the strong bas'd promontory
I have made sake; and by the spurs pluck'd up
The pine and cedar: graves, at my command,
Have waked their sleepers; oped, and let them forth
By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure; and, when I have requir'd
Some heavenly music, (which even now I do)
To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drown my book.

[Re-enter Ariel.]

Ariel. After him, Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains, [stand,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There
For you are spell-stopp'd.—
Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sochalie to the show of thine,
Fall fellowiy drops.—The charm dissolves apace;
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. — O good Gonzalo!
My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy grace
Home, both in word and deed. —Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act; —
Thou't pinch'd for't now, Sebastian. — Flesh
And blood,
You brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with, Sebastian, (Whose inward pinches therefore are most Would here have kill'd thy king; I do forgive these Unnatural, though thou art. —Their understand-
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores,
That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them,
That yet looks on, or would know me. — Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapiers in my case.

I will dis-case me, and myself present,
As I was sometime Milan. — Quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt be long be free.

Ariel re-enters, singing, and helps to attire Prospero. Ariel.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I;
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch, when owls do cry:
On the bat's back I do fly,
After summer, merrily;
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now
Under the blossoms that hangs on the bough.

Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee;
But yet thou shalt have freedom: — so, so, so. —
To the king's ship, Invisible as thou art:
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches; the master, and the boat-
Being awake, enforce them to this place, [swain,
And presently, I pr'ythee.

Ariel.

I drink the air before me, and return
Or d'er your pulse twice beat.

[Exit Ariel.]

Gonzalo.

All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabit here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!

Prospero.

Behold, sir king,
The wronged duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
And to thee, and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alonso.

Who'rt thou heest he, or no,
Or some enchanted tribue to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse
Beats as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave
(An if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign: and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. — But how should Be living, and be here?

Prospero.

First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measur'd, or confin'd.
Gonzalo.

Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.

Prospero.

You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain. — Welcome, my friends
all.
But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded;
[Aside to Sebastian and Antonio.
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.

Sebastian.

[Aside.]
The devil speaks in him.

Prospero.

No.

For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault; all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforse, I know,
Thou must restore.

Alonso.

If thou best Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation: [since
How thou hast met us here, who three hours
Were streak'd upon this shore; where I have lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!)
My dear son Ferdinand.

Prospero.

I am woe for't, sir.

Alonso.

Irrepiable is the loss, and patience
Says it is past her cure.

Prospero.

I rather think, [grace,
You have not sought her help; of whose soft
For the like less I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.

Alonso.

You the like loss?

Prospero.

As great to me, as late; and, supportable
To make the dear loss, I have I means much weaker

[Exit.]

[Aside.]

[This scene conceals the duke's conversion and the spirit's departure.]

[Exit.]
Than you may call to comfort you, for I Have lost my daughter.

Alonso.

A daughter?

O heavens! that they were living both in Naples, The king and queen there! that they were, I wish Myself were muddied in that oozy bed Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

Prospero.

In this last Tempest. I perceive, these lords At this encounter do so much admire, That they devouer their reason, and scarce think Their eyes do offices of truth, their words Are natural breath; but, howsoever you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain, That I am Prospero, and that very duke Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely landed, Upon this shore, where you were wrack’d, was To be the lord on’t. No more yet of this; For ‘tis a chronicle of day by day, Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Beditting this first meeting. Welcome, sir, This cell’s my court: here have I few attendants, And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in. My dukedom since you have given me again, I will requite you with as good a thing; At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye As much as me my dukedom.

The scene opens, and discovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

The scene opens, and discovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Miranda.

Sweet lord, you play me false.

Ferdinand.

No, my dearest love,

I would not for the world.

Miranda.

Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should And I would call it fair play. [wrangle,

Alonso.

If this prove

A vision of the island, one dear son Shall I twice lose.

Sebastian.

A most high miracle!

Ferdinand.

Though the seas threaten they are merciful: I have curs’d them without cause.

[Miranda kneels to Alonso.

Alonso.

Now, all the blessings Of a glad father compass thee about! Arise, and say how thou canst here.

Miranda.

O, wonder! How many goodly creatures are there here! How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world, That has such people in’t!

Prospero.

’Tis now to thee.

Alonso.

What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?

Your el’d acquaintance cannot be three hours: Is she the goddess that hath sever’d us, And brought us thus together?

Ferdinand.

Sir, she is mortal:

But, by immortal providence, she’s mine: I chose her, when I could not ask my father For his advice, nor thought I had one. She Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,

Of whom so often I have heard renown, But never saw before; of whom I have Received a second life, and second father This lady makes him to me.

Alonso.

I am hers. But O! how oddly will it sound, that I Must ask my child forgiveness.

Prospero.

There, sir, stop: Let us not burden our remembrances With a heaviness that’s gone.

Gonzalo.

I have inly wept, Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you And on this couple drop a blessed crown; [gods, For it is you that have chalk’d forth the way, Which brought us hither!

Alonso.

I say, Amen, Gonzalo.

Gonzalo.

Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue Should become kings of Naples? O! rejoice Beyond a common joy, and set it down With gold on lasting pillars. In one voyage Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis: And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife, Where he himself was lost; Prospero his duke— In a poor isle; and all of us, ourselves, [dom, When no man was his own.

Alonso.

Give me your hands: [To Ferdinand and Miranda.

Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart, That doth not wish you joy! Gonzalo.

Be it so: Amen.

Re-enter Ariel, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir! look, sir! here are more of us. I prophesied, if a gallowes were on land, This fellow could not drown.—Now, blasphemy, That swear’st grace o’erboard, not an oath on shore? [news? Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the Boatswain.

The best news is, that we have safely found Our kindred and company: the next our ship, Which but three glasses since we gave out split, Is tight and yare, and bravely rigg’d, as when We first put out to sea.

Ariel.

Sir, all this service Have I done since I went.

Prospero.

My tricksy spirit!

Alonso.

These are not natural events; they strengthen From strange to stranger.—Say, how came you hither?

Boatswain.

If I did think, sir, I were well awake, I’d strive to tell you. We were dead o’ sleep, And (how we know not) all clapp’d under hatches, [noises Where, but even now, with strange and several Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains, And more diversity of sounds, all horrible, We were awak’d: straightway at liberty: Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld Our royal, good, and gallant ship; our master Caperling to eye her: on a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them, And were brought moping hither.

Ariel. [Aside.]
Was't well done?

Prospero. [Aside.]
Bravely, my diligence! Thou shalt be free.

Alonso. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod; And there is in this business more than nature Was ever conduct of; some oracle Must rectify our knowledge.

Prospero. Sir, my liege, Do not infest your mind with beating on The strangeness of this business: at pick'd leisure, Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable) of every These happen'd accidents; till when, be cheerful, And think of each thing well.— Come hither, spirit; [Aside.
Set Caliban and his companions free; Untie the spell. How fares my gracious sir? There are yet missing of your company Some few odd lads, that you remember not.

Re-enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their stolen apparel. Stephano. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune. — Coraggio! bully-monster, coraggio! Trinculo. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goody sight. Caliban. O Setebos! these be brave spirits, indeed. How fine my master is! I am afraid He will chastise me. Sebastian. Ha, ha! What things are these, my lord Antonio? Will money buy them? Antonio. Very like: one of them Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable. Prospero. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords, Then say, if they be true.—This mis-shapen knave, His mother was a witch; and one so strong That could control the moon, make flows and ebb's, And deal in her command, without her power. These three have robb'd me; and this demil-devil (For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them To take my life: two of these fellows you Must know, and own; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Caliban. I shall be pinch'd to death. Alonso. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler? Sebastian. He is drunk now: where had he wine? Alonso. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em?— How can't thou in this pickle?

Trinculo.
I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, I shall never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Why, how now, Stephano?

Stephano. O I touch me not: I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Prospero. You'd be king of the isle, sirrah?

Stephano. I should have been a sore one then.

Alonso. This is a strange thing as 'er I look'd on. [Pointing to Caliban]

Prospero. He is as disproportioned in his manners, As in his shape.—Go, sirrah, to my cell; Take with you your companions: as you look To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Caliban. Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise thereafter, And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass Was I, to take this drunkard for a god, And worship this dull fool?

Prospero. Go to; away!

Alonso. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Sebastian. Or stol'n; it rather. [Exeunt Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.]

Prospero. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train, To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest For this one night; which, part of it, I'll waste With such discourse, as, I not doubt, shall make Go quick away; the story of my life. [It And the particular accidents gone by, Since I came to this isle: and in the morn, I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples, Where I have hope to see the nuptial Of these our dear-beloved sovereign's; And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alonso. I long To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Prospero. I'll deliver all; And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales, And sail, so expeditious, that shall catch Your royal fleet far off. —My Ariel; —chick, — That is thy charge: then, to the elements; Be free, and fare thou well! — Please you draw near. [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

SPOKEN BY PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown, And what strength I have's mine own; Which is most faint: now, 'tis true, I must be here confin'd by you, Or sent to Naples. Let me not, Since I have my dukedom got,
Two Gentlemen of Verona.

ACT I. Sc. I.

Enter Valentine and Proteus.

Valentine. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus: Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits. We'll not, affection chains thy tender days To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love, I rather would entreat thy company To see the wonders of the world abroad, Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home, Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. But since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive Even as I would, when I to love begin. (Therein, Proteus.

Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu. Think on thy Proteus, when thou haply seest Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel: Wish me partaker in thy happiness, [danger, When thou dost meet good hap: and in thy If ever danger do environ thee, Command thy grievance to my holy prayers, For I will be thy bead's-man, Valentine.

Valentine.

Upon some book I love, I'll pray for thee.

Spirits to enforce, art to enchant; And my ending is despair, Unless I be relieve'd by prayer; Which pierces so, that it assaults Mercy itself, and frees all faults. At you from crimes would pardon'd be, Let your indulgence set me free.

THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

DUKE OF MILAN, Father to Silvia. Valentine, Proteus, Antonio, Father to Proteus. Thurio, a foolish rival to Valentine. Eglamour, agent for Silvia in her escape. Speed, a clownish Servant to Valentine. Launce, the like to Proteus. Panthino, Servant to Antonio.

SCENE; sometimes in Verona; sometimes in Milan, and on the frontiers of Mantua.

Valentine. That's on some shallow story of deep love, How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Proteus. That's a deep story of a deeper love, For he was more than over shoes in love.

Valentine. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love, And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

Proteus. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.

Valentine. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Proteus. What?

Valentine. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans; [moment's mirth, Coy looks, with heart-sore sighs; one fading With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights: If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain; If lost, why then a grievous labour won: However, but a folly bought with wit, Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Proteus. So, by your circumstance you call me fool.

Valentine. So, by your circumstance, I fear, you'll prove.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

Proteus.

'Tis love you cavil at: I am not love.

Valentine.

Love is your master, for he masters you;
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

Proteus.

Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Valentine.

And writers say, as the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu. My father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Proteus.

And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.

Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters,
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend,
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Proteus.

All happiness bechance to thee in Milan.
Valentine.

As much to you at home; and so, farewell. [Exit.

Proteus.

He after honour hunts, I after love:
He leaves his friends to dignify them more;
I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.
Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
War with good counsel, set the world at nought,
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter Speed.

Speed.

Sir Proteus, save you. Saw you my master?

Proteus.

But now he parted hence to embark for Milan.

Speed.

Twenty to one, then, he is ship'd already,
And I have play'd the sheep in losing him.

Proteus.

Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
An if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed.

You conclude, that my master is a shepherd,
then, and I a sheep?

Proteus.

I do.

Speed.

Why then, my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Proteus.

A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed.

This proves me still a sheep.

Proteus.

True, and thy master a shepherd.

Speed.

Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Proteus.

It shall go hard but I'll prove it by another.

Speed.

The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the Shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou
For wages followest thy master, thy master for Wages follows not thee; therefore, thou art a Sheep.

Speed.

Such another proof will make me cry "baa."

Proteus.

But, dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed.

Ay, sir: I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton, and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.

Proteus.

Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.

Speed.

If the ground be overcharg'd, you were best sticke her.

Proteus.

Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound
you.

Speed.

Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Proteus.

You mistake: I mean the pound, the pinfold.

Speed.

From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.

Proteus.

But what said she? did she nod?

Speed.

I. [Speed nods.

Proteus.

Nod, I? why that's noddy.

Speed.

You mistook, sir: I say she did nod, and you ask me, if she did nod? and I say I.

Proteus.

And that set together, is noddy.

Speed.

Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Proteus.

No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed.

Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Proteus.

Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed.

Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word noddy for my pains.

Proteus.

Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed.

And yet it cannot overtake your slow purs.

Proteus.

Come, come; open the matter in brief: what said she?

Speed.

Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter; and being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind. Give her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steel.

Proteus.

What! said she nothing?

Speed.

No, not so much as—'take this for thy pains.' To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have test'rn'd me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself. And so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Proteus.

Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wreck, Which cannot perish, having thee aboard, Being destin'd to a drier death on shore.—I must go send some better messenger: I fear my Julia would not deign my lines, Receiving them from such a worthless post.

Julia.

Lucetta.

Julia.

What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus? Lucetta.

Lucetta.

Lord, lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Julia.

How now! what means this passion at his name? Lucetta.

Lucetta.

Pardon, dear madam: 'tis a passing shame, That I, unworthy body as I am, Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT I. Sc. III.

When willingly I would have had her here: How angrily I taught my brow to frown; When inward joy enforce'd my heart to smile. My penance is to call Lucetta back, And ask remission for my folly past.—

What ho! Lucetta!

Re-enter Lucetta.

Lucetta. What would your ladyship wish?

Julia. Is it near dinner-time?

Lucetta. I would, it were; That you might kill your stomach on your meat, And not upon your maid.

Julia. What is't that you took up so gingerly?

Lucetta. Nothing.

Julia. Why didst thou stoop, then?

Lucetta. To take a paper up.

That I let fall.

Julia. And is that paper nothing?

Lucetta. Nothing concerning me.

Julia. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.

Lucetta. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns, Unless it have a false interpreter.

Julia. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rhyme.

Lucetta. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune.

Give me a note: your ladyship can set.

Julia.

As little by such toys as may be possible; Best sing it to the tune of "Light o' love."

Lucetta. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Julia. Heavy? belike, it hath some burden then.

Lucetta. Ay; and melodious were it, would you sing it.

Julia. And why not you?

Lucetta. I cannot reach so high.

Julia. Let's see your song:— How now, minion! Lucetta.

Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out: And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.

Julia. You do not?

Lucetta. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Julia. You, minion, are too saucy.

Lucetta. Nay, now you are too flat, And mar the concord with too harsh a descant: There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.

Julia. The mean is drown'd with your unruly base.

Lucetta. Indeed I bid the base for Proteus.

Julia. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me. Here is a coil with protestation!—

[ Tears the letter.]

Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie: You would be fingering them to anger me.

Lucetta. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.]

Julia. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same! O hateful hands! to tear such loving words: Injurious wasps, to feed on such sweet honey, And kill the bees that yield it with your stings! I'll kiss each several paper for amends. [Julia! Look, here is writ— "kind Julia,"

Crying to them, I throw thy name against the bruising stones, Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain. And here is writ— "lovest wounded Proteus."

Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed, Shall lodge thee, till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd;

And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss. But twice, or thrice, was Proteus written down: Be calm, good wind; blow not a word away, Till I have found each letter in the letter, [bear Except mine own name; that some whirlwind Unto a raged, fearful, hanging rock, And throw it thence into the raging sea. Lo! here in one line is his name twice writ,— "Poor forlorn Proteus; passionate Proteus To the sweet Julia,"— But I'll tear away; And yet I will not, sith so prettily He couples it to his complaining names. Thus will I fold them one upon another: Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter Lucetta.

Lucetta.

Madam, Dinner is ready, and your father stays.

Julia. Well, let us go.

Lucetta. What shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?

Julia. If you respect them, best to take them up.

Lucetta. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down; Yet here they shall not lie for catching cold.

Julia. I see, you have a month's mind to them.

Lucetta. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see I see things too, although you judge I wink.

Julia. Come, come; will't please you go? [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. A Room in Antonio's House.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Antonio. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that, Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister? Panthino. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT I. Sc. III.

Antonio.

Why, what of him?

Panthino.

He wonder'd, that your lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slander reputation,
Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:
Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;
Some, to discover islands far away;
Some, to the studious universities.
For any, or for all these exercises,
He said, that Proteus, your son, was meet,
And did request me to importune you,
To let him spend his time no more at home,
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having known no travel in his youth.

Antonio.

Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon this month I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well his loss of time,
And know he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried and tutor'd in the world:
Experience is by industry achiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time.
Then, tell me, which were I best to send him?

Panthino.

I think, your lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Antonio.

I know it well.

Panthino.

'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent him thither.
There shall be practise tilts and tournaments,
Heard sweet discourse, converse with noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise,
Worthy his youth, and nobleness of birth.

Antonio.

I like thy counsel: well hast thou advis'd;
And, that thou may'st perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known.
Even with the speediest expedition
I will dispatch him to the emperor's court.

Panthino.

To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other gentlemen of good esteem,
Are journeying to salute the emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.

Antonio.

Good company; with them shall Proteus go:
And, in good time,—now will we break with him.

Enter Proteus.

Proteus.

Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life!
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn.
O! that our fairer would appal our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents!
O heavenly Julia!

Antonio.

How now! what letter are you reading there?

Proteus.

May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine,
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Antonio.

Lend me the letter: let me see what news.

Proteus.

There is no news, my lord, but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well belov'd,
And daily graced by the emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Antonio.

And how stand you affected to his wish?

Proteus.

As one relying on your lordship's will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Antonio.

My will is something sorted with his wish.
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed,
For what I will, I will, and there an end.
I am resolv'd, that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentine in the emperor's court:
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition shalt have from me.
To-morrow be in readiness to go:
Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Proteus.

My lord, I cannot be so soon provided:
Please you, deliberate a day or two.

Antonio.

Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.—
Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd
To hasten on his expedition.

[Exeunt Antonio and Panthino.]

Proteus.

Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my love;
And, with the vantage of mine own excuse,
Hath he excepted most against my love.
O! how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Re-enter Panthino.

Panthino.

Sir Proteus, your father calls for you:
He is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go
Proteus.

Why, this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answers, no.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

Speed.

Sir, your glove.

Valentine.

Not mine; my gloves are on.

Speed.

Whythen this may be yours, for this is but one.

Valentine.

Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine. —
Sweet ornament, that decks a thing divine!
Ah Silvia! Silvia!

Speed.

Madam Silvia! madam Silvia!

Valentine.

How now, sirrah?

Speed.

She is not within hearing, sir.

Valentine.

SILVIA.

Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed.

He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Valentine.

As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter Unto the secret nameless friend of yours; Which I was much unwilling to proceed in, But for my duty to your ladyship.

Silvia.

I thank you, gentle servant. 'Tis very clerkly done.

Valentine.

Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off; For, being ignorant to whom it goes, I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Silvia.

Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Valentine.

No, madam: so it steed you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much. And yet,—

Silvia.

A pretty period. Well, I guess the sequel: And yet I will not name it; — and yet I care not;— And yet take this again; — and yet I thank you, Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed.

And yet you will; and yet, another yet.

Valentine.

What means your ladyship? do you not like it?

Silvia.

Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ, But since unwillingly, take them again. Nay, take them.

Valentine.

Madam, they are for you.

Silvia.

Ay, ay: you writ them, sir, at my request, But I will none of them: they are for you. I would have had them writ more movingly.

Valentine.

Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.

Silvia.

And, when it's writ, for my sake read it over; And, if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Valentine.

If it please me, madam; what then?

Silvia.

Why, if it please you, take it for your labour: And so good-morrow, servant. [Exit.

Speed.

O jest! unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple, [author, My master sues to her, and she hath taught her He being her pupil, to become her tutor. O excellent device! was there ever heard a better, [write the letter? That my master, being scribe, to himself should Valentine.

How now, sir! what, are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed.

Nay, I was rhyming: 'tis you that have the reason.

Valentine.

To do what?

SPEED.

To be a spokesman from madam Silvia.

Valentine.

To whom?

Speed.

To yourself. Why, she woos you by a figure.

Valentine.

What figure?

Speed.

By a letter, I should say.

Valentine.

Why, she hath not writ to me?

Speed.

What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Valentine.

Nay, believe me.

Speed.

No believing you, indeed, sir: but did you perceive her earnest?

Valentine.

She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed.

Why, she hath given you a letter.

Valentine.

That's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed.

And that letter hath she deliver'd, and there an end.

Valentine.

I would it were no worse!

Speed.

I'll warrant you, 'tis as well: For often have you writ to her, and she, in modesty, [reply; Or else for want of idle time, could not again Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind discover, [unto her lover. Her self hath taught her love himself to write All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.— Why muse you, sir? tis dinner time.

Valentine.

I have dined.

Speed.

Ay, but hearken, sir: though the cameleon love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals, and would fain have meat. O! be not like your mistress: be moved, be moved.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Verona. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Proteus.

Have patience, gentle Julia.

Julia.

I must, where is no remedy.

Proteus.

When possibly I can, I will return.

Julia.

If you turn not, you will return the sooner.

Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

Proteus. [Giving a Ring.

Why then, we'll make exchange: here, take you this.

Julia.

And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Proteus.

Here is my hand for my true constancy; And ACT II. SC. II.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

And when that hour o'er-slips me in the day, Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake, The next ensuing hour some foul mischance Torment me for my love's forgetfulness. My father stays my coming; answer not. The tide is now; nay, not thy tide of tears; That tide will stay me longer than I should. [Exit Julia.

Launce, farewell. — What gone without a word? Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak; For truth hath better deeds, than words, to grace it.

Enter Panthino.

Panthino.

Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Proteus.

Go; I come, I come. — Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. A Street.

Enter Launce, leading a Dog.

Launce.

Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault. I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think Crab, my dog, be the surest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear. He is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog; a Jerk would have wept to have seen our parting: why, my grandam having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father: — no, this left shoe is my father: — no, no, this left shoe is my mother: — nay, that cannot be so, neither: — yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father. A vengeance on't! there 'tis: now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid: I am the dog; — no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog, — O! the dog is me, and I am myself: ay, so so. Now come I to my father: "Father, your blessing: " now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on. Now, come I to my mother, (O, that she could speak now!) like a wood woman: — well, I kiss her; why there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes: now, the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word, but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter Panthino.

Panthino.

Launce, away, away, aboard: thy master is shipped, and thou art to join after with ours. What's the matter? why weep'st thou, man? Away, ass; you'll lose the tide, if you tarry any longer.

Launce.

It is no matter if the tied were lost; for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.

Panthino.

What's the unkindest tide?

Launce.

Why, he that's tied here; Crab, my dog.

Panthino.

Tut, man, I mean thou'lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service, and in losing thy service, — Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Launce.

For fear thou should'st lose thy tongue.

Panthino.

Where should I lose my tongue?

In thy tale.

Panthino.

In thy tail?

Launce.

Lose the tied, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tide. Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Panthino.

Come; come, away, man: I was sent to call thee.

Launce.

Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Panthino.

Wilt thou go?

Launce. [Exeunt.

Well, I will go.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed. Silvia.

Servant.— Valentine.

Mistress. Speed.

Master, sir Thurio frowns on you.

Valentine.

Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed.

Not of you.

Valentine.

Of my mistress, then.

Speed.

'Twere good you knock'd him.

Silvia.

Servant, you are sad.

Valentine.

Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thurio.

Seem you that you are not?

Valentine.

Haply, I do.

Thurio.

So do counterfeit.

Valentine.

So do you.

Thurio.

What seem I that I am not?

Valentine.

Wise.

Thurio.

What instance of the contrary?

Valentine.

Your folly.

Thurio.

And how quote you my folly?
Valentine. I quote it in your jerkin.
Thurio. My jerkin is a doublet.
Valentine. Well, then, I'll double your folly.
Thurio. How?
Silvia. What, angry, sir? Thurio? do you change colour?
Valentine. Give him leave, madam: he is a kind of camelon.
Thurio. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.
Valentine. You have said, sir.
Thurio. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.
Valentine. I know it well, sir: you always end ere you begin.
Silvia. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.
Valentine. 'Tis indeed, madam: we thank the giver.
Silvia. Who is that, servant?
Valentine. Yourself, sweet lady: for you gave the fire, Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.
Thurio. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.
Valentine. I know it well, sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare words.
Silvia. No more, gentlemen, no more. Here comes my father. Enter the Duke.
Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset. Sir Valentine, your father's in good health: What say you to a letter from your friends Of much good news?
Valentine. My lord, I will be thankfull To any happy messenger from thence.
Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?
Valentine. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentleman To be of worth, and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed.
Duke. Hath he not a son?
Valentine. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well deserves The honour and regard of such a father.
Duke. You know him well?
Valentine. I knew him, as myself; for from our infancy
We have convers'd, and spent our hours togethet: And though myself have been an idle truant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection, Yet hath sir Proteus, for that's his name, Made use and fair advantage of his days: His years but young, but his experience old; His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe; And, in one word, (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow) He is complete in feature, and in mind, With all good grace to grace a gentleman. Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but, if he make this good, He is as worthy for an empress' love, As meet to be an emperor's counsellor. Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me With commendation from great potentates; And here he means to spend his time a-while. I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you. Valentine. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he. Duke. Welcome him, then, according to his worth. Silvia. I speak to you; and you, sir Thurio:— For Valentine, I need not 'cite him to it. I'll send him hither to you presently. Exit Duke. Valentine. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship, Had come along with me, but that his mistress Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.
Silvia. Belike, that now she hath enfranchis'd them, Upon some other pawn for fealty. Valentine. Nay, sure, I think, she holds them prisoners still.
Silvia. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind, How could he see his way to seek out you? Valentine. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes. Thurio. They say, that love hath not an eye at all.
Valentine. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself: Upon a homely object love can wink. Enter Proteus.
Silvia. Have done, have done. Here comes the gen- tleman. [Exit Thurio. Valentine. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech you, Confirm his welcome with some special favour. Silvia. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither, If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from. Valentine. Mistress, it is. Sweet lady, entertain him To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship. Proteus. Too low a mistress for so high a servant. Proteus. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant To have a look of such a worthy mistress. Valentine. Leave off discourse of disability.— Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.
Proteus. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.
Silvia. And duty never yet did want his heed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.
Proteus. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.
Silvia. That you are welcome?
Proteus. That you are worthless.
Enter Thurio.
Thurio. Madam, my lord, your father, would speak with you.
Silvia. I wait upon his pleasure: come, sir Thurio, Go with me. — Once more, new servant, welcome: I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs; When you have done, we look to hear from you.
Proteus. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.
[Exeunt Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.
Valentine. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?
Proteus. Your friends are well, and have them much commend ed.
Valentine. And how do yours?
Proteus. I left them all in health.
Valentine. How does your lady, and how thrives your love?
Proteus. My tales of love were wont to weary you: I know, you joy not in a love-discourse.
Valentine. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now: I have done penance for contemning love; Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd With bitter fasts, with penitential groans, [me With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs; For, in revenge of my contempt of love, Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes, And made me watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.
O, gentle Proteus! love's a mighty lord, And hath so humbled me, as, I confess, There is no woe to his correction, Nor, to his service, no such joy on earth! Now, no discourse, except it be of love; Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep, Upon the very naked name of love.
Proteus. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye. Was this the idol that you worship so?
Valentine. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?
Proteus. No, but she is an earthly paragon.
Valentine. Call her divine.
Proteus. I will not flatter her.
Valentine. O! flatter me, for love delights in praises.
Proteus. When I was sick you gave me bitter pills, And I must minister the like to you.
Valentine. Then speak the truth by her: if not divine, Yet let her be a principality, Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.
Proteus. Except my mistress.
Valentine. Sweet, except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my love.
Proteus. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?
Valentine. And I will help thee to prefer her, too: She shall be dignified with this high honour,— To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss, And, of so great a favour growing proud, Disdain to root the summer-swelling flowers, And make rough winter everlasting.
Proteus. Why, Valentine, what braggraddism is this?
Valentine. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can, is nothing To her, whose worth makes other worthies She is alone.
Proteus. Then, let her alone.
Valentine. Not for the world. Why, man, she is mine And I as rich in having such a jewel, Own; As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl, The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee, Because thou seest me dote upon my love. My foolish rival, that her father likes Only for his possessions are so huge, Is gone with her along, and I must after, For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.
Proteus. But she loves you?
Valentine. Ay, and we are betroth'd; nay, more, our marriage hour, With all the cunning manner of our flight Determin'd of: how I must climb her window, The ladder made of cords, and all the means Plotted, and 'greed on for my happiness. Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber, In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.
Proteus. On go before; I shall enquire you forth. I must unto the road, to disembark Some necessaries that I needs must use, And then I'll presently attend you.
Valentine. Will you make haste?
Proteus. I will.— [Exit Valentine.
Even as one heat another heat expels, Or as one nail by strength drives out another, So the remembrance of my former love Is by a newer object quite forgotten. Is it mine eye, or Valentine's praise, Her true perfection, or my false transgression, That makes me, reasonless to reason thus? She's fair, and so is Julia that I love; — That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd, Which, like a waxen image gainst a fire, Bears no impression of the thing it was.

D Methinks
Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not, as I was wont:
O! but I love his lady too much;
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light;
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill.
[Exit.

SCENE V. The same. A Street.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Launce.

Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never undone, till he be hang'd; nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and the hostess say, welcome.

Speed.

Come on, you mad-cap, I'll to the alehouse with you presently; where for one shot of five pence thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. And, sirrah, how did thy master part with madam Julia?

Launce.

Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed.

But shall she marry him?

Launce.

No.

Speed.

How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce.

No, neither.

Speed.

What, are they broken?

Launce.

No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed.

Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce.

Marry, thus: when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed.

What an ass art thou? I understand thee not.

Launce.

What a block art thou, that thou cast not. My staff understands me.

Speed.

What thou say'st?

Launce.

Ay, and what I do too: look thee; I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed.

It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce.

Why, stand-under and under-stand is all one.

Speed.

But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce.

Ask my dog: if he say, ay, it will; if he say, no, it will; if he shake his tail, and say nothing, it will.

Speed.

The conclusion is, then, that it will.

Launce.

Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Speed.

'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how say'st thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce.

I never knew him otherwise.

Speed.

Than how?

Launce.

A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed.

Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistak'st me.

Launce.

Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy master.

Speed.

I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce.

Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt: go with me to the alehouse, so; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed.

Why?

Launce.

Because thou hast not so much charity in thee, as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speed.

At thy service.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. The same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Proteus.

To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn;
And even that power, which gave me first my Proves me to this threefold perjury: fool,
Love bad me swear, and love bids me forswear.
O sweet-suggesting love! If thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it.
But first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun.
Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken;
And he wants wit, that wants resolved will
To learn his wit & exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast prefer'd
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love, where I should love.
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose:
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
If I lose them, thus find I, by their loss,
For Valentine, myself: for Julia, Silvia.
I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still most precious in itself;
And Silvia, (witness heaven that made her fair!)
Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiop.
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead;
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Alming at Silvia, as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to myself
Without some treachery use I to Valentine.

This night, he meaneth with a corded ladder
To climb celestial Sibyl's chamber window;
Myself in counsel, his competitor.
Now, presently I'll give her further notice
Of their disagreeing, and prettied flight;
Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine.
For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter:
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross
By some sly trick Thurio's dastard proceeding.
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast leant me wit to plot this drif't!

Exit.

SCENE VII. Verona. A Room in Julia's House.
Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Julia.
Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me:
And, e'en in kind love, I do conjure thee,
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,
To lesson me; and tell me some good mean,
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.

Alas! the way is wearisome and long.

Julia.
A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps,
Much less shall she, that hath love's wings to fly;
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as sir Proteus.

Lucetta.
Better forbear, till Proteus make return.

Julia.
O! know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's
Pity the dearth that I have pined in, [food?
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.

Lucetta.
I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Least it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Julia.
The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns.
The current, that with gentle murmurs gildes,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth But, when his fair course is not hindered, [rage
He makes sweet music with the enamél'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overthwart in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport to the wild ocean.
Then, let me go, and hinder not my course.
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Lucetta.
Now, presently, as you, as now.

But in what habit will you go along?

Julia.
Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men.
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseech some well-reputed page.

Lucetta.
Why, then your ladyship must cut your hair.

Julia.
No girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastic, may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Lucetta.
What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches?

Julia.
That fits as well, as— "tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?"
Why, even what fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.

Lucetta.
You must needs have them with a codpiece, madam.

Julia.
Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.

Lucetta.
A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin,
Unless you have a codpiece to stick pins on.

Julia.
Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have
What thou think'st best, and, in most manner.
But tell me, wench, how will the world require
For undertaking so unstaid a journey? [me
I fear me, it will make me scandalis'd.

Lucetta.
If you think so, then stay at home, and go not.

Julia.
Nay, that I will not.

Lucetta.
Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone.
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.

Julia.
That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear.
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances as infinite of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Lucetta.
All these are servants to deceitful men.

Julia.
Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.

Lucetta.
Pray heaven, he prove so, when you come to him!

Julia.
Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Only desire my love by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longed journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation;
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence.
Come; answer not, but to it presently.
I am impatient of my tarryance.

[Exeunt.]
ACT III.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

Duke.

SIR Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile: We have some secrets to confer about.—

[Exit Thurio.

Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?

Proteus.

My gracious lord, that which I would discover, The law of friendship bids me to conceal; But, when I call to mind your gracious favours Done to me, undeserving as I am, My duty pricks me on to utter that, [me. Which else no worldly good should draw from Know, worthy prince, sir Valentine, my friend. This night intends to steal away your daughter: Myself am one made privy to the plot. I know, you have determin'd to bestow her On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates; And should she thus be stol'n away from you, It would be much vexation to your age. Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose To cross my friend in his intended drift, Than, by concealing it, heap on your head A pack of sorrows, which would press you down, Being unpreventced, to your timeless grave.

Duke.

Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care, Which to requite, command me while I live. This love of theirs myself have often seen, Happily, when they have judg'd me fast asleep, And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid Sir Valentine her company, and my court; But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err, And so unworthily disgrace the man, (A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd) I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find That which myself had just now disclos'd to me. And, that thou may'st perceiv'e my fear of this, Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested, I nightly lodge her in an upper tower, The key whereof myself have ever kept; And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Proteus.

Know, noble lord, they have devise'd a mean How he her chamber-window will ascend, And with a corded ladder fetch her down; For which the youthful lover now is gone, And this way comes he with it presently. Where, if it please you, you may intercept him. But, good my lord, do it so cunningly, That my discovery be not aimed at; For love of you, not hate unto my friend, Hath made me publisher of this pretence. Duke.

Upon mine honour, he shall never know That I had any light from thee of this.

Proteus.

Adieu, my lord: sir Valentine is coming.

[Exit.

Enter Valentine.

Duke.

Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?

Valentine.

Please it your grace, there is a messenger That stays to bear my letters to my friends, And I am going to deliver them.

Duke.

Be they of much import?
Duke.

Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground, And built so shelving, that one cannot climb it Without apparent hazard of his life.

Valentine.

Why then, a ladder quaintly made of cords, To cast upon, with a pair of anchoring hooks, Would serve to scale another Hero's tower, So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke.

Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood, Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Valentine.

When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke.

This very night; for love is like a child, That longs for every thing that he can come by.

Valentine.

By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.

Duke.

But barking thee: I will go to her alone. How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Valentine.

It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it Under a cloak that is of any length.

Duke.

A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Valentine.

Ay, my good lord.

Duke.

Then, let me see thy cloak:

I'll get me one of such another length.

Valentine.

Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.

Duke.

How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak? - I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me. - What letter is this same? What's here? - "To Silvia?"

And here an engine fit for my proceeding I'll be so bold to break the seal for once.

[Reads.

"My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly; And slates they are to me, that send them flying: O! could my master come and go as lightly, Himself would lodge, where senseless they are lying. My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them; While I, their king, that thither they importune, Bless'd them, Do curse the grace that with such grace hath Because myself do want my servants' fortune. I curse myself, for they are sent by me, "be," That they should harbour where their lord should What's here?"

"Silvia, this night will I enfranchise thee: " 'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose. Why, Phaedon, (for thou art Merops' son,) Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car, And with thy daring folly burn the world? Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on Go, base intruder; over-weaning slave: [thee? Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates, And think my patience, more than thy desert, Is privilege for thy departure hence. Thank me for this, more than for all the favours Which, all too much, I have bestow'd on thee: But if thou linger in my territories Longer than swiftest expedition Will give thee time to leave our royal court, By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love I ever bore my daughter, or thyself. Begone: I will not hear thy vain excuse: But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence."

[Exit Duke.

Valentine.

And why not death, rather than living tor- To die is to be banish'd from myself, [ment? And Silvia is myself: banish'd from her, Is self from self; a deadly banishment. What light is light, if Silvia be not seen? What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by? Unless it be, to think that she is by. And feed upon the shadow of perfection. Except I be by Silvia in the night, There is no music in the nightingale; Unless I look on Silvia in the day, There is no day for me to look upon. She is my essence; and I leave to be, If I be not by her fair influence Foster'd, illumined, cherish'd, kept alive. I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom: Tarry I here, I but attend on death; But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce.

Proteus.

Run, boy; run, run, and seek him out.

Launce.

So-ho! So-ho!

Proteus.

What seest thou?

Launce.

Him we go to find: there's not a hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Valentine?

Proteus.

No.

Valentine.

Who then? his spirit?

Neither.

Proteus.

What then?

Valentine.

Nothing.

Proteus.

Can nothing speak? master, shall I strike?

Whom wouldst thou strike?

Valentine.

Proteus.

Nothing.

Villain, forbear.

Launce.

Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you, — Proteus.

Sirrah, I say, forbear. — Friend Valentine, a word.

Valentine.

My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news, So much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Proteus.

Then in dumb silence will I bury mine, For they are harsh, unturnable, and bad.

Valentine.

Is Silvia dead?

Proteus.

No, Valentine.

Valentine.

No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia! — Hath she forsown me?

Proteus.

No, Valentine.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.  ACT III.  SC. I.

Valentine.
No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!—
What is your news?

Launce.
Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.

Proteus.
That thou art banished! O! that is the news, From hence, from Silvia, and from me, thy friend.

Valentine.
O! I have fed upon this: woe already, And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banished?

Proteus.
Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom, (Which, unrevers'd, stands in effectual force) A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears: Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd, With them, upon her knees, her humble self; Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became As if but now they waxed pale for woe: [them, But neither bended knees, pure hands held up, Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears, Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire, But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die. Besides, her intercourse charg'd him so, When she for thy repeal was suppliant, That to close prison he commanded her, With many bitter threats of 'biding there.

Valentine.
No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life: If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear, As ending anthem of my endless colour.

Proteus.
Cease to lament for that thou canst not help, And study help for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good. Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love; Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life. Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that, And manage it against despairing thoughts. Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence; Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love. The time now serves not to expostulate: Come, I'll convey thee through the city-gate, And, ere I part with thee, confer at large Of all that may concern thy love affairs. As thou love'st Silvia, though not for thyself, Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Valentine.
I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy, Bid him make haste, and meet me at the north-gate.

Proteus.
Go, sirrah, find him out.

Come, Valentine.

Valentine.
O my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine!

[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.

Launce.
I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of a knave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now, that knows me to be in love; yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman: but what woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milk-maid: yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had goslings; yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel, which is much in a bare Christian. Here is the cate-log [pulling out a paper] of her conditions. Imprin's, "She can fetch and carry." Why, a horse can do no more: nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore, is she better than a jade. Item, "She can milk," look you; a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed.
How now, signior Launce? what news with your mastership?

Launce.
With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.

Speed.
Well, your old vice still; mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?

Launce.
The blackest news that ever thou heard'st.

Speed.
Why, man, how black?

Launce.
Why, as black as ink.

Speed.
Let me read them.

Launce.
Fie on thee, jol't-head! thou canst not read.

Speed.
Thou liest, I can.

Launce.
I will try thee. Tell me this: who begot thee?

Speed.
Marry, the son of my grandfather.

Launce.
O, illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves, that thou canst not read:

Speed.
Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.

Launce.
There, and saint Nicholas be thy speed!

Speed.
Imprin's, "She can milk."

Launce.
Ay, that she can.

Speed.
Item, "She brews good ale."

Launce.
And thereof comes the proverb,—Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.

Speed.
Item, "She can sew."

Launce.
That's as much as to say, Can she so?

Speed.
Item, "She can knit."

Launce.
What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?

Speed.
Item, "She can wash and scour."

Launce.
A special virtue; for then she need not be wash'd and scour'd.

Speed.
Item, "She can spin."

Launce.
Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed.

ACT III. Sc. II.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

39

Speed.

Item, "She hath many nameless virtues."

Launce.

That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Speed.

Here follow her vices.

Launce.

Close at the heels of her virtues.

Launce.

Item, "She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath."

Launce.

Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.

Speed.

Item, "She hath a sweet mouth."

Launce.

That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed.

Item, "She doth talk in her sleep."

Launce.

It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed.

Item, "She is slow in words."

Launce.

O villain! that set this down among her vices. To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't, and place it for her chief virtue.

Speed.

Item, "She is proud."

Launce.

Out with that too: it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed.

Item, "She hath no teeth."

Launce.

I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed.

Item, "She is curst."

Launce.

Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Speed.

Item, "She will often praise her liquor."

Launce.

If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed.

Item, "She is too liberal."

Launce.

Of her tongue she cannot, for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut: now, of another thing she may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.

Item, "She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults."

Launce.

Stop there; I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article. Rehearse that once more.

Speed.

Item, "She hath more hair than wit."

Launce.

More hair than wit—it may be; I'll prove it: the cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt: the hair, that covers the wit, is more than the wit, for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed.

—"And more faults than hairs,"—

Launce.

That's monstrous: O, that that were out!

Speed.

—"And more wealth than faults."

Launce.

Why, that word makes the faults gracious. Well, I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.—

Speed.

What then?

Launce.

Why, then will I tell thee.—that thy master stays for thee at the north-gate.

Speed.

For me?

Launce.

For thee? ay; who art thou? he hath stay'd for a better man than thee.

Speed.

And must I go to him?

Launce.

Thou must run to him, for thou hast stay'd so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.

Speed.

Why didst not tell me sooner? pox of your love-letters!

Launce.

Now will he be swing'd for reading my letter. An unmanfully slave, that will thrust himself into secrets.—I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction.

SCENE II. The same. An Apartment In the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke and Thurio; Proteus behind.

Duke.

Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thurio.

Since his exile she hath desip'd me most; Forsworn my company, and rall'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Duke.

This weak impress of love is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.— How now, sir Proteus! Is your countryman, According to our proclamation, gone?

Proteus.

Gone, my good lord.

Speed.

My daughter takes his going grievously.

Proteus.

A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

Duke.

So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so. Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou hast shown some sign of good desert) Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Thurio.

Longer than I prove loyal to your grace, Let me not live to look upon your grace.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA. ACT III. SC. II.

Duke.
Thou know'st how willingly I would effect
The match between sir Thurio and my daughter.

Proteus.
I do, my lord.

Duke.
And also, I think, thou art not ignorant
How she opposes against my will.

Proteus.
She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke.
Ay, and perversely she perseveres so.
What might we do to make the girl forget
The love of Valentine, and love sir Thurio?

Proteus.
The best way is, to slander Valentine
With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent;
Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Duke.
Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Proteus.
Ay, if his enemy deliver it:
Therefore, it must, with circumstance, be spoken
By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Duke.
Then you must undertake to slander him.

Proteus.
And that, my lord, I shall be loth to do:
'Tis an ill office for a gentleman,
Especially, against his very friend.

Duke.
Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endanger him:
Therefore, the office is indifferent,
Being entreated to it by your friend.

Proteus.
You have prevail'd, my lord. If I can do it,
By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him.
But say, this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love sir Thurio.

Thurio.
Therefore, as you unwind her love from him,
Lest it should ravel and be good to none,
You must provide to bottom it on me;
Which must be done by praising me as much
As you in worth dispraise sir Valentine.

Duke.
And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind,
Because we know, on Valentine's report,
You are already love's firm votary,
And cannot soon revolt, and change your mind.
Upon this warrant shall you have access
Where you with Siloam may confer at large;
For she's a lumpish, heavy, melancholy,
And for your friend's sake will be glad of you,
Where you may temper her, by your persuasion,
To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Proteus.
As much as I can do I will affect
But you, sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;
You must lay lime to tangle her desires
By wallful sonnets, whose composed rhymes
Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.

Duke.
Ay, much is the force of heaven-bred poesy.

Proteus.
That may discover such integrity:
For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' snaws,
Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,
Make tigers tame, and huge levithans
Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.
After your dire-lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber window
With some sweet consort: to their instruments
Tune a deploring dump; the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grief.
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.

Duke.
This discipline shows thou hast been in love.

Thurio.
And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently,
To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in music.
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn
To give the onset to thy good advice.

Duke.
About it, gentlemen.

Proteus.
We'll wait upon your grace till after supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.

Duke.
Even now about it: I will pardon you.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A Forest, between Milan and Verona.

Enter certain Outlaws.

1 Outlaw.
Fellows, stand fast: I see a passenger.

2 Outlaw.
If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

3 Outlaw.
Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you;
If not, we'll make you sit, and rifle you.

Speed.
Sirs, we are undone. These are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.

Valentine.
My friends,—

1 Outlaw.
That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.

2 Outlaw.
Peace! we'll hear him.

3 Outlaw.
Ay, by my beard, will we; for he is a proper man.

Valentine.
Then know, that I have little wealth to lose.
A man I am, cross'd with adversity:
My riches are these poor habiments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

2 Outlaw.
Whither travel you?

Valentine.
SCENE II. Milan. The Court of the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Proteus.

Already have I been false to Valentine, and now I must be as unjust to Thurio. Under the colour of commending him, I have access to my own love to prefer; but Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy, to be corrupted with my worthless gifts. When I protest true loyalty to her, she twits me with my falsehood to my friend; when to her beauty I commend my vows, she bids me think how I have been forsworn, in breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd; and, notwithstanding all her sudden quips, the least whereof would quell a lover's hope. Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love, the more it grows, and fawneth on her still. But here comes Thurio. Now must we to her window, and give some evening music to her ear.

Enter Thurio and Musicians.

Thurio.

How now, sir Proteus! are you crept before us?

Proteus.

Ay, gentle Thurio; for, you know, that love will creep in service where it cannot go.

Thurio.

Ay; but I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Proteus.

Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.

Thurio.

Whom? Silvia?

Proteus.

Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

Thurio.

I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen, let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter Host and Julia, behind; Julia in boy's clothes.

Host.

Now, my young guest; methinks you're ally-cholly: I pray you, why is it?

Julia.

Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

Host.

Come, we'll have you merry. I'll bring you where TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.  ACT IV. SC. II.

where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Julia.

But shall I hear him speak?

Host.

Ay, that you shall.

Julia. [Music plays.

Hark! hark!

Is he among these?

Host.

Ay; but peace! let's hear 'em.

Song.

Who is Silvia? what is she?
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she;
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.
Is she kind, as she is fair,
For beauty lives with kindness?
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd inhabits there.
Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing.
Upon the dull earth dwelling;
To her let us garlands bring.

Host.

How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the music likes you not.

Julia.

You mistake: the musician likes me not.

Host.

Why, my pretty youth?

Julia.

He plays false, father.

Host.

How? out of tune on the strings?

Julia.

Not so; but yet so false, that he grieves my very heart-strings.

Host.

You have a quick ear.

Julia.

Ay; I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.

Host.

I perceive, you delight not in music.

Julia.

Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host.

Hark! what fine change is in the music.

Julia.

Ay, that change is the spite.

Host.

You would have them always play but one thing?

Julia.

I would always have one play but one thing.

But, Host, doth this sir Proteus, that we talk on, Often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host.

I tell you what Launce, his man, told me, he lov'd her out of all nick.

Julia.

Where is Launce?

Host.

Gone to seek his dog; which, to morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Julia.

Peace! stand aside: the company parts.

Proteus.

Sir Thurio, fear not you: I will so plead, That you shall say my cunning drift excels.

Thurio.

Where meet we?

Proteus.

At saint Gregory's well.

Thurio.

Farewell. [Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.

Enter Silvia above, at her window.

Proteus.

Madam, good even to your ladyship.

Silvia.

I thank you for your music, gentlemen. Who is that, that spake?

Proteus.

One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.

Silvia.

Sir Proteus, as I take it.

Proteus.

Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.

Silvia.

What is your will?

Proteus.

That I may compass yours.

Silvia.

You have your wish: my will is even this,
That presently you hie you home to bed.
Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou, I am so shallow, so conceitless,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me, by this pale queen of night I swear,
I am so far from granting thy request,
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit,
And by and by intend to chide myself
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Proteus.

I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.

Julia. [Aside.

'Twere false, if I should speak it;
For, I am sure, she is not buried.

Silvia.

Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,
Survives, to whom thyself art witness
I am betroth'd; and art thou not ashamed
To wrong him with thy importunity?

Proteus.

I likewise hear, that Valentine is dead.

Silvia.

And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave,
Assure thyself, my love is buried.

Proteus.

Sweet lady, let me take it from the earth.

Silvia.

Go to thy lady's grave, and call her's thence;
Or, at the least, in her sepulchre thine.

Julia. [Aside.

He heard not that.

Proteus.
SCENE III. The same.

Enter Eglamour.

Eglamour.

This is the hour that madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind.
There’s some great matter she’d employ me in,— Madam, madam! Enter Silvia above, at her window.

Silvia.

Who calls?

Eglamour.

Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship’s command.
Silvia.

Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.

Eglamour.

As many, worthy lady, to yourself.
According to your ladyship’s impose,
I am thus early come, to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Silvia.

O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,
Valliant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish’d,
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish’d Valentine;
Nor how my father would enforcing me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhorre’st.
Thyself hast lov’d; and I have heard thee say,
No grief did ever come so near thy heart,
As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow’dst pure chastity.
Sir Eglamour, 1 would to Valentine;
To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode;
And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,

I do desire thy worthy company,
Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
Urge not my father’s anger, Eglamour,
But think upon my grief, a lady’s grief;
And on the justice of my flying hence,
To keep from this unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still reward with
I do desire thee, even from a heart
[plagues. As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,
To bear me company, and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.

Eglamour.

Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which since I know they virtuously are plac’d,
I give consent to go along with you;
Becking as little what betideth me,
As much I wish all good befortune you.
When will you go?

Silvia.

This evening coming.

Eglamour.

Where shall I meet you?

Silvia.

At friar Patrick’s cell,
Where I intend holy confession.

Eglamour.

I will not fail your ladyship. Good morrow,
Gentle lady.

Silvia.

Good morrow, kind sir Eglamour. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The same.

Enter Launce with his dog.

Launce.

When a man’s servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely, thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to mistress Silvia from my master, and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her treacher, and steals her capon’s leg. O! ’tis a foul thing, when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies. I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily, he had been hang’d for’t: sure as I live, he had suffer’d for’t. You shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs under the duke’s table: he had not been there (bless the mark) a passing while, but all the chamber smelt him. “Out with the dog!” says one; “what cur is that?” says another; “whip him out,” says the third; “hang him up,” says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab, and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: “Friend,” quoth I, “you mean to whip the dog.” “Ay, marry, do I,” quoth he. “You do him the more wrong,” quoth I; “twas I did the thing you wot of.” He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I’ll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed. I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffer’d for’t: thou think’st not of this now.
—Nay, I remember the trick you served me, when when I took my leave of madam Silvia. Did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Proteus.

Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well, And will employ thee in some service presently.

Julia.

I hope thou wilt.—How now, you whoreson peasant! Where have you been these two days loitering?

Launce.

Marry, sir, I carried mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.

Proteus.

And what says she she's my little jewel?

Launce.

Marry, she says, your dog was a cur; and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Proteus.

But she receiv'd th' other dog?

Launce.

No, indeed, did she not. Here have I brought him back again.

Proteus.

What! didst thou offer her this from me?

Launce.

Ay, sir: the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman's boys in the market-place; and then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Proteus.

Go; get thee hence, and find my dog again, Or ne'er return again into my sight.

Away, I say! Stayest thou to vex me here? A slave that still an end turns me to shame.

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly, that I have need of such a youth, That can with some discretion do my business, For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish lowt; But, chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour, Which (if my angry deceiver me not) Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth: Therefore, know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently, and take this ring with thee: Deliver it to madam Silvia. She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me.

Julia.

It seems, you lov'd not her, to leave her token. She's dead, belike?

Proteus.

Not so: I think, she lives.

Julia.

Alas!

Proteus.

Why dost thou cry, alas?

Julia.

I cannot choose but pity her.

Proteus.

Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Julia.

Because, methinks, that she lov'd you as well As you do love your lady Silvia. She dreams on him, that has forgot her love; You dote on her, that cares not for your love.

'Tis pity, love should be so contrary, And thinking on it makes me cry, alas!

Proteus.

Well, give her that ring; and therewithal This letter;—that's her chamber.—Tell my lady I claim the promise for her heavenly picture. Your message done, bide home unto my chamber, Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary. [Exit.

Julia.

How many women would do such a message? Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs. Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him, That with his very heart despiest me? Because he loves her, he despiseth me, Because I love him, I must pity him. This ring I gave him when he parted from me, To bind him to remember my good will, And now am I (unhappy messenger!) To plead for that which I would not obtain; To carry that which I would have refused; To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd. I am my master's true confirmed love, But cannot be true servant to my master, Unless I prove false traitor to myself. Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly, As, heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter Silvia, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day. I pray you, be my mean To bring me where to speak with madam Silvia. What would you with her, If that I be she? If you be she, I do entreat your patience To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Julia.

From whom?

Julia.

From my master, sir Proteus, madam.

Silvia.

O! he sends you for a picture?

Julia.

Ay, madam.

Silvia.

Ursula, bring your picture there. [A picture brought. Go, give your master this: tell him from me, One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget, Would better fit his citizen, than this shadow. Julia.

Madam, please you peruse this letter. — Pardon me, madam, I have unadvis'd Deliver'd you a paper that I should not: This is the letter to your ladyship.

Silvia.

I pray thee, let me look on that again.

Julia.

It may not be: good madam, pardon me.

Silvia.

There, hold. I will not look upon your master's lines: I know, they are stuff'd with protestations, And full of new-found oaths, which he will As easily as I do tear his paper.
[break

Julia.

Madam, he sends you your ladyship this ring.

Silvia.

The more shame for him that he sends it me; For,
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT V. Sc. ii.

For, I have heard him say, a thousand times,
His Julia gave it him at his departure.

Julia.

Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,
Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

She thanks you.

Silvia.

What say'st thou?

Julia.

I thank you, madam, that you tender her.

Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.

Dost thou know her?

Silvia.

Almost as well as I do know myself:
To think upon her woes, I do protest,
That I have wept a hundred several times.

Silvia.

Belike, she thinks, that Proteus hath forsook her.

Julia.

I think she doth, and that's her cause of sorrow.

Silvia.

Is she not passing fair?

Julia.

About my stature; for, at pentecost,
When all our pageants of delight were play'd,
Our youth got me to play the woman's part,
And I was trimm'd in madam Julia's gown,
Which served me as fit, by all men's judgments,
As if the garment had been made for me.
Therefore, I know she is about my height,
And at that time I made her weep a good,
For I did play a lamentable part.

Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus' perjury, and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears,
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,
Wept bitterly; and, would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.

Silvia.

She is beholding to thee, gentle youth.—
Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!—
I weep myself, to think upon thy words.
Here, youth; there is my purse: I give thee this
For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.

Farewell. [Exit Silvia.

Julia.

And she shall thank you for't, If e'er you know her.

A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful.
I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my mistress' love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with itself!
Here is her picture. Let me see: I think,
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as this of hers;
And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much.
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine:
Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.
What should it be, that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in myself,
If this fond love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form!
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd,
And, were there sense in his idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
That used me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseen eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee.

[Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The same. An Abbey.

Enter Eglamour.

Eglamour.

The sun begins to gild the western sky,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia at friar Patrick's cell should meet me.
She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.

Enter Silvia.

See, where she comes!—Lady, a happy evening.

Silvia.

Amen, Amen! go on, good Eglamour,
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall.
I fear I am attended by some spies.

Eglamour.

Fear not: the forest is not three leagues off;
If we recover that, we are sure enough.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Thurio, Proteus, and Julia.

Thurio.

Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?

Proteus.

O, sir! I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thurio.

What! that my leg is too long?

Proteus.

No, that it is too little.

Thurio.

I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat rounder.

Julia. [Aside.

But love will not be spur'd to what it loveth.

Thurio.

What says she to my face?

Proteus.

She says it is a fair one.

Thurio.

Nay, then the wanton lies: my face is black.

Proteus.

But pearls are fair, and the old saying is,
Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.

Julia.
Julia.  [Aside.
'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes; For I had rather wink than look on them.

Ill, when you talk of war.
Thurio. But well, when I discourse of love and peace? Julia.

But better, indeed, when you hold your peace.

What says she to my valour? Proteus.

O, sir! I she makes no doubt of that.

She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.

What says she to my birth? Proteus.

That you are well deriv'd.
Julia. [Aside. True; from a gentleman to a fool.

Thurio. Considers she my possessions? Proteus.

O! say; and pities them.

Wherefore? Julia.

That such an ass should owe them.

Thurio. That they are out by lease. Julia.

Here comes the Duke.

Enter Duke.

Thurio. How now, sir Proteus! how now, Thurio! Which of you saw sir Eglamour of late?

Not I. Proteus.

Nor I. Duke.

Saw you my daughter? Proteus.

Neither. Duke.

Why, then
She's fled unto that peasant Valentine, And Eglamour is in her company.
'Tis true; for friar Laurence met them both, As he in penance wander'd through the forest: Him he knew well; and guess'd that it was she, But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it:

Besides, she did intend confession, [not. At Patrick's cell this even, and there she was These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence: Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse, But mount you presently: and meet with me Upon the rising of the mountain-foot, [fled. That leads towards Mantua, whither they are Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit.}

Thurio. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl, That flies her fortune when it follows her. I'll after her, and see be reveng'd on Eglamour, Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit. Proteus. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love, Than hate of Eglamour, that goes with her. [Exit. Julia. And I will follow, more to cross that love, Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit. SCENE III. The Forest. Enter Silvia and Outlaws. 1 Outlaw. Come, come:

Be patient; we must bring you to our captain. Silvia. A thousand more mischances than this one Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently. 2 Outlaw. Come, bring her away. 3 Outlaw. Where is the gentleman that was with her? 1 Outlaw. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us; But Moyses, and Patrerus, follow him. Go thou with her to the west end of the wood; There is our captain. We'll follow him that's fled: The thicket is best; he cannot escape. Silvia. O Valentine! this I endure for thee. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. Another Part of the Forest. Enter Valentine. Valentine. How use doth breed a habit in a man! This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods, I better brook than flourishing peopled towns. Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, And to the nightingale's complaining notes Tune my distresses, and record my woes. O! thou that dost inhabit in my breast, Leave not the mansion so long tenantless, Last, growing ruinous, the building fall, And leave no memory of what it was! Repair me with thy presence, Silvia! Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!— What halloing, and what stir, is this to-day? These are my mates, that make their wills their Have some unhappy passenger in chase. [law, They love me well; yet I have much to do, To keep them from uncivil outrages. Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here? [Exeunt. Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia. Proteus. Madam, this service I have done for you, [Though you respect not aught your servant doth] To hazard life, and rescue you from him, That would have forc'd your honour and your love. Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look; A smaller
A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Valentine.

How like a dream is this, I see, and hear!
Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile.

Silvia.

O, miserable! unhappy that I am!

Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came;
But by my coming I have made you happy.

Silvia.

By thy approach thon mak'st me most unhappy.

Julia.

And me, when he approacheth to your presence.

Silvia.

Had I been seized by a hungry lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the beast,
Rather than have false Proteus rescue me.
O, heaven! I be judge, how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul;
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I do detest false, perjur'd Proteus:
Therefore be gone: solicit me no more.

Proteus.

What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one calm look.
O! 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love, where they're belov'd.

Silvia.

When Proteus cannot love, where he's belov'd,
Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths
Descended into perjury to love me.
Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou'dst two,
And that's far worse than none: better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one.
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Proteus. In love

Who respects friend?

Silvia.

All men but Proteus.

Proteus.

Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form,
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end, [you.
And love you 'gainst the nature of love: force

Silvia.

O heaven!

Proteus.

I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Enter Valentine.

Valentine.

Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch;
Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Proteus.

Valentine.

Thou common friend, that's without faith or love:
(For such is a friend now) treacherous man!
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes: nought but mine
Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say,
I have one friend alive: thou would'st disprove me.

[hand

Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.
The private wound is deepest. O time most

Proteus.

My shame and guilt confound me.—
Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender 't here: I do as truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.

Valentine.

Then, I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest.
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd:
By penitence th' Eternal's wrath's appeas'd:
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Julia.

O me unhappy!

Look to the boy.

Valentine.

Why, boy! why, wag! how now! what's the matter? look up; speak.

Julia.

O good sir! my master charg'd me to delive a ring to madam Silvia, which, out of my neglect was never done.

Proteus.

Where is that ring, boy?

Julia.

Here 'tis: this is it. [Gives a ring.

Proteus.

How! let me see. Why, this is the ring gave to Julia.

Julia.

O! cry you mercy, sir; I have mistook:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

Proteus. [Shows another ring.

Proteus.

But, how can'st thou by this ring?
At my depart I gave this unto Julia.

Julia.

And Julia herself did give it me;
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Proteus.

How? Julia!

Julia.

Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root!
O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush;
He thou asham'd, that I have took upon me
Such an immodest ramiment; if shame live
In a disgrace of love.
It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's, with a constant eye?

Valentine.

Come, come, a hand from either.
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Proteus.
Proteus.
Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Julia.
And I mine.

Enter Outlaws, with Duke and Thurio.

Outlaws.
A prize! a prize! a prize!

Valentine.
Forbear: forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.—
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac’d, Banished Valentine.

Duke.
Sir Valentine!

Thurio.
Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia’s mine.

Valentine.
Thurio. give back, or else embrace thy death.
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee. Here she stands:
Take but possession of her with a touch,
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.

Thurio.
Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I,
I hold him but a fool, that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not;
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke.
The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions.
Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress’ love.
Know then, I here forget all former grife,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
Plead a new state in thy unrivall’d merit,
To which I thus subscribe.—Sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv’d: [her.
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv’d

Valentine.
I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy.
I now beseech you, for your daughter’s sake,
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke.
I grant it for thine own, whate’er it be.

Valentine.
These banish’d men, that I have kept withal,
Are men endued with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall’d from their exile.
They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke.
Thou hast prevail’d; I pardon them, and thee:
Dispose of them, as thou know’st their deserts.
Come; let us go: we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Valentine.
And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse to make your grace to smile.
What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke.
I think the boy hath grace in him: be blushes.

Valentine.
I warrant you, my lord, more grace than boy.

Duke.
What mean you by that saying?

Valentine.
Please you, I’ll tell you as we pass along,
That you will wonder what hath fortun’d.—
Come, Proteus; ’tis your penance, but to hear
The story of your loves discovered:
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours:
One feast one house, one mutual happiness.

[Exit.

ACT I.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Shallow.
Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it: if he were twenty sir John Falstaff, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slender.
In the county of Glos, justice of peace, and coram.

Shallow.
Ay, cousin Slender, and cust-olorum.

Slender.

Ay, and ratolorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself armigero; in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, armigero.

Shallow.
Ay, that I do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slender.

All his successors, gone before him, hath don't; and all his ancestors, that come after him, may: they may give the dozen white luces in their coat.

Shallow.

It is an old coat.

Evans.

The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.

Shallow.

I may quarter, coz?

Slender.

You may, by marrying.

Evans.

It is marrying, indeed, if he quarter it.

Slender.

Not a whit.

Evans.

Yes, per-lady: if he has a quarter of your cost, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures. But that is all one: if sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shallow.

The council shall hear it: it is a riot.

Evans.

It is not meet the council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot. The council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shallow.

Ha! o' my life, if I were young again the sword should end it.

Evans.

It is better that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my prain, which, peradventure, prings goot discretions with with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Merry.

Marry, and this Page.

Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shallow.

If it be confess'd, it is not redress'd: is not that so, master Page? He hath wrong'd me; indeed, he hath;—at a word, he hath;—believe me: — Robert Shallow, esquire, saith, he is wrong'd.

Page.

Here comes sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Falstaff.

Now, master Shallow; you'll complain of me to the king?

Shallow.

Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Falstaff.

But not kiss'd your keeper's daughter?

Falstaff.

I will answer it straight:—I have done all this.

Shallow.

The council shall know this.

Evans.

Pauca verba, sir John; good words.

Falstaff.

Good words? good cabbage.—Slender, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

Slender.

Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bardolph.

You Banbury cheese!

Slender.

Ay, it is no matter.

Pistol.

How now, Mephostophiles?

Slender.

Ay, it is no matter.

Nym.

Slice, I say! pauca; pauca; slice! that's my humour.

Slender.

Where's Simple, my man?—can you tell, cousin?

Evans.

Peace! I pray you. Now let us understand: there is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is—master Page, fidelicet, master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garier.
We three, to hear it, and end it between them. Evans. Fery goot: I will make a prieff of it in my note book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

Falstaff. Pistol!

He hears with ears. Evans. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this? "I hea 'ith ear?" Why, it is affectations.

Falstaff. Pistol, did you pick master Slender's purse?

Ay, by these gloves, did he, (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else) of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Jed Miller, by these gloves.

Falstaff. Is this true, Pistol?

No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pistol. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner!—Sir John and master mine, I combat challenge of this latlun blibo; Word of denial in thy labras here; Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest.

By these gloves, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be avised, sir, and pass good humours. I will say, "marry trap," with you, if you run the nut-hook's humour on me; that is the very note of it.

Slender. By this bat, then he in the red face had it; for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Falstaff. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bardolph. Why sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Evans. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

Bardolph. And being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd the carrires.

Slender. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter. I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Evans. So Got 'udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Falstaff. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Enter Anne Page with Wine; Mistress Ford and Mistress Page following. Page. Nay, daughter, carry the wine in; we'll drink within.

Slender. O heaven! this is mistress Anne Page.

How now, mistress Ford!

Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress. [Kissing her. Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome. Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner: come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exeunt all but Shallow, Slender, and Evans. Slender. I had rather than forty shillings, I had my book of songs and sonnets here:—

Enter Simple. How now, Simple. Where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not the book of riddles about you, have you?

Simple. Book of riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortenke upon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shallow. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz? marry, this, coz: there is, as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by sir Hugh here: do you understand me?

Slender. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable: If it be so, I shall do that is reason.

Shallow. Nay, but understand me.

Slender. So I do, sir.

Evans. Give ear to his motions, master Shallow. I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slender. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says. I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Evans. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shallow. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Evans. Marry, is it, the very point of it; to mistress Anne Page.

Slender. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Evans. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mouth; therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shallow. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slender. I hope, sir, I will do, as it shall become one that would do reason.

Evans. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies, you must speak possible, if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shallow. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slender.
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Act I. Sc. 1.

Slender.
I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shallow.
Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz; what I do, is to pleasure you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slender.
I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, "marry her," I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and absolutely.

Evans.
It is a very discreet answer; save, the fault is in the 'ort dissolve; the 'ort is, according to our meaning, resolutely. — His meaning is good.

Shallow.
Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slender.
Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.

Re-enter Anne Page.

Shallow.
Here comes fair mistress Anne. — Would I were young, for your sake, mistress Anne!

Anne.
The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worship's company.

Shallow.
I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Evans.
O'd's plessed will I will not be absence at the grace. [Exeunt Shallow and Sir H. Evans.

Anne.
Will't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slender.
No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne.
The dinner attends you, sir.

Slender.
I am not a-languid, I thank you, forsooth.— Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend for a man.— I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead; but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne.
I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit, till you come.

Slender.
I'faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne.
I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slender.
I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence, (three venets for a dish of stewed prunes) and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears in the town?

Anne.
I think there are, sir; I heard them talked of.

Slender.
I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England. You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne.
Ay, indeed, sir.

Slender.
That's meat and drink to me, now: I have seen Sackerson loose, twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd: but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter Page.

Page.
Come, gentle master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slender.
I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page.
By cock and phe, you shall not choose, sir. Come come.

Slender.
Nay; pray you, lead the way.

Page.
Come on, sir.

Slender.
Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne.
Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slender.
Truly, I will not go first: truly, la, I will not do you that wrong.

Anne.
I pray you, sir.

Slender.
I'll rather be unmannery, than troublesome. You do yourself wrong, indeed, la. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans.
Go your ways, and ask of doctor Caius' house, which is the way; and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Simple.
Well, sir.

Evans.
Nay, it is better yet. — Give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with mistress Anne Page; and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page: I pray you, be gone. I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Falstaff.
Mine host of the Garter!

Host.
What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly, and wisely.

Falstaff.
Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host.
Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.
Falstaff.
I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host.
Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Keisar, and Pheasars. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?

Falstaff.
Do so, good mine host.

Host.
I have spoke; let him follow.—Let me see thee froth, and live: I am at a word; follow.

[Exit Host.

Falstaff.
Bardolph, follow him. A tapster is a good trade; an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered servingman, a fresh tapster. Go; adieu.

Falstaff.
It is a life that I have desired. I will thrive.

[Exit Bardolph.

Pistol.
O base Gongarlan wight! wilt thou the epigot wield?

Nym.
He was gotten in drink: is not the humour concealed? His mind is not heroic, and there's the humour of it.

Pistol.
I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box; his thefts were too open; his whisling was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

Nym.
The good humour is to steal at a minute's rest.

Pistol.
Convey the wise it call. Steal? foh! a fico for the phrase!

Falstaff.
Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pistol.
Why then, let kibes ensue.

Falstaff.
There is no remedy: I must coney-catch, I must shift.

Pistol.
Young ravens must have food.

Falstaff.
Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pistol.
I ken the wight: he is of substance good.

Falstaff.
My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pistol.
Two yards, and more.

Falstaff.
No quips now, Pistol: indeed I am in the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife: I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be Englished rightly, is, "I am Sir John Falstaff's."

Pistol.
He hath studied her will, and translated her will; out of honesty into English.

Nym.
The anchor is deep: will that humour pass?

Falstaff.
Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her husband's purse; he hath legions of angels.

Pistol.
As many devils entertain, and "To her, boy," say I.

Nym.
The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Falstaff.
I have writ me here a letter to her; and here another to Page's wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examin'd my parts with most judicious collides: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pistol.
Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym.
I thank thee for that humour.

Falstaff.
O! she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning glass. Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me: they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford. We will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pistol.
Shall I sir Pandarus of Troy become, [all] And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take

Nym.
I will run no base humour: here, take the humour-letter. I will keep the 'haviour of reputation.

Falstaff.
Hold, sirrah, [to Robin] bear you these letters tightly: Sall like my pinnace to these golden shores.—Rogues, hence! avant! vanish like halitones, go; [pack!] Trudge, plod away o' the hoof; seek shelter, Falstaff will learn the humour of this age, French thrift, you rogues: myself, and skirted page.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.

Pistol.
Let vultures gripe thy guts? I for gourd, and fallam holds. And high and low beguile the rich and poor. Tester I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack Base Phrygian Turk.

Nym.
I have operations, which be humours of revenge.

Pistol.
Wilt thou revenge?

Nym.
By welkin, and her star.

Pistol.
With wit, or steel?

Nym.
With both the humours, I: I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pistol.
And I to Ford shall eke unfold, How Falstaff, varlet vile, His dove will prove, his gold will hold, And his soft couch defile.

Nym.
My humour shall judge cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humour.
SCENE IV. A Room in Dr. Caius’s House.

Enter Mrs. Quickly, Simple, and Rugby.

Quickly.

What, John Rugby!—I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, I' faith, and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience, and the king's English.

I'll go watch. [Exit Rugby.

Quickly.

Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way, but nobody but has his fault; but let that pass. Peter Simple, you say your name is?

Simple.

Ay, for fault of a better.

Quickly.

And master Slender's your master?

Simple.

Ay, forsooth.

Quickly.

Does he not wear a great round beard, like a glover's paring-knife?

Simple.

No, forsooth: he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard; a Caius-coloured beard.

Quickly.

A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Simple.

Ay, forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a warrener.

Quickly.

How say you?—O I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait?

Simple.

Yes, indeed, does he.

Quickly.

Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter Rugby.

Quickly.

Rugby.

Out, alas! here comes my master.

Simple.

We shall all be shent. Run in here, good young man; go into this closet. [Shuts Simple in the closet.] He will not stay long.—What, John Rugby! John, what, John, I say!—Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt, he be not well, that he comes not home:—" and down, down, adown-a," &c.

Sings.

Enter Dr. Caius.

Caius.

Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys. Pray you, go and vetch me in my closet un boitier verd; a box, a green-a box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.

Quickly.

Ay, forsooth; I'll fetch it you. [Aside.] I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad.

Caius.

Fe, fe, fe! ma fée, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la cour,—la grande affaire.

Quickly.

Is it this, sir?

Caius.

Ou; mette le au mon pocket; dépêche, quickly.—Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Quickly.

What, John Rugby! John!

Rugby.

Here, sir.

Caius.

You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rugby.

'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius.

By my trot, I tarry too long. — Od's me! Qu'at je oublié? dere is some simples in my closet, dat I will not for the varld I shall leave behind.

Quickly. [Aside.

Ah me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Caius.

O diable, diable! vat is in my closet?—Villainy! larron! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier!

Quickly.

Good master, be content.

Caius.

Verefore shall I be content-a?

Quickly.

The young man is an honest man.

Caius.

Vat shall the honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quickly.

I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic; hear the truth of it: he came of an errand to me from parson Hugh.

Caius.

Vell.

Simple.

Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Quickly.

Peace, I pray you.

Caius.

Peace-a your tongue!—Speak-a your tale.

Simple.

To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to mistress Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quickly.

This is all, indeed, I; but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caius.

Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, balances me some paper: tarry you a little-a while.

[Writes.

Quickly.

I am glad he is so quiet; if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy.—But notwithstanding, man, I'll do you your master what good I can:
ACT II. Sc. I.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself—

Simple.

'Tis a great charge, to come under one body's hand.

Quickly.

Are you avise'd o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late—but notwithstanding, to tell you in your ear, (I would have no words of it) my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that, I know Anne's mind; that's neither here nor there.

Caius.

You jack'nape, give-a dis letter to sir Hugh; by gar, it is a shallenege: I will cut his trout in de park; and I will teach a scurry Jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make.—You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here:—by gar, I will cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog.

[Exit Caius.]

Quickly.

Alas! he speaks but for his friend.

Caius.

It is no matter—a for dat:—do not you tell-a me, dat I shall have Anne Page for myself?—By gar, I will kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine Host of de Jarretière to measure our weapon.—By gar, I will myself have Anne Page.

Quickly.

Syr, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate: what, the good year!

Caius.

Rugby, come to the court vit me.—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door.—Follow my heels, Rugby.

[Exeunt Caius and Rugby.]

Quickly.

You shall have An fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do, nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fenton.

Who's within there, ho?

Quickly.

Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

[Enter Fenton.]

Fenton.

How now, good woman! how dost thou?

Quickly.

The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fenton.

What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quickly.

In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fenton.

Shall I do any good, think'st thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quickly.

Troth, sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding, master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book, she loves you.—Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fenton.

Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quickly.

Well, thereby hangs a tale.—Good faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread:—we had an hour's talk of that wart.—I shall never laugh but in that maid's company;—but, indeed, she is given too much to allicholf and missing. But for you—well, go to.

Fenton.

Well, I shall see her to-day. Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me—

Quickly.

Will I? 'tis faith, that we will; and I will tell your worship more of the wart. the next time we have confidence, and of other woors.

Fenton.

Well, farewell; I am in great haste now.

[Exit.]

Quickly.

Farewell to your worship. Truly an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not, for I know Anne's mind as well as another does:—Out upon 't! what have I forgot?

[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. Before Page's House.

Enter Mistress Page, with a Letter.

Mistress Page.

What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holy-day time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see. [Reads.]

"Ask me no reason why I love you; for though love use reason for his precision, he admits him not for his counsellor. You are not as good, no more am I: go to then, there's sympathy. You are merry, am I; ha! ha! then, there's more sympathy: you love sack, and so do I; would you desire b-tter sympathy? Let it suffice thee, mistress Page, (at the least, if the love of soldier cannot suffice) that I love thee. I will not say, pity me, 'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me. By me, Thine own true knight, By day or night, Or any kind of light, With all his might, For thee to fight."

John Falstaff.

What a Herod of Jewry is this!—O wicked, wicked, world!—one that is well nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What an unworthy behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard plecked (with the devil's name) out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company.—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my mirth:—heaven forgive me!—Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of fat men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

[Enter Mistress Ford.]

Mrs. Ford.

Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house.

Mrs. Page.
Mrs. Page.
And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford.
Nay, I'll ne'er believe that: I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page.
Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs. Ford.
Well, I do then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary. O, mistress Page! give me some counsel.

Mrs. Page.
What's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford.
O woman! if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour.

Mrs. Page.
Hang the trife, woman; take the honour. What is it?—dispense with trifes;—what is it?

Mrs. Ford.
If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page.
What?—thou liest. —Sir Alice Ford! —These knights will have a hack; and so, thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford.
We burn day-light: —here, read, read;—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: and yet he would not swear, praised women's modesty, and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they do not more adhere and keep place together, than the hundredth psalm to the tune of "Green Sleeves." What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? —How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease. —Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page.
Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs! —To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant, he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, (sure more) and these are of the second edition. He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two: I had rather be a giantess, and lie under mount Peto- tion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford.
Why, this is the very same: the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page.
Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own modesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have bored me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford.
Boarding call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page.
So will I: if he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine Host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford.
Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may notully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page.
Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an un-measurable distance.

Mrs. Ford.
You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page.
Let's consult together against this greedy knight. Come hither. [They retire.

Enter Ford, Pistol, Page, and Nym.
Ford.
Well, I hope, it be not so.

Pistol.
Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford.
Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pistol.
He woos both high and low, both rich and poor.
Both young and old, one with another, Ford. He loves the gally-mawfr: Ford, percapud.

Ford.
Love my wife?

Pistol.
With liver burning hot: prevent, or go thou, Like sir Acteon he, with Ring-wood at thy O! odious is the name. [heels.

Ford.
What name, sir?

Pistol.
The horn, I say. Farewell:
Take heed; have open eye, for thieves do foot by night: —[do sing. —Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds Away, sir corporal Nym.— Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit Pistol. Ford.
I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nym.
And this is true: [to Page.] I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours: I should have borne the humoured letter to her, but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is corporal Nym: I speak, and I avouch 'tis true:—my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife. —Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese. Adieu. [Exit Nym.

Page.
The humour of it, quoth 'a! here's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

Ford.
I will seek out Falstaff.

Page.
I never heard such a drawing-affecting rogue.

Ford.
If I do find it, well.

Page.
I will not believe such a Catarin, though the priest o' the town commended him for a true man.

'Twas a good sensible fellow: well.

How now, Meg?

Page.

Whither go you, George?—Hark you.

Page.

How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?

Ford.

I melancholy! I am not melancholy.—Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford.

'Faith, thou hast some crotchetts in thy head now.—Will you go, mistress Page?

Mrs. Ford.

Have with you.—You'll come to dinner, George?—[Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Look, who comes yonder: she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Mrs. Ford.

Trust me, I thought on her; she'll fit it.

Mrs. Page.

You are come to see my daughter Anne?

Quickly.

Page.

Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good mistress Anne?

Mrs. Page.

Go in with us, and see; we have an hour's talk with you.

[Exeunt Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.

Ford.

How now, master Ford?

Page.

You heard what this knife told me, did you not?

Yes; and you heard what the other told me.

Ford.

Do you think there is truth in them?

Page.

Hang 'em, slaves: I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him, in his intent against our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men; very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford.

Were they his men?

Page.

Marry, were they.

Ford.

I like it never the better for that.—Does he lie at the Garter?

Page.

Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford.

I do not misdoubt my wife, but I would be loath to turn them together. A man may be too confident: I would have nothing lie on my head. I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page.

Look, where my ranting Host of the Garter comes. There is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily.—How now, mine host!

Enter Host, and Shallow.

Host.

How now, bully-rook! thou'rt a gentleman. Cavaliro-justice, I say.

Shallow.

I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good master Page. Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host.

Tell him, cavaliro-justice; tell him, bully-rook.

Shallow.

Sir, there is a fray to be fought between sir Hugh, the Welsh priest, and Caius, the French doctor.

Ford.

Good mine Host o' the Garter, a word with you.

Host.

What say'st thou, my bully-rook?

[They go aside.

Shallow.

Will you go?—[to Page] go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons, and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places; for, believe me, I hear, the person is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host.

Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

Ford.

None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him, my name is Brook; only for a jest.

Host.

My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook. It is a merry knight.—Will you go, An-heires?

Shallow.

Have with you, mine host.

Page.

I have heard, the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shallow.

Tut, sir! I could have told you more: in these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoc-cadoes, and I know not what: 'tis the heart, master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time, with my long sword, I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host.

Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?

Page.

Have with you.—I had rather hear them scold than fight.

[Exeunt Host, Shallow, and Page.

Ford.

Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily: she was in his company at Page's house and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look farther into't; and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed.
SCENE II. A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Falstaff.
I will not lend thee a penny.

Pistol.
Why, then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open.—

Falstaff.
Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and you, coach-fellow, Nym; or else you had looked through the grate, like a gemini of baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen, my friends, you were good soldiers, and tall fellows; and when mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pistol.
Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Falstaff.
Reason, you rogue, reason: think'st thou, I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibel for you:—go. A short knife and a thong:—to your major of Pickst-hatch, go.—You'll not hear a letter for me, you rogue!—you stand upon your honour! Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do, to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, I, myself sometimes, learning the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to hurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensonce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you?

Pistol.
I do relent: what wouldst thou more of man?

Enter Robin.

Robin.
Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Falstaff.
Let her approach.

Enter Mistress Quickly.

Quickly.

Give your worship good-morrow.

Falstaff.
Good-morrow, good wife.

Quickly.

Not so, an't please your worship.

Falstaff.
Good maid, then.

Quickly.

I'll be sworn, as my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Falstaff.
I do believe the swearer. What with me?

Quickly.

Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Falstaff.
Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quickly.

There is one mistress Ford, sir:—I pray, come a little nearer this ways. —I myself dwell with master Doctor Caius.

Falstaff.
Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quickly.

Your worship says very true:— I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Falstaff.
I warrant thee, nobody hears:—mine own people, mine own people.

Quickly.

Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Falstaff.
Well: Mistress Ford:—what of her?

Quickly.

Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, lord! your worship's a wanton: well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Falstaff.
Mistress Ford:—come, mistress Ford,—

Quickly.

Marry, this is the short and the long of it. You have brought her into such a canaries, as 'tis wonderful: the best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary: yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, all musk, and so rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart, and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her;—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all; and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Falstaff.
But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quickly.

Marry, she hath received your letter, for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify, that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Falstaff.
Ten and eleven?

Quickly.

Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of: master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealousy man; she leads a very fram-pold life with him, good heart.

Falstaff.
Ten and eleven. — Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quickly.

Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship: mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too;—and let me tell you in your ear, she's as farfous a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss you morning or evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoe'er be the other: and she bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldom from home, but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man:
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR

man: surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Falstaff.
Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quickly.

Blessing on your heart, sir!

But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quickly.
That were a jest, indeed: they have not so little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed! But mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and, truly, master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will; and, truly, she deserves it, for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Why, I will.

Quickly.
Nay, but do so, then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and, in any case, have a mayday, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand anything: for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness; old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Falstaff.
Fare thee well: commend me to them both. There's my purse: am I not thy debtor. — Boy, go along with this woman.—This news distracts me.

[Exit Quickly and Robin.

Pistol.
This punk is one of Cupid's carriages.—Clap on more sails; pursuie, up with your fights: Give fire! She is my prize, or ocean whelm them all! [Exit Pistol.

Falstaff.
Say'st thou so, old Jack? go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee: let them say, 'tis grossly done; so it be fairly done, no matter.

Enter Bardolph.

Bardolph.
Sir John, there's one master Brook below who'd fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Brook, is his name?

Ay, sir.

Bardolph.

Call him in; [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah! 'tis I, mistress Ford and mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to; via la;

Re-enter Bardolph, with Ford disguised.

Ford.
Bless you, sir.

Falstaff.
And you, sir: would you speak with me?

Ford.
I make bold, to press with so little preparation upon you.

Falstaff.
You're welcome. What's your will?—Give us leave, drawer. [Exit Bardolph.

Ford.
Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much: my name is Brook.

Falstaff.
Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford.
Good sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you, for I must let you understand, I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are; the which hath something embolden'd me to this unseasoned intrusion, for, they say, if money go before all ways do lie open.

Falstaff.
Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford.
Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me; if you will help to bear it, sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Falstaff.
Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford.
I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Falstaff.
Speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Falstaff.
Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you,—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sth you yourself know, how easy it is to be such an offender.

Falstaff.
Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford.
There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Falstaff.
Well, sir.

Ford.
I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion, that could but nigardly give me sight of her: not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given. Briefly, I have pursued her, as love hath pursued me, which hath been, on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none, unless experience be a jewel; that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this:

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that she flies, and flying what pursues

Falstaff.
Falstaff.

Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Falstaff. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Falstaff. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Falstaff. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

O sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it.—There is money; spend it, spend it: spend more; spend all I have, only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable sieve to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Falstaff. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks, you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O I understand my drift. She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her, then, from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me. What say you to't, sir John?

Falstaff. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

O good sir!

I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, sir John; you shall want none.

Falstaff. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook; you shall want none. I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Falstaff. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not.—Yet I wrong him, to call him poor; they say, the jealous wittily knave hath masses of money, for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffers, and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Falstaff. Hang him, meechanical salt-butter rogue! I will scare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor over the cuckold's horns: master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night.—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, master Brook, shalt know him for a knave and cuckold.—Come to me soon at night.

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!—My heart is ready to crack with impatience.—Who says, this is improvident jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Could any man have thought this?—See the hell of having a false woman! my bed shall be abused, my coifers ransacked, my reputation gnawed at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names!—Aamaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbaros, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but cuckold! wittol! cuckold the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass; he will trust his wife; he will not be jealous; I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, parson Hugh the Welchman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vite bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they make effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised for my jealousy!—Eleven o'clock the hour: I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon, than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold!

[Exit.

SCENE III. Windsor Park.

Enter Caius and Rugby.

Jack Rugby!

Calus.

Rugby.

Sir.

Calus.

Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rugby.

'Tis past the hour, sir, that sir Hugh promised to meet.

Calus.

By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come: he has pray his Pible veil, dat he is no come. By gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rugby.
Act III. Sc. I. MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Rugby.

He is wise, sir; he knew your worship would kill him if he came.

Caius.

By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I will tell you how I will kill him.

Rugby.

Alas, sir! I cannot fence.

Caius.

Villainy, take your rapier.

Rugby.

Forbear; here's company.

Enter Host, Shallow, Slender, and Page.

Host.

Bless thee, bully doctor.

Shallow.

Save you, master doctor Caius.

Page.

Now, good master doctor.

Slender.

Give you good-morrow, sir.

Caius.

Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for?

Host.

To see thee fight, to see thee join, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? Is he dead, my Francico? ha, bully! What says my Esculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder? ha! is he dead, bully-stale? is he dead?

Caius.

By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of the world; he is not show his face.

Host.

Thou art a Castilian-king-Urinal: Hector of Greece, my boy.

Caius.

I pray you, bear witness that me have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.

Shallow.

He is the wiser master doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies; if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions. Is it not true, master Page?

Page.

Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shallow.

Bodykius, master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one. Though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, master Page.

Page.

'Tis true, master Shallow.

Shallow.

It will be found so, master Page. Master doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace; you have showed yourself a wise physician, and sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman. You must go with me, master doctor.

Host.

Pardon, guest-justice: — a word, monsieur Mock-water.

Caius.

Mock-vater I vat is dat?

Host.

Mock-water in our English tongue is valour, bully.

Caius.

By gar, then, I have as much mock-vater as de Englishman. — Scurvy jack-dog priest! by gar, me will cut his ears.

Host.

He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.

Caius.

Clapper-de-claw I vat is dat?

Host.

That is, he will make thee amends.

Caius.

By gar, me do look, he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me will him.

Host.

And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.

Caius.

Me tank you for dat.

Host.

And moreover, bully. — But first, master guest, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slender, go you through the town to Frogmore. [Aside to them.

Page.

Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host.

He is there; see what humour he is in, and I will bring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?

Shallow.

We will do it.

Adieu, good master doctor. [Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Caius.

By gar, me will kill de priest, for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host.

Let him die. Sheath thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler. Go about the fields with me through Frogmore; I will bring thee where mistress Anne Page is, at a farm-house a feasting, and thou shall woo her. Cried I, aim? said I well?

Caius.

By gar, me tank you vor dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lord, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host.

For the which I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page: said I well?

Caius.

By gar, tis good; vell said.

Host.

Let us wag then.

Shallow.

Come at my heels, Jack Caius. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I. A Field near Frogmore.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans.

I PRAY you now, good master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which which way have you looked for master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physick?

Simple.

Marry, sir, the petty-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Evans.

I most vehemently desire you, you will also look that way.

I will, sir.

Evans.

Pless my soul! how full of choler I am, and trembling of mind! — I shall be glad, if he have deceived me. — How melancholy I am! — I will knog his urinals about his knave’s costard, when I have good opportunities for the ‘ork: — pless my soul! [Sings.

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our pots of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.
To shallow —

Simple.

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry.

Melodious birds sing madrigals;
When as I sat in Babylon,
And a thousand vagrant posies.
To shallow —

Simple. [Coming forward.

Yonder he is coming, this way, sir Hugh.

Evans.

He’s welcome. —

To shallow rivers, to whose falls —

Heaven prosper the right! — What weapons is he?

Simple.

No weapons, sir. There comes my master, master Shallow, and another gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Evans.

Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Shallow.

How now, master parson! Good morrow, good sir Hugh. Keep a gamerster from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slender.

Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page.

Save you, good sir Hugh.

Evans.

Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you!

Shallow.

What! the sword and the word? do you study them both, master parson?

Page.

And youthful still. In your doublet and hose, this raw rheumatic day?

Evans.

There is reasons and causes for it.

Page.

We are come to you to do a good office, master parson.

Evans.

Fery well: what is it?

Page.

Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who, belike having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

Shallow.

I have lived fourscore years, and upward, I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Evans.

What is he?

Page.

I think you know him; master doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Evans.

Got’s will, and his passion of my heart! I had a lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page.

Why?

Evans.

He has no more knowledge in Hippocrates and Galen, — and he is a knave besides: a cowardly knave, as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page.

I warrant you, he’s the man should fight with him.

Slender.

O, sweet Anne Page!

Shallow.

It appears so, by his weapons. — Keep them asunder: — here comes doctor Caius.

Enter Host, Caius, and Rugby.

Page.

Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

Shallow.

So do you, good master doctor

Host.

Disarm them, and let them question: let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Caius.

I pray you, let—a me speak a word vit your ear: verefore will you not meet a—me?

Evans.

Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Caius.

By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.

Evans.

Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men’s humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends. — I will knog your urinals about your knave’s cogscomb for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius.

Diabe! — Jack Rugby, — mine Host de Jarretière, have I not stay for him, to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Evans.

As I am a Christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed. I’ll be judgement by mine Host of the Garter.

Host.

Caius.

Ay, dat is very good: excellent.

Host.

Peace, I say! hear mine Host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions, potions, and the motions. Shall I lose my parson? my priest? my sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the noverbs. — Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so: — Give me thy hand, celestial; so. — Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places:
your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt-sack be the issue. — Come, lay their swords to pawn. — Follow me, lad of peace;
follow, follow, follow.

Shallow.

Trust me, a mad host. — Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Slender.

O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt Shallow, Slender, Page, and Host.]

Caius.

Ha! do I perceive dat? have you make-a de sot of us? ha, ha!

Evans.

This is well; he has made us his laughingstock. — I desire you, that we may be friends, and let us knog our brains together to be revenge on this same scall, scurry, cogg深深 companion, the Host of the Garter.

Caius.

By gar, vit all my heart. He promise to bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Evans.

Well, I will smile his noddles. — Pray you, follow. — [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A Street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

Mrs. Page.

Nay, keep your way, little gallant: you were want to be a follower, but now you are a leader.
Whether had you rather, lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Robin.

I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page.

O! you are a flattering boy: now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

Ford.

Well met, mistress Page. Whither go you?

Mrs. Page.

Truly, sir, to see your wife: is she at home?

Ford.

Ay: and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company. I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page.

Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford.

Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

Mrs. Page.

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of. — What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Robin.

Sir John Falstaff.

Ford.

Sir John Falstaff?

Mrs. Page.

He, he; I can never hit on't name. — There is such a league between my good man and he!
Is your wife at home, indeed?
have sport; I will show you a monster.—Master doctor, you shall go:—so shall you, master Page; and you, sir Hugh.

Shallow.

Well, fare you well. —We shall have the freer woofing at master Page's.

[Exeunt Shallow and Slender. Caius.

Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

[Exit Rugby.

Host.

Farewell, my hearts. I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

[Exit Host.

Ford.

[Aside. I think, I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, genties?

All.

Have with you, to see this monster. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Room in Ford's House. Enter Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Ford.

What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs. Page.

Quickly, quickly. Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford.

I warrant.—What, Robin, I say!

Enter Servants with a large Basket. Mrs. Page.

Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford.

Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page.

Give your men the charge: we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford.

Marry, as I told you before, John, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or staggering) take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page.

You will do it?

Mrs. Ford.

I have told them over and over; they lack no direction. Be gone, and come when you are called. [Exeunt Servants.

Mrs. Page.

Here comes little Robin.

Enter Robin.

Mrs. Ford.

How now, my eyas-musket! what news with you?

Robin.

My master, sir John, is come in at your back-door, mistress Ford, and requests your company.

Mrs. Page.

You little Jack-a-lent, have you been true to us?

Robin.

Ay, I'll be sworn: my master knows not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it, for he swears he'll turn me away.

ACT III. Sc. III.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do, or else I could not be in that mind.

Robin. [Within.]

Mistress Ford! mistress Ford! here's mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Falstaff. She shall not see me. I will ensorce me behind the arrears.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very tattling woman.

Enter Mistress Page and Robin. What's the matter? how now!

Mrs. Ford. O mistress Ford! what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you're undone for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion? — Out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas! what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman, that he says, is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence. You are undone.

Mrs. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here; but 'tis most certain your husband's coming, with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one: I come before to tell you. If you know yourself clear, why I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amazed; call all your senses to you: defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do? — There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame, so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound, he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame I never stand "you had rather," and "you had rather:" your husband's here at hand; betheking you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him. — O, how have you deceived me! — Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: or, it is whiting-time, send him by your two men to Datchet mead.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there. What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Falstaff. Let me see't, let me see't! O, let me see't!

I'll in, I'll in. — Follow your friend's counsel. — I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What! sir John Falstaff? Are these your letters, knight?

Falstaff. I love thee: help me away; let me creep in here; I'll never —

[He gets into the basket: they cover him with foul linen.]

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men, mistress Ford. — You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! [Exit Robin. Re-enter Servants.] Go, take up these clothes here, quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble: carry them to the laundress in Datchet mead; quickly, come.

Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans. Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it. — How now! whether you bear this?

Servants. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck! I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck buck? Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck, and of the season too, it shall appear.

[Exit Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night: I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant, we'll unkennel the fox. — Let me stop this way first: — so, now uncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, master Page. — Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.]

Evans. This is very fantastical humour, and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen: see the issue of his search. [Exit Page, Evans, and Caius.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket?

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so, throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think, my husband hath some special suspicion

If there be one or two, I shall make a de turd.

Ford.

Pray you go, master Page.

Evans.

I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Calus.

Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Evans.

A lousy knave! to have his gibes, and his mockeries.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Room in Page's House.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

Fenton,

I see, I cannot get thy father's love;
Therefore, no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne.

Alas! how then?

Fenton.

Why, thou must be thyself.
He doth object, I am too great of birth,
And that my state being gull'd with my
I seek to heal it only by his wealth. [expense,
Besides these, other bars he lays before me, —
My riots past, my wild societies;
And tells me, 'tis a thing impossible
I should love thee, but as a property.

Anne.

May be, he tells you true.

Fenton.

No, heaven so speed me in my time to come!
Albeit, I will confess, thy father's wealth
Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne:
Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags;
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.

Anne.

Gentle master Fenton,
Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir:
If opportunity and humblest suit
Cannot attain it, why then,—Hark you hither.
[They converse apart.

Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mrs. Quickly.

Shallow.

Break their talk, mistress Quickly, my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slender.

I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't. 'Slid, 'tis but venturing.

Be not dismay'd.

Shallow.

No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that,—but that I am afeard.

Quickly.

Hark ye; master Slender would speak a word with you.

Anne.

I come to him.—This is my father's choice.
O! what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!

Quickly.

And how does good master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shallow.

She's coming; to her, coz. O boy! thou hast a father.

Slender.

Slender.
I had a father, mistress Anne: my uncle can tell you good jests of him. — Pray you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shallow
Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Slender.
Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shallow.
He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slender.
Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a 'quire.

Shallow.
He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne.
Good master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shallow.
Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I'll leave you.

Anne.
Now, master Slender.

Slender.
Now, good mistress Anne.

Anne.
What is your will?

Slender.
My will! od's heartlings! that's a pretty jest, indeed. I never made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Anne.
I mean, master Slender, what would you with me?

Slender.
Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you. Your father, and my uncle, have made motions: if it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go, better than I can: you may ask your father; here he comes.

Enter Page and Mistress Page

Page.
Now, master Slender! — Love him, daughter Anne.

Why, how now! what does master Fenton here? You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house: I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fenton.
Nay, master Page, be not impatient. Mrs. Page.

Good master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page.
She is no match for you. Fenton.

Sir, will you hear me?

Page.
No, good master Fenton. —

Come, master Shallow; — come, son Slender; in — Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton.

Speak to mistress Page.

Fenton.

Good mistress Page, for that I love your daughter

In such a righteous fashion as I do, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and man— I must advance the colours of my love, [noes, And not retire: let me have your good will.

Anne.
Good mother, do not marry me to yond' fool.

Mrs. Page.
I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.

Quickly.
That's my master, master doctor.

Anne.
Alas! I had rather be set quick i' the earth, And bowl'd to death with turnips.

Mrs. Page.
Come, trouble not yourself. Good master Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy: My daughter will I question how she loves you, And as I find her, so am I affected. 'Till then, farewell, sir: she must needs go in; Her father will be angry.

[Exeunt Mrs. Page and Anne.

Fenton.
Farewell, gentle mistress. — Farewell, Nan. Quickly.

This is my doing, now.— Nay, said I, will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? look on master Fenton. — This is my doing. Fenton.

I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to-night Give my sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.

[Exit.

Quickly.

Now, heaven send her good fortune! A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had mistress Anne; or I would master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would master Fenton had her. I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but speciously for master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it.

[Exit.

SCENE V. A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff.
Bardolph, I say!

Bardolph.
Here, sir.

Falstaff.
Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in't. [Exit Bardolph. —] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a blind bitch's puppies, fifteen i' the litter; and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelby and shallow; a death that I abhor, for the water swells a man, and what a thing should I have been, when I had been sweiled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Re-enter Bardolph, with the wine.

Bardolph.
Here's mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.
Falstaff.

Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold, as if I had swallowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bardolph.

Come in, woman.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quickly.

By your leave.—I cry you mercy: give your worship good-morrow.

Falstaff.

Take away these chalices. Go brew me a potte of sack finelie.

Bardolph.

With eggs, sir?

Falstaff.

Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage.—[Exit Bardolph.]—How now! Quickly.

Marry, sir, I come to your worship from mistress Ford.

Falstaff.

Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

Quickly.

Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

Falstaff.

So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise. Quickly.

Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a birding; she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Falstaff.

Well, I will visit her: tell her so; and bid her think, what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit. Quickly.

I will tell her.

Falstaff.

Do so. Between nine and ten, say'st thou?

Quickly.

Eight and nine, sir.

Falstaff.

Well, be gone: I will not miss her.

Quickly.

Peace be with you, sir. [Exit. Falstaff.

I marvel, I hear not of master Brook: he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well. O! here he comes.

Enter Ford.

Ford.

Bless you, sir.

[Exit. Falstaff.

Now, master Brook; you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford.

That, indeed, sir John, is my business.

Falstaff.

Master Brook, I will not lie to you. I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford.

And sped you, sir?

Falstaff.

Very ill-favouredly, master Brook.

Ford.

How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Falstaff.

No, master Brook; but the peaking cornuto her husband, master Brook, dwelling in a continual larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford.

What! while you were there?

Falstaff.

While I was there.

Ford.

And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Falstaff.

You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and by her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford.

A buck-basket!

Falstaff.

By the Lord, a buck-basket: rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, and greasy napkins; that, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell, that ever offended nostril.

Ford.

And how long lay you there?

Falstaff.

Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered, to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knives, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quaked for fear; lest he lunatic knave should have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook! I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether; next, to be compassed, like a good blibo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head; and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that, —a man of my kidney,—think of that; that am as subject to heat, as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw: it was a miracle to 'scope suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse shoe; think of that, —hissing hot,—think of that, master Brook.

Ford.

In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit, then, is desperate; you'll undertake her no more?

Falstaff.

Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etna, as I have
ACT IV.

SCENE I.  The Street.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Quickly, and William.

William.

I have been into Thames. ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, master Brook.

Ford.

'Tis past eight already, sir.

Falstaff.

Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to you at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed, and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her: adieu. You shall have her, master Brook; master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford. [Exit Ford.

Hum: ha! Is this a vision? Is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake I awake, master Ford! there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. This 'tis to be married: this 'tis to have linen, and buck-baskets.—Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house: he cannot escape me: 'tis impossible he should: he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make me mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad.

ACT IV.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR. 69

Two.

William.

Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, od's nouns.

Evans.

Peace your tattlings!—What is fair, William?

William.

Pulcher.

Quickly.

Pole-cats! there are fairer things than pole-cats, sure.

Evans.

You are a very simplicity 'oman: I pray you, peace.—What is lapis, William?

William.

A stone.

Evans.

And what is a stone, William?

William.

A pebble.

Evans.

No, it is lapis: I pray you remember in your pain.

William.

Lapis.

Evans.

That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

William.

Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, horum, hoc.

Evans.

Nominativo, hig, hag, hag:—pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

William.

Accusativo, hinc.

Evans.

I pray you, have your remembrance, child: accusativo, hing, hang, hog.

Quickly.

Hang hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Evans.

Leave your prabbles, 'oman.—What is the focative case, William?

William.

O—vocativo, O.

Evans.

Remember, William; focative is, caret.

Quickly.

And that's a good root.

Evans.

'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page.

Peace!

Evans.

What is your genitive case plural, William?

William.

Genitive case?

Evans.

Ay.

William.

Genitive,—horum, horum, horum.

Quickly.

Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her!—Never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Evans.

For shame, 'oman!

Quickly.
Quickly.
You do ill to teach the child such words.—He teaches him to hie and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves; and to call horum,—oh upon you!

Evans.
'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers of the genders. Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page.
Pr'ythee hold thy peace.

Evans.

Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

William.

Forssoth, I have forgot.

Evans.

It is qui, quae, quod; if you forget your quis, your quae, and your quod, you must be preeches. Go your ways, and play; go.

Mrs. Page.

He is a better scholar, than I thought he was.

Evans.

He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, mistress Page.

Mrs. Page.

Adieu, good sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we stay too long.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Ford.

Falstaff.

Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance. I see, you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, Mrs. Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford.

He's a birding, sweet sir John.

Mrs. Page.

[Within.

What hoa! gossip Ford! what hoa!

Mrs. Ford.

Step into the chamber, sir John.

[Exit Falstaff.

Enter Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Page.

How now, sweetheart! who's at home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford.

Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page.

Indeed?

Mrs. Ford.

No, certainly. [Aside.] Speak louder.

Mrs. Page.

Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford.

Why?

Mrs. Page.

Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, "Peer-out, Peer-out!" that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford.

Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page.

Of none but him; and swears, he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own folly.

Mrs. Ford.

How near is he, mistress Page?

Mrs. Page.

Hard by; at street end: he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford.

I am undone! the knight is here.

Mrs. Page.

Why, then you are utterly ashamed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you!—Away with him, away with him: better shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford.

Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Falstaff.

No, I'll come no more i' the basket. May I not go out, ere he come?

Mrs. Page.

Alas, three of master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Falstaff.

What shall I do?—I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford.

There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces. Creep into the klin-hole.

Falstaff.

Where is it?

Mrs. Ford.

He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, cover, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: there is no hiding you in the house.

Falstaff.

I'll go out, then.

Mrs. Page.

If you go out in your own semblance, you die, sir John. Unless you go out disguised,—

Mrs. Ford.

How might we disguise him?

Mrs. Page.

Alas the day! I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Falstaff.

Good hearts, devise something: any extremity, rather than a mischief.

Mrs. Ford.

My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page.

On my word it will serve him; she's as big as he he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too.—Run up, sir John.

Mrs. Ford.

Go, go, sweet sir John; mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page.

Quick, quick: we'll come dress you straight; put on the gown the while. [Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Ford.

I would, my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears, she's a witch; forbade her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

Mrs. Page.

Heaven guide him to thy husband's cudgel, and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford.

But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page.

Ay, in good sadness, is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford.

We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page.

Nay, but he'll be here presently: lets go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford.

I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up, I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page.

Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot mis-use him enough. We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too: We do not act, that often jest and laugh; 'Tis old but true, 'Still swine eat all the grass.'

Mrs. Ford.

Re-enter Mrs. Ford, with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford.

Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him. Quickly! despatch.

1 Servant.

Come, come, take it up.

2 Servant.

Pray heaven, it be not full of knight again.

1 Servant.

I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford.

Ay, but if it prove true, master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again?—Set down the basket, villain.—Somebody call my wife.—Youth in a basket!—O you panderer rascals! there's a knot, a gling, a pack, a conspiracy against me: now shall the devil be shamed. —What, wife, I say! Come, come forth: behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page.

Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Evans.

Why, this is lunacies: this is mad as a mad dog.
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Act IV. Sc. II.

do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figures, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing.—Come down, you witch, you hag you; come down I say.

Mrs. Ford.

Nay, good, sweet husband.—Good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter Falstaff In Women's Clothes led by Mrs. Page.

Come, mother Pratt; come, give me your hand.

Ford.

I'll pratt her. — Out of my door, you witch! [beats him] you rag, you baggage, you polcent. you ronyon I out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you.

Mrs. Page.

Are you not ashamed? I think, you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford.

Nay, he will do it. — 'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford.

Hang her, witch!

Evans.

By yea and no, I think, the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a good beard; I spy a good beard under her muffler.

Ford.

Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy. If I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Page.

Let's obey his humour a little farther. Come, gentlemen.

[Exeunt Ford, Page, Shallow, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page.

Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford.

Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page.

I'll have the cudgel hallowed, and hung o'er the altar: it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford.

What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any farther revenge?

Mrs. Page.

The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him: if the devil have him not in fee simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford.

Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page.

Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any farther afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford.

I'll warrant, they'll have him publicly shamed, and, methinks, there would be no period to the jest. Should he not be publicly shamed?

Mrs. Page.

Come, to the forge with it, then shape it: I would not have things cool.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Bardolph.

Bardolph.

Sir, the Germane desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host.

What duke should that be, comes so secretely? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlemen; they speak English?

Bardolph.

Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host.

They shall have my horses, but I'll make them pay: I'll sauce them: they have had my houses a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them. Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford and Sir Hugh Evans.

Evans.

'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page.

And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page.

Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford.

Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou I rather will suspect the sun with cold, [wilt; Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy In him that was of late a heretic, [honour stand, As firm as faith.

Page.

'Tis well, 'tis well; no more. Be not as extreme in submission, As in offence; But let our plot go forward: let our wives Yet once again, to make us public sport, Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow, [it. Where we may take him, and disgrace him for Ford.

There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page.

How? to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight? fie, fie! he'll never come.

Evans.

You say, he has been thrown into the rivers, and has been grievously peaten, as an old 'oman: methinks, there should be terrors in him, that he should not come; methinks, his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page.

So think I too.

Mrs. Ford.

Devise but how you'll use him when he comes, And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page.

There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter, Sometimes a keeper here in Windsor forest, Doth all the winter time, at still midnight, Walk Walk round about an oak, with great ragg'd horns; and there he blasts the tree, and takes the And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a in a most hideous and dreadful manner. You have heard of such a spirit; and well you The superstitious Idle-headed edd (know, received, and did deliver to our age, Page. Why, yet there want not many, that do fear To deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak. But what of this? Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device; That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us, Disguis'd like Herne, with huge horns on his head. Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come, And in this shape: when you have brought him thither, What shall be done with him? what is your plot? Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus. Nan Page my daughter, and my little son, And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress in white, Like urchins, ouphes, and fairies, green and With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads, And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden, As Falstaff she, and I, are newly met, Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once With some diffused song: upon their sight, We two in great amazedness will fly: Then, let them all encircle him about. And, fairy-like, to-pinches the unclean knight; And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel, In their so sacred paths he dares to tread, In shape profane. Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth, Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound, And burn him with their tapers. Mrs. Page. The truth being known, We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit, And mock him home to Windsor. Ford. The children must be practised well to this, or they'll ne'er do't. Evans. I will teach the children their behaviours; and I will he like a Jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber. Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy them vizards. Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies, Finely attired in a robe of white. Page. That silk will I go buy; [Aside.] and in that time Shall master Slender steal my Nan away, And marry her at Eton. [To them.] Go, send to Falstaff straight. Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Brook; He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he'll come. Mrs. Page. Fear not you that. Go, get us properties, And tricking for our fairies. Evans. Let us about it: it is admirable pleasures, and very honest knавeries. [Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans. Mrs. Page. Go, mistress Ford, Send Quickly to sir John, to know his mind. [Exit Mrs. Ford. I'll to the doctor: he hath my good will, And none but he, to marry with Nan Page. That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot; And he my husband best of all affects: The doctor is well money'd, and his friends Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her, Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her. [Exit. SCENE V. A Room in the Garter Inn. Enter Host and Simple. Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skinned? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap. Simple. Marry, sir, I come to speak with sir John Falstaff from master Slender. Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed, and truckle bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the prodigal, fresh and new. Go, knock and call; he'll speak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: knock, I say. Simple. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber: I'll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down; I come to speak with her, indeed. Host. Ha! a fat woman? the knight may be robbed: I'll call.—Bully knight! Bully sir John! speak from thy lungs military; art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls. Falstaff. How now, mine host! [Above. Host. Here's a Bohemian Tartar tarries the coming down of thy fat woman. Let her descend, bully, let her descend; my chambers are honourable: fie! privacy? fie! Enter Falstaff. Falstaff. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me, but she's gone. Simple. Pray you, sir, was not the wise woman of Brentford? Falstaff. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell: what would you with her? Simple. My master, sir, my master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nan, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no. Falstaff. I spake with the old woman about it. Simple. And what says she, I pray, sir? Falstaff. Marry, she says, that the very same man, that beguiled beguiled master Slender of his chain, cozened him of it.

I would, I could have spoken with the woman herself: I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Enter Doctor Caius. Caius.

Vere is mine Host de Jarretière? Host.

Here, master doctor, in perplexity, and doubtful dilemma.

Caius.

I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jar-manny: by my troth, dere is no duke, dat de court is know to come. I tell you for good vill plen.

Host.

Hue and cry, villain! go. — Assist me, knight; I am undone. — Fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone! [Exit Host and Bardolph.] Falstaff.

I would all the world might be cozened, for I have been cozened, and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgelled, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fishermen’s boots with me! I warrant, they would whip me with their finest wits, till I were as crestfallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I forswore myself at primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent. —

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Now, whence come you? Quickly.

From the two parties, forsooth. Falstaff.

The devil take one party, and his dam the other, and so they shall be both bestowed. I have suffered more for their sakes, more, than the villainous inconstancy of man’s disposition is able to bear. Quickly.

And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them: mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her. Falstaff.

What tell’st thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford: but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, deliver’d me, the knave constable had set me ‘tis the stocks, ‘tis the common stocks, for a witch. Quickly.

Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber; you shall hear how things go, and, I warrant, to your content. Here’s a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts! what ado here is to bring you together. Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed. Falstaff.

Come up into my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Fenton and Host. Fenton.

Master Fenton, talk not to me: my mind is heavy; I will give over all. Fenton.

Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purpose, And, as I am a gentleman, I’ll give thee A hundred pound in gold more than your less.
Host.
I will hear you, master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel.

Fenton.
From time to time I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page;
Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection
(So far forth as herself might be her chooser)
Even to my wish. I have a letter from her
Of such contents as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,
That neither, singly, can be manifested,
Without the show of both;—wherein fat Falstaff
Hath a great scene: the image of the jest
[showing the letter.]
I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine Host:
[one,]
To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and Must my sweet Nan present the fairy queen;
The purpose why, is here; in which disguise,
While other jests are something rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eton
Immediately to marry: she hath consented.
Now, sir, her mother, even strong against that match,
And firm for Dr. Caius, hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds,
And at the deanery, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot
She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath
Made promise to the doctor.—Now, thus it rests:
Her father means she shall be all in white:
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She shall go with him:—her mother hath in-
The better to denote her to the doctor, tendered,
(For they must all be mask'd and vizarded)
That quaint in green she shall be loose enrob'd,
With ribands pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token
The maid hath given consent to go with him.
Host.
Which means she to deceive? father or mother?
Fenton.
Both, my good host, to go along with me;
And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar
To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one,
And in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.
Host.
Well, husband your device: I'll to the vicar.
Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.
Fenton.
So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompence.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I. A Room in the Garter Inn.
Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Quickly.

FALSTAFF.
PRYTHEE, no more Prattling:—go:—I'll hold.
This is the third time; I hope, good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go. They say, there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quickly.
I'll provide you a chain, and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

FALSTAFF.
Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head,
and mince.

[Exit Mrs. Quickly.

Enter Ford.

How now, master Brook! Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford.
Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

FALSTAFF.
I went to her, master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave, Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you.—He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of a man, master Brook, I fear not Gobah with a weaver's beam, because I know also, life is a shuttle. I am in haste: go along with me;
I'll tell you all, master Brook. Since I plucked goose, played truant, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave
Ford, on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand.—Follow.
Strange things in hand, master Brook: follow.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Windsor Park.
Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Page.
Come, come: we'll cough 't the castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies.—Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Shallow.
Ay, forsooth: I have spoken with her and we how a pay-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry, "mum;" she cries, "budget," and by that we know one another.

Falstaff.
That's good too: but what needs either your "mum," or her "budget?" the white will decipher her well enough. — It hath struck ten o'clock.

Shallow.
The night is dark: light and spirits will become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Street in Windsor.
Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Dr. Caius.

Mrs. Page.
Master Doctor, my daughter is in green: when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly.
Go before into the park: we two must go together.

Caius.
I know vat I have to do. Adieu.

Mrs. Page.
fare you well, sir. [Exit Caius.] My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford.

Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies? and the Welsh devil, Hugh?

Mrs. Page.

They are all conched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with o' secured lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford.

That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page.

If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

Mrs. Ford.

We'll betray him finely.

Mrs. Page.

Against such lewdsters, and their lechery, Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford.

The hour draws on: to the oak, to the oak! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Windsor Park.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, and Fairies.

Evans.

Trib, trib, fairies: come; and remember your parts. Be bold, I pray you; follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-ords, do as I bid you. Come, come; trib, trib. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Another Part of the Park.

Enter Falstaff disguised, with a Buck's Head on.

Falstaff.

Divide me like a bribe-buck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman? ha! I speak like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome.

[Noise within.

Mrs. Page.

Alas! what noise?

Mrs. Ford.

Heaven forgive our sins!

Falstaff.

What should this be?

Mrs. Ford. Mrs. Page.

Away, away! [They run off.

Falstaff.

I think, the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, like a Satyr; Mrs. Quickly, and Pistol; Anne Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, dressed like fairies, with waxen tapers on their heads.

Queen.

Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, You moonshine revelers, and shades of night, You orphan-heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office, and your quality.— Crier Hobygoblin, make the fairy o' yez.

Pistol.

Elves, list your names: silence, you airy toys! Cricket, to Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths unswept, There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry: Our radiant queen hates sluts, and sluttary.

Falstaff.

They are fairies; he, that speaks to them, shall die: I'll wink and cough. No man their works must eye. [Lies down upon his face.

Evans.

Where's Bead?—Go you, and where you find a maid, That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said, Raise up the organs of your fancy, and Answer the band as careless infancy; But those as sleep, and think not on their sins, Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

Queen.

About, about! Search Windsor castle, elves, within and out: Strew good luck, ouphes, on every sacred room, That it may stand till the perpetual doom, Sleep as sound as careless infancy; But nightly, meadow-fairies, look, you sing, Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring; Th' expressure that it bears, green let it be, More fertile-fresh than all the field to see; And, Honi soit qui mal y pense, write, In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white; Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery, Buckled below fair knight's god's bending knee: Fairies, use flowers for their character. Away! disperse! But, till 'tis one o'clock, Our ACT V. SC. V.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Our dance of custom, round about the oak
Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Evans.
Pray you, lock hand in hand: yourselves in
And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree.
But, stay! I smell a man of middle earth.

Falstaff.
Heavens defend me from that Welch fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pistol.
Vile worm, thou wast o'er-look'd, even in thy birth.

Queen.
With trial-fire touch me his finger-end:
If he be chaste, the flame will back descend,
And turn him to no pain; but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

A trial I come.

Evans.
Come, will this wood take fire?
[They burn him with their tapers.

Falstaff.
Oh, oh, oh!

Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!
About him, fairies, sing a scornful rhyme;
And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

Song.

Fie on sinful fantasy!
Fie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a woeful fire,
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart, whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
Pinch him for his villany;
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles, and star-light, and moonshine be out.

During this song, the page plucks Falstaff:
Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; Siender another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Anne Page. A noise of hunting is made within. All the fairies run away. Falstaff pulls off his buck's head, and rises.

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, and Mrs. Ford. They lay hold on him.

Page.

Nay, do not fly: I think, we have watch'd you now.

Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs. Page.

I pray you come; hold up the jest no higher—
Now, good sir John, how like you Windsor wives?
See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes
Become the forest better than the town?

Ford.

Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?—Master
Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave;
here are his horns, master Brook: and, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to master Brook:
his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs. Ford.

Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will several take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deere.
and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page.

Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her, master Slender married her daughter.

Mrs. Page.

Doctors doubt that: if Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius' wife.

[Aside.

Enter Slender.

Slender.

Whoa, ho! ho! father Page!

Son, how now! how now, son! have you despatched?

Slender.

Despatched!—I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on't; would I were hanged, ha, else.

Page.

Of what, son?

Slender.

I came yonder at Elton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy: if it had not been i' the church, I would have swung him, or he should have swung me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a post-master's boy.

Page.

Upon my life, then, you took the wrong.

Slender.

What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: if I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page.

Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you, how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slender.

I went to her in white, and cried, "mum," and she cried "budget," as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Mrs. Page.

Good George, be not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter Doctor Caius.

Caius.

Veris mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened; I ha' married un garçon, a boy; un poisson, by gar, a boy: it is not Anne Page; by gar, I am cozened.

Mrs. Page.

Why, did you take her in green?

Caius.

Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor.

[Exit Caius.

Ford.

This is strange. Who hath got the right Anne?

Page.

My heart misgives me. Here comes master Fenton.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

How now, master Fenton!

Anne.

Pardon, good father! I good my mother, pardon!

Page.

Now, mistress; how chance you went not with master Slender?

Mrs. Page.

Why went you not with master doctor, maid? Fenton.

You do amaze her; hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully. Where there was no proportion held in love. The truth is, she and I, long since contracted, are now so sure, that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy that she hath committed; and this deceit loseth the name of craft, of disobedience, or undutious title, since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours, [upon her. Which forced marriage would have brought Ford.

Stand not amaz'd: here is no remedy. In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state: Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Falstaff.

I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

Page.

Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy. What cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Falstaff.

When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chas'd.

Mrs. Page.

Well, I will muse no farther. — Master Fenton, Heaven give you many, many merry days. — Good husband, let us every one go home, And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire; Sir John and all.

Ford.

Let it be so. — Sir John
To master Brook you yet shall hold your word; For he, to-night, shall lie with mistress Ford.

[Exeunt.
ACT I.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords, and Attendants.

ESCALUS!

My lord.

Duke.

Of government the properties to unfold, Would seem in me to affect speech and discourse; Since I am put to know, that your own science Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice My strength can give you: then, no more remains, Put that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able, And let them work. The nature of our people, Our city's institutions, and the terms For common justice, y' are as pregnant in As art and practice hath enriched any That we remember. There is our commission, From which we would not have you warp.—

Call hither, I say, bid come before us Angelo.—

Exit an Attendant.

What figure of us think you he will bear? For, you must know, we have with special soul Elected him our absence to supply, Lent him our terror, drest him with our love, And given his deputation all the organs Of our own power. What think you of it?

ESCALUS.

If any in Vienna be of worth To undergo such ample grace and honour, It is lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke.

Look, where he comes.

Angelo.

Always obedient to your grace's will, I come to know your pleasure.

Duke.

There is a kind of character in thy life, That, to th' observer, doth thy history Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings Are not thine own so proper, as to waste Thyself upon thy virtues, them on thee. Heaven doth with us, as we with torches do, Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike [touch'd, As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely But to fine issues; nor nature never lends The smallest scruple of her excellence, But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor. Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech To one that can my part in him advertise: Hold, therefore, Angelo: In our remove, be thou at full ourself; Mortality and mercy in Vienna Live in thy tongue and heart. Old Escalus, Though first in question, is thy secondary: Take thy commission.

Angelo.

Now, good my lord, Let there be some more test made of my metal, Before so noble and so great a figure Be stamped upon it.

Duke.
Duke.

No more evasion:
We have with a leaven'd and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of needful value. We shall write to you,
As time and our concerns shall importune,
How it goes with us; and do look to know
What doth befal you here. So, fare you well:
To the hopeful execution do I leave you
Of your commissions.

Angelo.

Yet, give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you something on the way.

My haste may not admit it;
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
With any scruple: your scope is as mine own,
So to enforce, or qualify the laws
As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand.
I'll privily away: I love the people,
But do not like to stage to them their eyes.
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and overs vehement,
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion,
That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.

Angelo.

The heavens give safety to your purposes!

Esclus.

Lead forth, and bring you back In happiness!

Duke.

I thank you. Fare you well. [Exit.

Esclus.

I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
To have freespeech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have, but of what strength and nature
I am not yet instructed.

Angelo.

'Tis so with me. Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

Esclus.

I'll wait upon your honour.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A Street.

Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio.

If the duke, with the other dukes, come not to composition with the king of Hungary, why then, all the dukes fall upon the king.

1 Gentleman.

Heaven grant us its peace, but not the king of Hungary's!

2 Gentleman.

Amen.

Lucio.

Thou concludest, like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2 Gentleman.

Thou shalt not steal?

Lucio.

Ay, that he rased.

1 Gentleman.

Why? 'Twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions; they put forth to steal. There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gentleman.

I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio.

I believe thee; for, I think, thou never wast where grace was said.

2 Gentleman.

No? a dozen times at least.

1 Gentleman.

What, in mete?

Lucio.

In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gentleman.

I think, or in any religion.

Lucio.

Ay; why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: as for example; thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.

1 Gentleman.

Well, there went but a pair of sheers between us.

Lucio.

I grant; as there may between the lists and the velvet; thou art the list.

1 Gentleman.

And thou the velvet; thou art good velvet; thou art a three-pil'd piece, I warrant thee. I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Lucio.

I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.

1 Gentleman.

I think, I have done myself wrong, have I not?

2 Gentleman.

Yes, that thou hast, whether thou art tainted, or free.

Lucio.

Behold, behold, where madam Mitigation comes!

1 Gentleman.

I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—

2 Gentleman.

To what, I pray?

Lucio.

Judge.

2 Gentleman.

To three thousand dollars a-year.

1 Gentleman.

Ay, and more.

Lucio.

A French crown more.

2 Gentleman.

Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error; I am sound.

Lucio.

Nay, not as one would say, healthy; but so sound as things that are hollow: thy bones are hollow; impiety has made a feast of thee.

Enter Bawd.

1 Gentleman.

How now? Which of your hips has the most profound sciatica?

Bawd.

Well, well; there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

2 Gentleman.
ACT I. SC. III.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

2 Gentleman. Who's that, I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry, sir, that's Claudio; signior Claudio.

1 Gentleman. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know, 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it; and it is for getting madam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gentleman. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gentleman. But most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.

Lucio. Away: let's go learn the truth of it.

[Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunken. How now? what's the news with you?

Enter Clown.

Clown. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well: what has he done?

Clown. A woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Clown. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

Bawd. What, is there a maid with child by him?

Clown. No; but there's a woman with maid by him. You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Clown. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down. Bawd. And what shall become of those in the city?

Clown. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pulled down?

Clown. To the ground, mistress.

Bawd. Why, here's a change, indeed, in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?

Clown. Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade; I'll be your tapster still. Courage! there will be pity taken on you; you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service: you will be considered.

Bawd. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's withdraw.

Clown. Here comes signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison: and there's madam Juliet. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers; Lucio, and two Gentlemen.

Claudio. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to th' world?

Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

Provost. I do it not in evil disposition, but from lord Angelo by special charge.

Claudio. Thus can the demi-god, Authority, Make us pay down for our offence by weight.— The words of heaven;— on whom it will, it will; On whom it will not, so: yet still 'tis just.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Claudio. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty; As surfeit is the father of much fast, So every scope by the immoderate use Turns to restraint: Our natures do pursue, Like rats that ravin down their proper bane, A thirsty evil, and when we drink, we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors. And yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the popery of freedom, as the morality of imprisonment. — What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claudio. What but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What is it? murder?

Claudio. No.

Lucio. Lechery?

Claudio. Call it so.

Provost. Away, sir: you must go.

Claudio. One word, good friend. — Lucio, a word with you. [Takes him aside.

Lucio. A hundred. If they'll do you any good. — Is lechery so look'd after?

Claudio. Thus stands it with me: — Upon a true contract, I got possession of Julietta's bed: You know the lady; she is fast my wife, Save that we do the denunciation lack Of outward order: this we came not to, Only for propagation of a dower Remaining in the coffers of her friends, From whom we thought it meet to hide our love.
Till time had made them for us. But it chances,
The stealth of our most mutual entertainment
With character too gross is writ on Juliet.

Lucio.
With child, perhaps.

Claudio.
Unhappily, even so.
And the new deputy now for the duke,—
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,
Or whether that the body public be
A horse whereso the governor doth ride,
Who, newly in the seat, that it may know
He can command, lets it straight feel the spur;
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up,
I stagger in; — but this new governor
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties, [wall
Which have, like unscour’d armour, hung by the
So long, that nineteen zodlocks have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and, for a name,
Now puts the drowsy and neglected act
Freshly on me: — ’tis surely, for a name.

Lucio.
I warrant, it is; and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milk-maid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claudio.
I have done so, but he’s not to be found.
I pr’ythee, Lucio, do me this kind service.
This day my sister should the cloister enter,
And there receive her approbation:
Acquaint her with the danger of my state;
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him;
I have great hope in that; for in her youth
There is a prone and speechless dialect, [fart,
Such as moves men: beside, she hath prosperous
When she will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

Lucio.
I pray, she may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition, as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I’ll to her.

Claudio.
I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio.
Within two hours,—
Claudio.
Come, officer; away! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Monastery.
Enter Duke, and Friar Thomas.

Duke.
No, holy father; throw away that thought:
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a complete bosom. Why I desire
To give me secret harbour hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled, than the aims and
Of burning youth. [ends

Friar.
May your grace speak of it?

Duke.
My holy sir, none better knows than you
How I have ever lov’d the life remov’d:
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,
Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery
I have deliver’d to lord Angelo [keeps.
ACT II. Sc. 1. MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Turn you the key, and know his business of him:
You may, when I may not; you are yet unsworn.
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with
But in the presence of the prioresse; men,
Then, if you speak, you must not show your face:
Or, if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again: I pray you, answer him.

[Exit Francisca.

Isabella.
Peace and prosperity! Who is 't that calls?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio.

Hall, virgin, if you be, as those cheek-roses
Proclaim you are no less, can you so stead me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Isabella.
Why her unhappy brother? let me ask,
The rather, for I now must make you know I am that Isabella, and his sister.

Lucio.

Gentle and fair, your brother kindly greets Not to be weary with you, he's in prison. You.

Isabella.

Woe me! for what?

Lucio.

For that, which, if myself might be his judge, He should receive his punishment in thanks. He hath got his friend with child.

Isabella.

Sir, make me not your story.

Lucio.

'Tis true. I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin With maids to seem the lapwing, and to jest, Tongue far from heart, play with all virgins so: I hold you as a thing ensky'd, andainted By your renouncement, an immortal spirit, And to be talk'd with in sincerity, As with a saint.

Isabella.

You do blaspheme the good in mocking me.

Lucio.

Do not believe it. Fawness and truth, 'tis thus: Your brother and his lover have embrac'd: As those that feel grow full; as blossoming time, That from the seedness the bare fallow brings To teeming foison, even so her plentiful womb Expresseth his full thith and husbandry.

Isabella.

Some one with child by him?—My cousin Juliet.

Lucio.

Is she your cousin?

Isabella.

Adoptedly; as school-maids change their By rain, though apt, affection. [names

Lucio.

She it is.

Isabella.

O I let him marry her.

Lucio.

This is the point. The duke is very strangely gone from hence, Bore many gentlemen, myself being one, In hand, and hope of action; but we do learn, By those that know the very nerves of state, His giving out was of an infinite distance

From his true-mean't design. Upon his place, And with full line of his authority, Governs lord Angelo; a man whose blood Is very snow-broth; one who never feels The wanton stings and motions of the sense, But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge With profits of the mind, study and fast. He (to give fear to use and liberty, Which have, for long, run by the hideous law, As mice by lions,) hath pick'd out an act, Under whose heavy sense your brother's life Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it, And follows close the rigour of the statute, To make him an example. All hope is gone, Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer To soften Angelo; and that's my pith Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.

Isabella.

Doth he so seek his life?

Lucio.

Has censur'd him Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath A warrant for his execution.

Isabella.

Alas! what poor ability's in me To do him good?

Lucio.

Assay the power you have.

Isabella.

My power, alas! I doubt.

Lucio.

Our doubts are traitors, And make us lose the good we oft might win, By fearing to attempt. Go to lord Angelo, And let him learn to know, when maidens sue, Men give like gods; but when they weep and All their petitions are as freely theirs [kneel, As they themselves would owe them.

Isabella.

I'll see what I can do.

Lucio.

But speedily.

Isabella.

I will about it straight, No longer staying but to give the mother Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you: Commend me to my brother; soon at night I'll send him certain word of my success.

Lucio.

I take my leave of you.

Isabella.

Good sir, adieu. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A Hall in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo, Esclusus, a Justice, Officers, and other Attendants.

Angelo.

W E must not make a scare-crow of the law, Setting it up to fear the birds of prey, And let it keep one shape, till custom make it Their perch, and not their terror.

Esclusus.

Ay, but yet

Let us be keen, and rather cut a little,
Than fall, and brulse to death. Alas! this gentleman,
Whom I would save, had a most noble father.
Let but your honour know,
(Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,)
That, in the working of your own affections,
Had time sober'd with place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of your blood
Could have attain'd the effect of your own purpose.
Whether you had not, sometime in your life,
Err'd in this point, which now you censure him,
And pull'd the law upon you.

Escalus.
'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus;
Another thing to fall. I not deny,
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two;
Guiltier than him they try: what's open made to justice,
That justice seizes: what know the laws,
That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very

Angelo.
Be it as your wisdom will.

Escalus.
Where is the provost?

Enter Provost.

Provost.

Here, if it like your honour.

Angelo.

See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to-morrow morning.
Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd,
For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

Exit Provost.

Well, heaven forgive him, and forgive us all!
Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall:
Some run from breaks of vice, and answer none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officers, &c.

Elbow.

Come, bring them away. If these be good people in a common-weal, that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no

Angelo.

How now, sir! What's your name, and what's the matter?

Elbow.

If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow: I do lean upon justice, sir; and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

Angelo.

Benefactors! Wcll; what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

Elbow.

If it please your honour, I know not well what they are; but precise villains they are, that I am sure of, and void of all profanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Escalus.
This comes off well: here's a wise officer.

Angelo.

Go to: what quality are they of? Elbow is your name: why dost thou not speak, Elbow.

Clown.

He cannot, sir: he's out at elbow.

Angelo.

What are you, sir?

Elbow.

He, sir? a tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman, whose house, sir, was, as they say, pluck'd down in the suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very lill house too.

Escalus.

How know you that?

Elbow.

My wife, sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour.

Escalus.

How I thy wife?

Elbow.

Ay, sir; whom, I thank heaven, is an honest woman,

Escalus.

Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elbow.

I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escalus.

How dost thou know that, constable?

Elbow.

Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinaly given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanliness there.

Escalus.

By the woman's means?

Elbow.

Ay, sir, by mistress Ouer-lame's means; but as she spilt in his face, so she defiled him.

Clown.

Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elbow.

Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man; prove it.

Escalus.

Do you hear how he misplaces?

Clown.

Sir, she came in great with child, and longing (saying your honour's reverence) for strew'd prunes: sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some threepence: your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escalus.

Go to, go to: no matter for the dish, sir.

Clown.

No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein the right; but to the point. As I say, this imissed Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great belly'd, and longing, as I said, for prunes, and having but two in the dish, as I said, master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly;—for, as you know, master Froth,
I could not give you three-pence again.

Froth.
Act II. Sc. 1.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Froth.

No, indeed.

Clown.

Very well: you being then, if you be remember'd, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes.

Froth.

Ay, so I did, indeed.

Clown.

Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remember'd, that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Froth.

All this is true.

Clown.

Why, very well then.

Escalus.

Come; you are a tedious fool: to the purpose. What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clown.

Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escalus.

No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Clown.

Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And, I beseech you, look into master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a year, whose father died at Hallowmas.—Was't not at Hallowmas, master Froth?

Froth.

All-hallow'd eve.

Clown.

Why, very well: I hope here be truths. He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir:—'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit, have you not?

I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter.

Clown.

Why, very well then: I hope here be truths.

Angelo.

This will last out a night in Russe. [Leave. When nights are longest there. I'll take my And leave you to the hearing of the cause, Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Escalus.

I think no less. Good morrow to your lordship. [Exit Angelo.

Now, sir, come on: what was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Clown.

Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elbow.

I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clown.

I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escalus.

Well, sir, what did this gentleman to her?

Clown.

I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face.—Good master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose. Doth your honour mark his face?

Escalus.

Ay, sir, very well.

Clown.

Nay. I beseech you, mark it well.

Escalus.

Well, I do so.

Clown.

Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Escalus.

Why, no.

Clown.

I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escalus.

He's in the right. Constable, what say you to it?

Elbow.

First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow, and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clown.

By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elbow.

Varlet, thou liest: thou liest, wicked varlet. The time is yet to come that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Clown.

Sir, she was respected with him, before he married with her.

Escalus.

Which is the wiser here? Justice, or Iniquity? Is this true?

Elbow.

O thou caitiff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her?—if ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer.—Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escalus.

If he took you a box o' th' ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elbow.

Marry, I thank your good worship for it. What is't your worship's pleasure I shall do with this wicked caitiff?

Escalus.

Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him, that you wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elbow.

Marry, I thank your worship for it.—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come upon thee: thou art to continue; now, thou varlet, thou art to continue.

Escalus.

Where were you born, friend?

Froth.

Here in Vienna, sir.

Escalus.

Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth.

Yes, an't please you, sir.

Escalus.

So.—What trade are you of, sir?

Clown.

A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Escalus.

Your mistress' name?

Clown.

Mistress Over-done.
Escalus.

Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clown.

Nine, sir; Over-done by the last.

Escalus.

Nine!—Come hither to me, master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters; they will draw you, master Froth, and you will hang them: get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth.

I thank your worship. For mine own part,
I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I am draw in.

Escalus.

Well; no more of it, master Froth: farewell.

[Exit Froth.]—Come you hither to me, master tapster. What’s your name, master tapster?

Pompey.

What else?

Clown.

Bum, sir.

Escalus.

‘Truth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the leastest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not? come, tell me true:
shall it be the better for you.

Clown.

Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Escalus.

How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey?
is it a lawful trade?

Clown.

If the law would allow it, sir.

Escalus.

But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clown.

Does your worship mean to geld and spay all the youth of the city?

No, Pompey.

Clown.

Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to’t then. If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escalus.

There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

Clown.

If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you’ll be glad to give out a commission for more heads. If this law hold in Vienna ten year, I’ll rent the fairest house in it after three pence a bay. If you live to see this come to pass, say, Pompey told you so.

Escalus.

Thank you, good Pompey; and, in requital of your prophecy, barm you:—I advise you, let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whate’er; no, not for dwelling where you do:
if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you. In plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt. So, for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clown.

I thank your worship for your good counsel, but I shall follow it, as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me? No, no; let carman whipt his jade;
The valiant heart’s not whipt out of his trade.

[Exit.

Escalus.

Come hither to me, master Elbow; come hither, master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elbow.

Seven year and a half, sir.

Escalus.

I thought, by the readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time. You say, seven years together?

Elbow.

And a half, sir.

Escalus.

Alas I it hath been great pains to you. They do you wrong to put you so oft upon’t. Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Elbow.

Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters. As they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them: I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.

Escalus.

Look you bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish.

Elbow.

To your worship’s house, sir?

Escalus.

To my house. Fare you well. [Exit Elbow.

What’s o’clock, think you?

Justice.

Eleven, sir.

Escalus.

I pray you home to dinner with me.

Justice.

I humbly thank you.

Escalus.

It grieves me for the death of Claudio;
But there’s no remedy.

Justice.

Lord Angelo is severe.

Escalus.

It is but needful:
Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so;
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe.
But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no remedy.
Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE 11. Another Room in the same.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

Servant.

He’s hearing of a cause: he will come straight.
I’ll tell him of you.

Provost.

Pray you, do. [Exit Servant.] I’ll know
His pleasure; may be, he will relent. Alas! He hath but as offended in a dream:
All sects, all ages smack of this vice, and he
To die for it!—

Enter Angelo.

Angelo.

Now, what’s the matter, provost?

Provost.

Is it you will Claudio shall die to-morrow?

Angelo.
Angelo. Did I not tell thee, yea? hast thou not order? Why dost thou ask again?

Provost. Least I might be too rash.

Under your good correction, I have seen, When, after execution, judgment hath Repented o'er his doom.

Angelo. Go to; let that be mine:
Do you your office, or give up your place, And you shall well be spar'd.

Provost. I crave your honour's pardon. What shall be done, sir, with the groaning She's very near her hour. [Juliet ?

Angelo. Dispose of her To some more fitter place, and with that speed.

Re-enter Servant.

Servant. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd Desires access to you.

Angelo. Hath he a sister?

Provost. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid, And to be shortly of a sisterhood, If not already.

Angelo. Well, let her be admitted. [Exit Servant.

See you the fornicatress be remov'd:
Let her have needful, but not lavish, means; There shall be order for it.

Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Lucio. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.

Isabella. Stay a little while.—[To Isabella.] Y'are welcome: what's your will?

Isabella. I am a woeful suitor to your honour, Please but your honour hear me.

Angelo. Well; what's your suit?

Isabella. There is a vice, that most I do abhor, And most desire should meet the blow of justice, For which I would not plead, but that I must; For which I must not plead, but that I am At war 'twixt will, and will not.

Angelo. Well; the matter?

Isabella. I have a brother is condemn'd to die:
I do beseech you, let it be his fault, And not my brother.

Provost. [ Aside. Heaven give thee moving graces!

Angelo. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it? Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done. Mine were the very cipher of a function, To fine the faults, whose fine stands in record, And let go by the actor.

Isabella. O just, but severe law! I had a brother then. — [Heaven keep your honour! [Retiring.

Lucio. [To Isabella.] Give't not o'er so: to him again, Intreat him; Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown; You are too cold: if you should need a pin, You could not with more tame a tongue desire it. To him, I say.

Isabella. Must he needs die?

Angelo. Maiden, no remedy.

Isabella. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him, And neither heaven, nor man, grieve at the mercy.

Angelo. I will not do't.

Isabella. But can you, if you would?

Angelo. Look; what I will no', that I cannot do.

Isabella. But might you do't, and do the world no wrong, If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse As mine is to him?

Angelo. He's sentenc'd: 'tis too late.

Lucio. [To Isabella. You are too cold.

Isabella. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word, May call it back again: Well believe this, No ceremony that to great ones 'longs, Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword, The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe, Become them with one half so good a grace As mercy does. If he had been as you, and you as he, You would have slipt like him; but he, like you, Would not have been so stern.

Angelo. Pray you, begone.

Isabella. I would to heaven I had your potency, And you were Isabella! should it then be thus? No; 'I would tell what 'twere to be a judge, And what a prisoner.

Lucio. [Aside. Ay, touch him; there's the vein.

Angelo. Your brother is a forfeit of the law, And you but waste your words.

Isabella. Alas! alas! Why, all the souls that were were forfeit once; And He that might the vantage best have took, Found out the remedy. How would you be, If He, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are? O, think on that, And mercy then will breathe within your lips, Like man new made!

Angelo. Be you content, fair maid. It is the law, not I, condemns your brother: Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son, It should be thus with him: he must die to-morrow.

Isabella. To-morrow? O, that's sudden! Spare him, spare him! [kitchens He's not prepar'd for death. Even for our We
We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve heaven
With less respect than we do minister
To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, be-think you;
Who is it that hath died for this offence?
There's many have committed it.

Lucio. [Aside.]

Angelo. Ay, well said,
The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:
Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
If the first, that did th' edict infringe,
Had answer'd for his deed: now, 'tis awake;
Takes note of what is done, and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils (Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv'd,
And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,) Are now to have no successive degrees,
But where they live, to end.

Isabella. Yet show some pity. [Aside.]

I show it most of all, when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall,
And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,
Ivies not to act another. Be satisfied:
Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.

Isabella. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he that suffers. O! it is excellent
To have a giant's strength: but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio. [Aside.]

That's well said.

Isabella. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would never be quiet,
For every petting, petty officer,
Would use his heaven for thunder;
Nothing but thunder. Merciful heaven!
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,
Split'st the unwedgedable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle; but man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. [To Isabella.]

O, to him, to him, wench! He will relent:
He's coming; I perceive't.

Provost. [Aside.]

Pray heaven, she win him!

Isabella.

We cannot weigh our brother with ourself:
Great men may jest with saints: 'tis with them,
But in the less soul profanation.

Lucio. [To Isabella.]

Thou'ret in the right, girl: more o' that.

Isabella.

That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio. [Aside.]

Art avis'd o' that? more on't.

Angelo. Why do you put these sayings upon me?

Isabella. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself, [bosom;
That skims the vice o' the top. Go to your Knock there, and ask your heart, what it doth

That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.

Angelo. [Aside.]

She speaks, and 'tis
Such sense, that my sense breeds with it. [To her.] Fare you well.

Isabella. Gentle my lord, turn back.

Angelo. I will bethink me. — Come again to-morrow.

Isabella. Hark, how I'll bribe you. Good my lord, turn back.

Angelo. How I bribe me?

Isabella. Ay, with such gifts, that heaven shall share with you.

Lucio. [Aside.]

You had marr'd all else.

Isabella. Not with fond shekels of the tested gold,
Or stones, whose rates are either rich or poor
As fancy values them; but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there
Ere sun-rise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.

Angelo. Well; come to me to-morrow.

LUCIO. [To Isabella.]

Go to; 'tis well: away!

Isabella.

Heaven keep your honour safe!

Angelo. [Aside.]

Amen:

For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.

Isabella. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?

Angelo. At any time 'fore noon.

Isabella. Save your honour!

[Exeunt Lucio, Isabella, and Provost.

Angelo. From thee; even from thy virtue —

What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?

[Ha! The tempter, or the tempted, who sins most?
Not she, nor doth she tempt; but it is I,
That lying by the violet in the sun,
Do, as the carrion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be,

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough, Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary, And pitch our evils there? O, fye, fye, fye! What dost thou, or what art thou, Angelo? Dost thou desire her foully for those things That make her good? O, let her brother live! The vheels for their robbery have authority, (her, When judges steal themselves. What! do I love That I desire to hear her speak again, And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream O cunning enemy, that to catch a saint, (on? With saints dost bait thy hook! [Exit.

SCENE III. A Room in a Prison.

Enter Duke, habited like a Friar, and Provost.

Duke.

Hail to you, provost; so I think you are.

Provost.

I am the provost. What's your will, good friar?

Duke.

Bound by my charity, and my bless'd order, I come to visit the afflicted spirits Here in the prison: do me the common right To let me see them, and to make me know The nature of their crimes, that I may minister To them accordingly.

Provost.

I would do more than that, if more were needful.

Enter Juliet.

Look: here comes one: a gentlewoman of mine, Who, falling in the flaws of her own youth, Hath blister'd her report. She is with child, And he that got it, sentenc'd — a young man More fit to do another such offence Than die for this.

Duke.

When must he die?

Provost.

As I do think, to-morrow. — [To Juliet.

I have provided for you: stay a while, And you shall be conducted.

Duke.

Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?

Juliet.

I do, and bear the shame most patiently.

Duke.

I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience, And try your penitence, if it be sound, Or hollowly put on.

Juliet.

I'll gladly learn.

Duke.

Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Juliet.

Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.

Duke.

So then, it seems, your most offensive act Was mutually committed?

Juliet.

Mutually.

Duke.

Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Juliet.

I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke.

'Tis meet so, daughter: but least you do re- pent, As that the sin hath brought you to this shame; Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not heaven, Showing, we would not spare heaven, as we love But as we stand in fear.

Juliet.

I do repent me, as it is an evil, And take the shame with joy.

Duke.

There rest.

Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow; And I am going with instruction to him. Grace go with you! Benedicite! [Exit.

Juliet.

Must die to-morrow! O, injurious love, That repents me a life, whose very comfort Is still a dying horror! —

Provost.

'Tis pity of him. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo.

Angelo.

When I would pray and think, I think and pray To several subjects: heaven hath my empty words Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue, Anchors on Isabel: heaven in my mouth, As if I did but only chew his name. And in my heart the strong and swelling evil Of my conception. The state, wherein I studied, Is like a good thing, being often read, Grown scar'd and tedious: yes, my gravity, Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride, Could I, with boot, change for an idle plume, Which the air beata for vain — O place! — O form! How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit, Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls To thy false seeming? Blood, thou art blood: Let's write good angel on the devil's horn, 'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

How now! who's there?

Servant.

One Isabel, a sister, Desires access to you.

Angelo.

Teach her the way. [Exit Servant.

O heavens! Why does my blood thus muster to my heart, Making both it unable for itself, And dispossessing all my other parts Of necessary fitness? So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons; Come all to help him, and so stop the air. By which he should revive: and even so The general, subject to a well-wish'd king, Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness Crowd to his presence, where their untaught Must needs appear offence. [love

Enter Isabella.

How now, fair maid?

Isabella.

I am come to know your pleasure.
Angelo.

That you might know it, would much better please me, [live, Than to demand what 'tis. Your brother cannot

Isabella.

Even so.— Heaven keep your honour! [Retiring.

Angelo.

Yet may he live a while; and, it may be, As long as you, or I: yet he must die.

Isabella.

Under your sentence?

Angelo.

Yea.

Isabella.

When, I beseech you? that in his reprove, Longer or shorter, he may be so sitten, That his soul sicken not.

Angelo.

Ha! Fye, these filthy vices! It were as good To pardon him, that hath from nature stolen A man already made, as to remit Their saucy sweetness, that do colon heaven's In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easy Falsely to take away a life true made, As to put metal in restrained means, To make a false one.

Isabella.

'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.

Angelo.

Say you so? then, I shall pose you quickly. Which had you rather, that the most just law Now took your brother's life, or to redeem him Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness As she that he hath stain'd?

Isabella.

Sir, believe this, I had rather give my body than my soul.

Angelo.

I talk not of your soul. Our compell'd sins Stand more for number than for account.

Isabella.

How say you?

Angelo.

Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak Against the thing I say. Answer to this:— I, now the voice of the recorded law, Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life: Might there not be a charity in sin, To save this brother's life?

Isabella.

Please you to do't, I'll take it as a peril to my soul: It is no sin at all, but charity.

Angelo.

Pleas'd you to do't, at peril of your soul, Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isabella.

That I do beg his life, if it be sin, Heaven, let me bear it! you granting of my suit, If that be sin, I'll make it my morn-prayer To have it added to the faults of mine, And nothing of your answer.

Angelo.

Nay, but hear me. Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant, Or seem so, crafty; and that is not good.

Isabella.

Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good, But graciously to know I am no better.

Angelo.

Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright, When it doth tax itself: as these black masks Proclaim an ensnared beauty ten times louder Than beauty could displayed.— But mark me To be received plain, I'll speak more gross. Your brother is to die.

Isabella.

So.

Angelo.

And his offence is so, as it appears Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isabella.

True.

Angelo.

Admit no other way to save his life, (As I subscribe not that, nor any other, But in the loss of question) that you, his sister, Finding yourself desir'd of such a person, Whose credit with the judge, or own great place, Could fetch your brother from the manacles Of the all-building law; and that there were No earthily mean to save him, but that either You must lay down the treasures of your body To this suppos'd, or else to let him suffer, What would you do?

Isabella.

As much for my poor brother, as myself: That is, were I under the terms of death, Th' impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies And strip myself to death, as to a bed That longing I have been sick for, ere I'd yield My body up to shame.

Angelo.

Then must Your brother die.

Isabella.

And 'twere the cheaper way. Better it were, a brother died at once, Than that a sister, by redeeming him, Should die for ever.

Angelo.

Were not you, then, as cruel, as the sentence That you have slander'd so?

Isabella.

Ignomy in ransom, and free pardon, Arc of two houses: lawful mercy is Nothing akin to foul redemption.

Angelo.

You seem'd of late to make the law a tyrant; And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother A meritment, than a vice.

Isabella.

O pardon me, my lord! it oft falls out, To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean. I something do excuse the thing I hate, For his advantage that I dearly love.

Angelo.

We are all frail.

Isabella.

Else let my brother die, If not a feodary, but only be, Owe, and succeed thy weakness.

Angelo.

Nay, women are frail too.

Isabella.

Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves, Which are as easy broke as they make forms. Women! Help heaven! men their creation mar [frail, In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times For

For we are soft as our complexion are,
And credulous to false prints.

I think it well;
And from this testimony of your own sex,
(Since, I suppose, we are made to be no stronger, Than faults may shake our frames,) let me be
I do arrest your words. Be that you are, [bold;

I have no tongue but one: gentle my lord,
Let me intreat you speak the former language.

Angelo.
Plainly, conceive I love you.

My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me,
That he shall die for't.

Angelo.
He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.

Isabella.
I know, your virtue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.

Angelo.
Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.

Isabella.
Ha! little honour to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose! — Seeming,
I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for't;

Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoul'd name, the austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'the state,
Will so your accusation overweigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun,
And now I give my sensual race the rein:
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;
Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes,
That banish what they see for; redeem thee
By yielding up thy body to my will, [brother
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out

Or, by the affection that now guides me most,
I'll prove a tyrant to him. As for you,

Isabella.
To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me? 'O perilous mouths!
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approbation.
Bidding the law make court'sy to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th' appetite,
To follow as it draws. I'll to my brother:
Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhorr'd pollution.
Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:
More than our brother is our chastity.

I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.  A Room in the Prison.

Enter Duke, as a Friar, Claudio, and Provost.

Duke.
So then, you hope of pardon from lord Angelo?

Claudio.
The miserable have
No other medicine, but only hope.
I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke.
Be absolute for death; either death, or life,
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing [life:—
That none but fools would keep: a breath thou
Servile to all the slyke influences,
That dost this habituation, where thou keep'st,
Hourly afflict. Merely, thou art death's fool;
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet run'st toward him still: thou art not
For all th' accommodations that thou bear'st,
Are nurs'd by baseness: thou art by no means valiant;
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm: thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok'st, yet grossly bear'st Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not yth'self;
For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains
That issue out of dust: happy thou art not;
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast forget'st. Thou art not certain;
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the moon: if thou art rich, thou'rt poor;
For, like an ass, whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee: friend hast thou none;
For thou own bowels, which do call thee sire,
The mere effusion of thy proper lots.
Do curse the want, serpent, and the rheum,
For ending thee no sooner: thou hast nor youth,
nor age,
But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep,
Dreaming on both: for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
Of palsied eld; and when thou art old and rich, Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this,
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life Lie hid more thousand deaths, yet death we Fear,
That makes these odds all even.

Claudio.
I humbly thank you.

Duke.
To sue to live, I find, I seek to die,
And, seeking death, find life: let it come on.

Isabella.
[Without.

What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company.

Provost.
Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome.
Enter Isabella.

Duke.

Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claudio.

Most holy sir, I thank you.

Isabella.

My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Provost.

And very welcome. Look, signior; here's your sister.

Duke.

Provost, a word with you.

Provost.

As many as you please.

Duke.

Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be conceal'd.

[Exeunt Duke and Provost.

Claudio.

Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isabella.

Why, as all Comforts are: most good, most good, indeed. Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, Intends you for his swift ambassador, Where you shall be an everlasting leger: Therefore, your best appointment make With To-morrow you set on. {speed;}

Claudio.

Is there no remedy?

Isabella.

None, but such remedy, as to save a head To cleave a heart in twain.

Claudio.

But is there any?

Isabella.

Yes, brother, you may live: There is a devilish mercy in the judge, If you'll implore it, that will free your life, But fetter you till death.

Claudio.

Perpetual durance?

Isabella.

Ay, just; perpetual durance: a restraint, Though all the world's vastidity you had, To a determin'd scope.

Claudio.

But in what nature?

Isabella.

In such a one as, you consenting to't, Would bark your honour from that trunk you And leave you naked. {bear,

Claudio.

Let me know the point.

Isabella.

O! I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake, Least thou a feverous life should'st entertain, And six or seven winters more respect, Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die? The sense of death is most in apprehension, And the poor beetle, that we tread upon, In corporal sufferance finds a pang, as great As when a giant dies.

Claudio.

Why give you me this shame?

Think you I can a resolution fetch From flowery tenderness? If I must die, I will encounter darkness as a bride, And hug it in mine arms.

Isabella.

There spake my brother: there my father's grave Did utter forth a voice. Yes, thou must die: Thou art too noble to conserve a life In base appliances. This outward-sainted deput, Whose settled visage and deliberate word Nips youth if the head, and folies doth enmew As falcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil; His faith within being cast, he would appear A pond as deep as hell.

Claudio.

The princely Angelo?

Isabella.

O, 'tis the cunning livery of hell, The damned'st body to invest and cover In princely guards! Dost thou think, Claudio, If I would yield him my virginity, Thou might'st be freed?

Claudio.

O, heavens! It cannot be.

Isabella.

Yes, he would give't thee from this rank offence, So to offend him still. This night's the time That I should do what I abhor to name, Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claudio.

Thou shalt not do't.

Isabella.

Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.

Claudio.

Yes. Has he affections in him. That thus can make him bite the law by the nose, When he would force it? Sure, it is no sin; Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isabella.

Which is the least?

Claudio.

If it were damnable, he being so wise, Why would he for the momentary trick Be perdurably find'd? — O Isabel!

Isabella.

What says my brother?

Claudio.

Death is a fearful thing.

Isabella.

And shamed life a hateful.

Claudio.

Ay, but to die, and go we know not where; To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot; This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice; To be imprison'd in the viewless winds, And blown with restless violence round about The pendent world; or to be worse than worst Of those that lawless and uncertain thoughts Imagine howling! — 'tis too horrible. The weariest and most loathed worldly life, That age, aches, penury, and imprisonment Can lay on nature, is a paradise To what we fear of death.

Isabella.

Alas! alas!

Claudio.

Sweet sister, let me live.
ACT III. Sc. I.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

What sin you do to save a brother's life, Nature dispenses with the deed so far, That it becomes a virtue.

Isabella. O, you beast! O, faithless coward! O, dishonest wretch! Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice? Let's not a kind of incest to take life [think? From thine own sister's shame? What should I Heaven shield, my mother play'd my father fair, For such a warped slip of wilderness Ne'er issu'd from his blood. Take my disfance: Die; perish! I must but my bending down Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed. 'Till'pray a thousand prayers for thy death, No word to save thee.

Claudio.

Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isabella. O, fie, fie, fie!

Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade. Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd: 'Tis best that thou diest quickly. [Going.

Claudio. O hear me, Isabella!

Re-enter Duke.

Vouchsafe a word, young sister; but one word.

Isabella.

What is your will?

Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your own benefit.

Isabella.

I have no superfluous leisure: my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you a while.

Duke. [To Claudio.

Son, I have overheard what hath past between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an essay of her virtue, to practise his judgment with the disposition of nature. She, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death. Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die. Go; to your knees, and make ready.

Claudio.

Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.

Re-enter Provost.

Provost, a word with you.

Provost. What's your will, father?

Duke. That now you are come, you will be gone. Leave me a while with the maid; my mind promises with my habit no loss shall touch her by my company.

Provost. In good time.

Duke. [Exit Provost.

The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever fair. The assault, that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath convey'd to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

Isabella. I am now going to resolve him. I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke RECEIVED in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss; yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation: he made trial of you only.—Therefore, fasten your ear on my advices: to the love I have, doing good a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe, that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit, redeem your brother from the angry law, do no stain to your own gracious person, and must, please the absent duke, if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.

Isabella. Let me hear you speak farther. I have spirit to do anything that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier who miscarried at sea?

Isabella. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. She should this Angelo have married; he was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed; between which time the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark how heavily this befel to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, and a marvellous brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her comrade husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

Isabella. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonour: in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake, and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isabella. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live!—But how out of this can she avail?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal; and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

Isabella. Show me how, good father.
Duke.

This fore-named maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, that your stay with him may not be long, that the time may have all shadow and silence in it, and the place answer to convenience. This being granted in course, and now follows all: we shall advise this wronged maid to stand up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense; and here by this is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this, as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Isabella.

The image of it gives me content already, and, I trust, it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke.

It lies much in your holding up. Haste you speedily to Angelo: if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St. Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana; at that place call upon me, and despatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isabella.

I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Street before the Prison.

Enter Duke, as a Friar; to him Elbow, Clown, and Officers.

Elbow.

Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke.

O, heavens! what stuff is here?

Clown.

'Twas never merry world, since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worser allow'd by order of law a fur'r'd gown to keep him warm; and fur'd with fox and lamb-skins too, to signify that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

Elbow.

Come your way, sir.—Bless you, good father friar.

Duke.

And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elbow.

Marry, sir, he hath offended the law: and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir; for we have found upon him, sir, a strange pick-lock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke.

Fie, sirrah: a bawd, a wicked bawd! The evil that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a back, From such a filthy vice: say to thyself, From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat, array myself, and live. Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clown.

Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove—

Duke.

Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin, Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer: Correction and instruction must both work, Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elbow.

He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning. The deputy cannot abide a whoresomist: if he be a whoresomonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke.

That we were all, as some would seem to be, From our faults, as faults from seeming, free!

Enter Lucio.

Elbow.

His neck will come to your waist, a cord, sir.

Clown.

I spy comfort: I cry, bail. Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Lucio.

How now, noble Pompey! What, at the wheels of Caesar? Art thou in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clutch'd? What reply? Ha! What say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method? Is't not drown'd in! the last rain? Ha! What say'st thou, trot? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words, or how? The trick of it?

Duke.

Still thus, and thus: still worse!

Lucio.

How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procur'st she still? Ha!

Clown.

Trotth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio.

Why, 'tis good; it is the right of it; it must be so: ever your fresh whore, and your powder'd bawd! an unshunnable consequence; it must be so. Art going to prison, Pompey?

Yes, faith, sir.

Lucio.

Why 'tis not amiss, Pompey. Farewell. Go; say, I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey, or how?

Elbow.

For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Lucio.

Well, then, imprison him. If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right: bawd is he, doubtless, and of antiquity too; bawd-born. Farewell, good Pompey; commend me to the prison. Pompey. You will turn good husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Clown.

I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio.
Lucio.

No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why, your mettle is the more. Adieu, trusty Pompey. —Bless you, friar.

And you.

Lucio.

Does Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha!

Elbow.

Come your ways, sir; come.

Clown.

You will not bail me, then, sir?

Lucio.

Then, Pompey, nor now.—What news abroad, friar? What news?

Clown.

Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio.

Go; to kennel, Pompey, go.

[Exeunt Elbow, Clown, and Officers.

What news, friar, of the duke?

Lucio.

I know none. Can you tell me of any?

Lucio.

Some say, he is with the emperor of Russia; other some, he is in Rome: but where is he, think you?

Duke.

I know not where; but whereasover, I wish him well.

Lucio.

It was a mad fantastical trick of him, to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he was never born to. Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression to't.

Duke.

He does well in't.

Lucio.

A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him: something too craved that way, friar.

Duke.

It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.

Lucio.

Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred: it is well allied; but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say, this Angelo was not made by man and woman, after this downright way of creation: is it true, think you?

Duke.

How should he be made then?

Lucio.

Some report, a sea-maid spawn'd him: some, that he was begot between two stock-fishes; but it is certain, that when he makes water, his urine is congeal'd ice: that I know to be true; and he is a motion generative, that's infallible.

Duke.

You are pleasant, sir, and speak apace.

Lucio.

Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a cod-piece to take away the life of a man? Would the duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport: he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke.

I never heard the absent duke much detected for women: he was not inclined that way.

Lucio.

O, sir! You are deceived.

Duke.

'Tis not possible.

Lucio.

Who? not the duke? yes, your beggar of fifty; and his use was, to put a ducat in her clack-dish. The duke had crochets in him: he would be drunk too; that let me inform you.

Duke.

You do him wrong; surely.

Lucio.

Sir, I was an inward of his. A shy fellow was the duke; and, I believe, I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke.

What, I pr'ythee, might be the cause?

Lucio.

No,—pardon: —'tis a secret must be lock'd within the teeth and the lips; but this I can let you understand,—the greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise.

Duke.

Wise? why, no question but he was.

Lucio.

A very superficial, ignorant, unwielding, fellow.

Duke.

Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier. Therefore, you speak unskilfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darken'd in your malice.

Lucio.

Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke.

Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio.

Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke.

I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the duke return, (as our prayers are he may) let me desire you to make your answer before him: If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it. I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio.

Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the duke.

Duke.

He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio.

I fear you not.

Duke.

O! you hope the duke will return no more, or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you'll forswear this again.

Lucio.

I'll be hang'd first: thou art deceived in me, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell, if Claudio die to-morrow, or no?

Duke.

Why should he die, sir?

Lucio.
Lucio.

Why? for filling a bottle with a tun-dish. I would, the duke, we talk of, were return'd again: this ungeniu'd agent will unpeople the province with continency; sparrows must not build in his house-eaves, because they are lecherous. The duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answer'd; he would never bring them to light: would he were return'd! Marry, this Claudio is condemn'd for untrussing. Farewell, good friar; I pr'ythee, pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He's now past it; yet, and I say to thee, he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic: say, that I said so. Farewell. [Exit.

Duke.

No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure 'scape: back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtuous strikes. What king so strong,
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, Bawd, and Officers.

Escalus.

Go: away with her to prison!

Bawd.

Good my lord, be good to me; your honour
Is accounted a merciful man: good my lord.

Escalus.

Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit
In the same kind? This would make mercy
Swear, and play the tyrant.

Provost.

A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it
Please your honour.

Bawd.

My lord, this is one Lucio's information against Me. Mistress Kate Keep-down was with child
By him in the duke's time; he promised her
Her marriage; his child is a year and a quarter old,
Come Philip and Jacob. I have kept it myself,
And see how he goes about to abuse me!

Escalus.

That fellow is a fellow of much licence:—let Him be called before us.—Away with her to prison!
Go to; no more words. [Exeunt Bawd and Officers.]

Provost, my brother Angelo will not be alter'd; Claudio must die to-morrow.
Let him be furnished with divines, and have all Charitable preparation: if my brother wrought
By my pity, it should not be so with him.

Provost.

So please you, this friar hath been with him,
And advised him for the entertainment of death.

Good even, good father.

Duke.

Bliss and goodness on you.

Escalus.

Of whence are you?

Duke.

Not of this country, though my chance is now
To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious order, late come from the See,
In special business from his holiness.

Escalus.

What news abroad? the world?

Duke.

None, but that there is so great a fever on Goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it:
Novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking.

There is scarce truth enough alive to make Societies secure, but security enough to make Fellowships occurs'd. Much upon this riddle Runs the wisdom of the world. This news is Old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke.

Escalus.

One that, above all other strifes, contended
Especially to know himself.

Duke.

What pleasure was he given to?

Escalus.

Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than Merry at any thing which profess'd to make him
Rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But Leave we him to his events, with a prayer they May prove proper, and let me desire to know
How you find Claudio prepared. I am made
To understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duke.

He professes to have received no sinister
Measure from his judge, but most willingly
Humbles himself to the determination of justice;
Yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction
Of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life,
Which I, by my good leisure, have discredited
To him, and now is he resolved to die.

Escalus.

You have paid the heavens your function, and
The prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have Labour'd for the poor gentleman to the extremest
Shore of my modesty; but my brother justice
Have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him, he is indeed—justice.

Duke.

If his own life answer the straitness of his Proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein
If he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escalus.

I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare you Well.

Duke.

Peace be with you! [Exeunt Escalus and Provost.]

He, who the sword of heaven will bear,
Should be as holy as severe;
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and virtue go;
More nor less to others paying,
Than by self offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!
Twice treble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow!
O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!
How may likeness, made in crimes,
Making practice on the times,
To draw with idle the spiders' strings
Most pond'rous and substantial things!
Craft against vice I must apply.
With Angelo to-night shall lie
His old betrothed, but despised:
So disguise shall, by the disguised,
Pay with falsehood false exacting,
And perform an old contracting. [Exit.]
ACT IV.

SCENE I. A Room at the moated Grange.

_Mariana_ discovered sitting: a Boy singing.

_Song._

Take 0! take those lips away,
_That so sweetly were forevourne;_
_And those eyes, the break of day,*
_Lights that do mislead the morn:_
But my kisses bring again,
bring again,
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain;
seal'd in vain.

_Mariana._
Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away:
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.

[Exit Boy.

_Enter Duke._
I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish
You had not found me here so musical:
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,
My mirth is much displeas'd, but please'm my woe.

_Duke._
'Tis good; though music oft hath such a charm,
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.
I pray you, tell me, hath any body inquired for me here to-day? much upon this time have I promis'd here to meet.

_Mariana._
You have not been inquired after: I have sat here all day.

_Enter Isabella._

_Duke._
I do constantly believe you. — The time is come, even now. — I shall crave your forbearance a little; may be, I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

_Mariana._
I am always bound to you.

[Exit.

_Duke._
Very well met, and welcome.
What is the news from this good deputy?

_Isabella._
He hath a garden circummur'd with brick,
Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd;
And to that vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger key:
This other doth command a little door,
Which from the vineyard to the garden leads;
There have I made my promise upon the heavy
Middle of the night to call upon him.

_Duke._
But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

_Isabella._
I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't;
With whispering and most guilty diligence, in action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice o'er.

_Duke._
Are there no other tokens
Betwixt you 'greed, concerning her observance?

_Isabella._
No, none, but only a repair t' the dark;
And that I have possess'd him my most stay
Can be but brief: for I have made him know,
I have a servant comes with me along,
That stays upon me; whose persuasion is,
I come about my brother.

_SCENE II. A Room in the Prison._

_Enter Provost and Clown._

_Provost._
Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut off a man's head?

_Clown._
If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can; but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

_Provost._
Come, sir; leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redound from your governor; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping, for you have been a notorious bawd.

_Clown._
Provost. What ho, Abhorsen! Where's Abhorsen, there?

Enter Abhorsen.

Abhorsen. Do you call, sir?

Provost. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution. If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him. He cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath been a bawd.

A bawd, sir? Fle upon him! he will discredit our mystery.

Provost. Go to, sir; you weigh equally: a feather will turn the scale.

[Exit.]

Clown. Pray, sir, by your good favour, (for, surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look,) do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhorsen. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Clown. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery; but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abhorsen. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clown. Proof?

Abhorsen. Every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Clown. If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so, every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Provost. Are you agreed?

Clown. Sir, I will serve him: for I do find, your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd: he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

Provost. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow, four o'clock.

Abhorsen. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade: follow.

Clown. I do desire to learn, sir; and, I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare; for, truly, sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

Provost. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio.

[Execut Clown and Abhorsen.

Th' one has my pity; not a jot the other, Being a murder'd, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: "Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?"

Claudio. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltless labour, When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones: He will not wake.

Provost. Who can do good on him?

Well, go; prepare yourself. But hark, what noise? [Knocking within.] Heaven give your spirits comfort! — By and by —

I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve. For the most gentle Claudio — Welcome, father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best and wholsomst spirits of the night Envelop you, good provost! Who call'd here of late?

Provost. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel?

Provost. No.

Duke. They will then, ere't be long.

Provost. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's some in hope.

Provost. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so: his life is parallel'd Even with the stroke and line of his great justice. He doth with holy abstinence subdue That in himself, which he spurs on his power To qualify in others: were he mead'd with that Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous; But this being so, he's just. — Now are they come. — [Knocking.]

This is a gentle provost: seldom, when The steel'd gaoler is the friend of men.

How now? What noise? That spirit's possessed with haste. [strokes.]

That wounds th' unseasoning postern with these

Re-enter Provost.

Provost. [Speaking to one at the door.]

There he must stay, until the officer Arose to let him in: he is call'd up.

Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet, But he must die to-morrow?

Provost. None, sir, none.

Duke. As near the dawning, provost, as it is, You shall hear more ere morning.

Provost. Happily, You something know: yet, I believe, there comes No countermand: no such example have we. Besides, upon the very siege of justice, Lord Angelo hath to the public ear Profess'd the contrary.
Enter a Messenger.

Duke.

This is his lordship's man.

Provost.

And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Messanger.

My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

Provost. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.

Duke.

This is his pardon; purchas'd by such sin,
For which the pardoner himself is in:
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority.
When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended,
That for the fault's love is th'o'fren дер friended.—

Now, sir, what news?

I told you: Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwoanted putting on; methinks strangely, for he hath not used it before.

Pray you, let's hear.

Provost. "Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and, in the afternoon, Barnardine. For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly perform'd; with a thought, that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril."—What say you to this, sir?

Duke.

What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in the afternoon?

Provost.

A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duke.

How came it that the absent duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard, it was ever his manner to do so.

Provost.

His friends still wrought reprieves for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubted proof.

Duke.

It is now apparent.

Provost.

Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duke.

Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touch'd?

Provost.

A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come: insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.

Duke.

He wants advice.

Provost.

He will hear none. He hath evermore had the liberty of the prison: give him leave to escape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft advis'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and show'd him a seeming warrant for it: it hath not moved him at all.

Duke.

More of him anon. There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguil'd me; but in the holding of my cunning, it seems to me in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law, than Angelo who hath sentenced him. To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite, for the which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

Pray, sir, in what

Duke.

In the delaying death.

Provost.

Alack! how may I do it, having the hour limited, and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest.

Duke.

By the vow of mine order, I warrant you: if my instructions may be your guide, let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Provost.

Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

Duke.

O! death's a great disguiser, and you may add to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say, it was the desire of the penitent to be so bared before his death; you know, the course is common. If any thing fail to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Provost.

Pardon me, good father: it is against my oath.

Duke.

Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Provost.

To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke.

You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing.

Provost.

But what likelihood is in that?

Duke.

Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor my persuasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go farther than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look, you, sir; here is the hand and seal of the duke: you know the character, I doubt not, and the signet is not strange to you.

Provost.

I know them both.

Duke.

The contents of this is the return of the duke: you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure, where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is the thing that Angelo knows not, for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor; perchance, of the duke's death; perchance, perchance, entering into some monastery; but, by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd. But put yourself into amazement how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a present shift, and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amazed, but this shall absolutely resolve you. Come away; it is almost clear dawn. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another Room in the same.
Enter Clown.

Clown.
I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our house of profession: one would think, it were mistress Over-done's own house, for here be many of her old customers. First, here's young master Rash; he's in for a commodity of brown knavery, and old ginger, ninepence and seventeen pounds, of which he made five marks, ready money: marry, then, ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one master Cooper, at the suit of master Threepit, the mercer, for some four suits of peach-colour'd satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizzy, and young master Deep-vou, and master Copper-spur, and master Stern-slick, the rapier and dagger-man, and young Drop-heir that killed Lusty Pudding, and master Forthright the tilter, and brave master Shoe-tie the great traveller, and wild Half-can that stab'd Pots, and, I think, forty more, all great doers in our trade, and are now for the Lord's sake.
Enter Abhorson.

Abhorson.
Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clown.
Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hang'd, master Barnardine.

Abhorson.
What ho, Barnardine?

Barnardine. [Within.
A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clown.
Your friends, sir; the hangman. You must be so good, sir, to rise and be put to death.

Barnardine. [Within.
Away, you rogue, away! I am sleepy.

Abhorson.
Tell him, he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clown.
Pray, master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhorson.
Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clown.
He is coming, sir, he is coming: I hear his straw rustle.
Enter Barnardine.

Abhorson.
Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clown.
Very ready, sir.

Barnardine. How now, Abhorson? what's the news with you?

Abhorson.
Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for, look you, the warrant's come.

Barnardine.
You rogue, I have been drinking all night: I am not fitted for't.

Clown.
O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hang'd betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.
Enter Duke.

Abhorson.
Look you, sir; here comes your ghostly father.

Duke. Do we jest now, think you?

Barnardine.
Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets. I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore, I beseech you,

Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barnardine.
I swear, I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,—

Barnardine.
Not a word: if you have any thing to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day.

Enter Provost.

[Exeunt Abhorson and Clown.

Provost.
Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner?

Duke. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death; And, to transport him in the mind he is, Were damnable.

Provost. Here in the prison, father, There died this morning of a cruel fever
One Ragazines, a most notorious pirate, A man of Claudio's years; his beard, and head, Just of his colour. What if we do omit This reproube, till he were well inclin'd, And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragazines, more like to Claudio?

Duke. O, 'tis an accident that heaven provides! Despatch it presently: the hour draws on Prefix'd by Angelo. See, this be done, And sent according to command, whilsts I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Provost. This shall be done, good father, presently. But Barnardine must die this afternoon; And how shall we continue Claudio? To save me from the danger that might come, If he were known alive?

Duke.

Isabella. Ho! by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isabella. The better, given me by so holy a man. Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabella, from the world. His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isabella. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other.

Show your wisdom, daughter, in your close patience.

Isabella. O, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes!

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isabella. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabella! Injurious world! Most damned Angelo! Duke.

Lucio. Peace, ho, be here!

Duke. The tongue of Isabel.—She's come to know, If yet her brother's pardon be come hither; But I will keep her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of despair, When it is least expected.

Lucio. Good even.

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O, pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient. I am fain to dine and sup with water and bran; I dare not for my head fill my belly: one fruitful meal would set me to't. But, they say, the duke will be here to-morrow. By my troth, Isabella, I loved thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

[Exit Isabella.]

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee. I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yes, marry, did I; but I was fain to forswear it: they would else have married me to the rotten mediator.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest. Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end. If bawdy talk offend thee, we'll have very little

ACT IV. SC. IV.

Enter Varrius.

Duke.

I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste.

Come, we will walk: there’s other of our friends Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isabella.

To speak so indirectly, I am loath: I would say the truth; but to accuse him so, That is your part; yet I’m advis’d to do it, He says, to veil full purpose.

Mariana.

Be rul’d by him.

Isabella.

Besides, he tells me, that if peradventure He speak against me on the adverse side, I should not think it strange; for ‘tis a physic, That’s bitter to sweet end.

Mariana.

I would, friar Peter—

Isabella.

O, peace! the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

Friar Peter.

Come; I have found you; out a stand most fit, Where you may have such vantage on the duke, He shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets sounded: The generous and gravest citizens Have hent the gates, and very near upon The duke is en’reng: therefore hence, away.

ACT V.

SCENE I. A public Place near the City Gate.

Mariana, (well’d,) Isabella, and Peter, at a distance. Enter at several doors, Duke, Varrius, Lords; Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke.

My very worthy cousin, fairly met:— Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.

Angelo and Escalus.

Happy return be to your royal grace! Duke.

Many and heartily thankings to you both. We have made inquiry of you; and we hear Such goodness of your justice, that our soul Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks, Forerunning more requital.

Angelo.

You make my bonds still greater.

Duke.

O! your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it, To lock it in the wards of covert bosom. When it deserves with characters of brass A forted residence against the tooth of time, And nature of oblivion. Give me your hand, And let the subject see, to make them know That...
MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Act 3, Sc. 1.
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within.—Come, Escalus; you Must walk by us on our other hand,
And good supporters are you.

Fiar Peter and Isabella come forward.

Fiar Peter.

Now is your time. Speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isabella.

Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard
Upon a wrong’d, I would fain have said, a maid! O worthy prince! dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And given me justice, justice, justice, justice!

Duke.

Here is lord Angelo shall give you justice:
Reral yourself to him.

Isabella.

O, worthy duke! You bid me seek redemption of the devil.
Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak
Must other punish me, not being believ’d;
Or wring redress from you. Hear me, O, hear me, here!

Angelo.

My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice.

Isabella.

By course of justice!

Angelo.

And she will speak most bitterly, and strange.

Isabella.

Most strange, but yet most truly, will I speak.
That Angelo’s forsworn, is it not strange?
That Angelo’s a murderer, is’t not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin-violater,
Is it not strange, and strange?

Duke.

Nay, it is ten times strange.

Isabella.

It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth
To th’ end of reckoning.

Duke.

Away with her.—Poor soul! She speaks this in th’ infirmity of sense.

O prince, I conjure thee, as thou beliwest
There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch’d with madness: make not impossible

Isabella.

O, gracious duke! Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality; but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear, where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.

Duke.

Many that are not mad,
Have, sure, more lack of reason.—What would you say?

Isabella.

I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn’d upon the act of fornication
To lose his head; condemn’d by Angelo.
I, in probation of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio
As then the messenger;—

Lucio.

That’s I, an’t like your grace.
I came to her from Claudio, and desir’d her
To try her gracious fortune with lord Angelo,
For her poor brother’s pardon.

Isabella.

That’s he, indeed.

Duke.

You were not bid to speak.

Lucio.

No, my good lord;

Duke.

Nor wish’d to hold my peace.

I wish you now, then:
Pray you, take note of it; and when you have
A business for yourself, pray heaven, you then
Be perfect.

Lucio.

I warrant your honour.

Duke.

The warrant’s for yourself: take heed to it.

Isabella.

This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.

Lucio.

Right.

Duke.

It may be right; but you are in the wrong
To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Isabella.

To this pernicious, caitiff, deputy.

Duke.

That’s somewhat madly spoken.

Isabella.

Pardon it:

The phrase is to the matter.

Duke.

Mended again; the matter?—Proceed.

Isabella.

In brief, — to set the needless process by,
How I persuaded, how I pray’d, and kneel’d,
How he reliev’d me, and how I repliev’d,
(For this was of much length) the vile conclusion
I now begin with grief and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust.
Release my brother; and, after much debate,
My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yield to him. But the next morn
Butimes, his purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother’s head.

Duke.

This is most likely.
Isabella.

O, that it were as like, as it is true!

Duke.

By heaven, fond wretch! thou know'st not what thou speakest.

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour,
In hateful practice. First, his integrity
Stands without blemish: next, it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you on:
Confess the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou canst here to complain.

Isabella.

And is this all?

Then, O! you blessed ministers above,
Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time,
Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up [woe,
In countenance!—Heaven shield your grace from
As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbelieving go!

Duke.

I know, you'll faint be gone.—An officer!
To prison with her. Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice.

Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?

Isabella.

One that I would were here, friar Lodowick.

Duke.

A ghostly father, belike. Who knows that Lodowick?

Lucio.

My lord, I know him: 'tis a meddling friar;
I do not like the man: had he been lay, my lord,
For certain words he spake against your grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

Duke.

Words against me? This a good friar, belike!
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our substitute!—Let this friar be found.

Lucio.

But yesternight, my lord, she and that friar
I saw them at the prison. A saucy friar,
A very scurvy fellow.

Friar Peter.

Blessed be your royal grace! I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abus'd. First, hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute,
Who is as free from touch or soil with her,
As she from one ungot.

Duke.

We did believe no less.

Know you that friar Lodowick, that she speaks of?

Friar Peter.

I know him for a man divine and holy;
Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,
As he's reported by this gentleman;
And, on my trust, a man that never yet
Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio.

My lord, most villainously: believe it.

Friar Peter.

Well; he in time may come to clear himself,
But at this instant he is sick, my lord,
Of a strange fever. Upon his mere request,
Being come to knowledge that there was com-

Intended 'gainst lord Angelo, came I hither,
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know.
Is true and false; and what he with his oath,
And all probation, will make up full clear,
Whoseover he's convented. First, for this
To justify this worthy nobleman, [woman,
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes,
Till she herself confess it.

Duke.

Good friar, let's hear it,

[Isabella is carried off guarded; and Mariana comes forward.

Do you not smile at this, lord Angelo?—
O heaven, the vanity of wretched fools!—
Give us some seats. — Come, cousin Angelo;
In this I'll be impartial: be you judge
Of your own cause. — Is this the witness, friar?
First, let her show her face, and after speak.

Mariana.

Pardon, my lord, I will not show my face,
Until my husband bid me.

Duke.

What, are you married?

Mariana.

No, my lord.

Duke.

Are you a maid?

Mariana.

Neither, my lord....

Duke.

Why you

Are nothing then: neither maid, widow, nor wife?

Lucio.

My lord, she may be a punk; for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Duke.

Silence that fellow: I would, he had some
To prattle for himself. [cause

Well, my lord.

Mariana.

My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married;
And, I confess, besides, I am no maid:
I have known my husband, yet my husband
That ever he knew me. [knows not

Lucio.

He was drunk then, my lord: it can be no better.

Duke.

For the benefit of silence, would thou wert so too!

Lucio.

Well, my lord.

Duke.

This is no witness for lord Angelo.

Mariana.

Now I come to't, my lord.
She that accuses him of fornication,
In self-same manner doth accuse my husband;
And charges him, my lord, with such a time,
When, I'll depose, I had him in mine arms,
With all th' effect of love.

Angelo.

Charges she more than me?

Mariana.

Not that I know.

Duke.
DUKE. No? you say, your husband.

MARIANA. Why, just, my lord, and that is ANGELO, who thinks, he knows, that he ne'er knew my body. But knows, he thinks, that he knows ISABEL's.

ANGELO. This is a strange abuse. — Let's see thy face.

MARIANA. My husband bids me; now I will unmask.

[Unveiling.]

ANGELO. This is that face, thou cruel ANGELO, which once, thou swor'st, was worth the looking on: This is the hand, which, with a vow'd contract, was fast belock'd in thine: this is the body that took away the match from ISABEL, and did supply thee at thy garden-house in her imagin'd person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

LUCIO. Carnally, she says.

Duke. Siurrah, no more.

LUCIO. Enough, my lord.

ANGELO. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman; and five years since there was some speech of marriage between myself and her, which was broke off partly, for that her promised proportions came short of composition; but, in chief, for that her reputation was disvalued in levity; since which time of five years I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her. My faith and honour.

MARIANA. Noble prince, as there comes light from heaven, and words from breath, as there is sense in truth, and truth in virtue, I am affianced this man's wife, as strongly lord, as words could make up vows; and, my good lord, Tuesday night last gone, it's a garden-house, he knew me as a wife. As this is true, let me in safety raise me from my knees, or else for ever be confixed here, a marble monument.

ANGELO. I did but smile till now; now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice; my patience here is touch'd. I do perceive, these poor informal women are no more but instruments of some more mightier member, that sets them on. Let me have way, my lord, to find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart; and punish them to your height of pleasure. Thou foolish friar, and thou pernicious woman, compound with her that's gone, think'st thou, thy oaths, sain't, though they would swear down each particular were testimonies against his worth and credit. That's seal'd in approbation? — You, lord ESCALUS, sit with my cousin: lend him your kind pains

To find out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd. — There is another frar that set them on; let him be sent for.

FRIAR PETER. Would he were here, my lord; for he, indeed, hath set the women on to this complaint. Your provost knows the place where he abides, and he may fetch him.

Duke. Go, do it instantly. [Exit Provost. And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin, whom it concerns to hear this matter forth, do with your injuries as seems you best, in any chastisement: I for a while will leave you; but stir not you, till you have determined upon these slanderers. [well ESCALUS. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly. — [Exit Duke.] Signior LUCIO, did not you say, you knew that friar LODOWICK to be a dishonest person?

LUCIO. Cucullus non facit monachum: honest in nothing, but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

ESCALUS. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him. We shall find this friar a notable fellow.

LUCIO. As any in Vienna, on my word.

ESCALUS. Call that same ISABEL here again. [To an Attendant.] I would speak with her. Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.

LUCIO. Not better than he, by her own report.

ESCALUS. Say you?

LUCIO. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess: perchance, publicly she'll be ashamed.

[Enter Officers, with ISABELLA: the Duke, in a Friar's habit, and Provost.]

ESCALUS. I will go darkly to work with her.

LUCIO. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.

ESCALUS. Come on, mistress. [To ISABELLA.] Here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

LUCIO. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here, with the provost.

ESCALUS. In very good time: — speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

MUM.

ESCALUS. Come, sir. Did you set these women on to slander lord ANGELO? they have confess'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

ESCALUS. How I know you where you are?

Duke.
Duke.

Respect to your great place! and let the devil
Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne.—
Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Esclavus.
The duke's in us, and we will hear you speak:
Look, you speak justly.

Duke.

Boldly, at least. — But, O, poor souls! Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?
Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone? Then is your cause gone too. The duke's
Thus to retort your manifest appeal, unjust,
And put your trial in the villain's mouth,
Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio.

This is the rascal: this is he I spoke of.

Esclavus.

Why, thou un reverence and unhallow'd friar! Is't not enough, thou hast suborn'd these
To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth,
And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain? And then to glance from
To the duke himself, to tax him with injustice?
Take him hence; to the rack with him:—
We'll touze you
Joint by joint, but we will know his purpose.—
What! unjust?

Duke.

Be not so hot; the duke dare
No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own: his subject am I not,
Nor here provincial. My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble,
Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for all faults,
But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.

Esclavus.

Slander to the state! Away with him to prison.

Angelo.

What can you vouch against him, signior
Is this the man that you did tell us of? [Lucio?]

Lucio.

'Tis he, my lord.—Come hither, Goodman bale-pate: do you know me?

Duke.

I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

Lucio.

O! did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Most notably, sir.

Lucio.

Do you so, sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke.

You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse.

Lucio.

O, thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke.

I protest, I love the duke as I love myself.

Angelo.

Hark how the villain would close now, after his treasonable abuses.

Esclavus.

Such a fellow is not to be 'talk'd withal: —
Away with him to prison. — Where is the provest? — Away with him to prison. Lay bolts enough upon him, let him speak no more.
Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion.

[The Provost lays hand on the Duke.]

Duke.

Stay, sir; stay a while.

Angelo.

Lucio.

Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh! sir! Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pox to you! show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour. Will'n't off?

[Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.]

Duke.

Thou art the first knave, that o'er made a
Duke.—
First, provost, let me ball these gentle three.—
Sneak not away, sir; [To Lucio.] for the friar
and you
Must have a word anon.—Lay hold on him.

Lucio.

This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke.

What you have spoke, I pardon; sit you down.

Lucio. [To Esclavus.]

We'll borrow place of him: — Sir, by your leave.

Angelo.

Hast thou word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can do thee office? If thou hast,
Rely upon it till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.

Angelo.

O, my dread lord! I should be guiltier than my guiltiness,
To think I can be indiscernible,
When I perceive your grace, like power divine,
Hath look'd upon my pass: Then, good prince,
No longer session hold upon my shame,
But let my trial be mine own confessions;
Immediate sentence then, and sequent death,
is all the grace I beg.

Duke.

Come hither, Mariana.—

Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Angelo.

I was my lord.

Duke.

Go take her hence, and marry her instantly.—
Do you the office, friar; which consummate,
Return him here again.—Go with him, provost.

[Exeunt Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost.]

Esclavus.

My lord. I am more amaz'd at his dishonour,
Than at the strangeness of it.

Duke.

Come hither, Isabel.

Your friar is now your prince: as I was then
Advertising and holy to your business,
Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isabella.
Act v. Sc. i.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Isabella.

O, give me pardon,
That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd
Your unknown sovereignty!

Duke.

You are pardon'd, Isabel:
And now, dear maid, be you as free to us,
Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart;
And you may marvel, why I disturb'd myself.
Labouring to save his life, and would not rather
Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power,
Than let him so be lost. O, most kind maid!
It was the swift celerity of his death,
Which I did think with slower foot came on,
That brain'd my purpose: but, peace be with him!
That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear. Make it your
So happy is your brother. [comfort.

Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost.

Isabella.

I do, my lord.

Duke.

For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whose soul imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well-defend'd honour, you must pardon
For Mariana's sake. But, as he adjudge'd your (Being criminal, in double violation [brother,
Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,) The very mercy of the law cryes out.
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
"An Angelo for Claudio, death for death!"
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers [Measure.
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested,
Which, though thou would'st deny, denies thee
vantage.
We do condemn thee to the very block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste.
Away with him.

Mariana.

O, my most gracious lord!
I hope you will not mark me with a husband.

Duke.

It is your husband mock'd you with a husband.
Consenting to the safeguard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit; else imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life;
And chok'd your good to come. For his possessions,
Although by confiscation they are ours;
We do instal and widow you withal,
To buy you a better husband.

Mariana.

O, my dear lord!
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke.

Never crave him: we are definitive.

Mariana.

Gentle my liege,— [Kneeling.

Duke.

You do but lose your labour.
Away with him to death.—Now, sir, [To Lucio.
to you.

Mariana.

O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel, take my part:
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come
I'll lend you; all my life to do you service.

Duke.

Against all sense you do importune her:
Should she kneel down in mercy of this fact,
Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mariana.

Isabel,

Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me:
Hold up your hands, say nothing, I'll speak all.
They say, best men are moulded out of faults,
And, for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: so may my husband.
O, Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Duke.

He dies for Claudio's death.

Isabella.

Most bounteous sir, [Kneeling.

Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd. I partly think,
A due sincerity govern'd his deeds,
Till he did look on me: since it is so,
Let him not die. My brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died:
For Angelo,
His act did not o'ertake his bad Intent;
And must be buried but as an Intent
That perish'd by the way. Thoughts are no subjects,
Intents but merely thoughts.

Mariana.

Merely, my lord.

Duke.

Your suit's unprofitable: stand up, I say.
I have bethought me of another fault.—
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?

Provost.

It was commanded so.

Duke.

Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Provost.

No, my good lord: it was by private message.

Duke.

For which I do discharge you of your office:
Give up your keys.

Provost.

Pardon me, noble lord:
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me, after more advice;
For testimony whereof, one in the prison.
That should by private order else have died,
I have reserv'd alive.

Duke.

What's he?

Provost.

His name is Barnardine.

Duke.

I would thou had'st done so by Claudio.—
Go, fetch him hither: let me look upon him.

[Exit Provost.

Escalus.

I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
As you, lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Angelo.

I am sorry that such sorrow I procure;
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy:
'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter
Re-enter Provost, Barnardine, Claudio, and Isabella.

Duke.

Which is that Barnardine?

Provost.

This, my lord.

Duke.

There was a friar told me of this man.
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no farther than this world;
And squar'st thy life according. Thou'rt condemned;

But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee, take this mercy to provide
For better times to come.—Friar, advise him:
I leave him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's that?

Provost.

This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
That should have died when Claudio lost his head,
As like almost to Claudio as himself.
[Unmuffles Claudio.]

Duke.

If he be like your brother, [To Isabella] for his sake
Is he pardon'd; and for your lovely sake
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too. But fitter time for that.
By this lord Angelo perceives he's safe:
Methinks, I see a quick'ning in his eye.—
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well:
Look that you love your wife; her worth, worth
I find an apt remission in myself, [yours.—
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon.
You, sirrah, [To Lucio] that knew me for a fool, a coward,
One all of luxury, an ass, a madman:
Wherin have I so deserv'd of you,
That you extol me thus?

Lucio.

'Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me for it, you may; but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipp'd.'

Duke.

Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.—
Proclaim it, provost, round about the city,
If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,
(As I have heard him swear himself there's one Whom he begot with child) let her appear,
And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio.

I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now I made you a duke; good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke.

Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits.—Take him to prison,
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio.

Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke.

Slander a prince deserves it.—[store.
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you re-
Joy to you, Martana!—love her, Angelo:
I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue.—
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:
There's more behind that is more gratulate.
Thanks, provost, for thy care, and secrecy;
We shall employ thee in a worthier place.—
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's:
Th' offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good;
Whereeto if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.—
So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know. [Exeunt.
ACT I

SCENE I. A Hall in the Duke’s Palace.

Enter Solinus, Duke of Ephesus, Egeon a Merchant of Syracuse, Jailor, Officers, and other Attendants.

Egeon.

PROCEDE, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.

Duke.

Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more.
I am not partial, to infringe our laws:
The enmity and discord, which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke
To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,—
Who, wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal’d his rigorous statutes with their bloods,—
Excludes all pity from our threat’ning looks.
For, since the mortal and intestine jars
‘Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracusians and ourselves,
To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:
Nay, more, if any, born at Ephesus,
Be seen at any Syracusan marts and fairs;
Again, if any Syracusan born
Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies;
His goods confiscate to the duke’s dispose,
Unless a thousand marks be levied,
To quit the penalty, and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;
Therefore, by law thou art condemn’d to die.

Egeon.

Yet this my comfort; when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening sun.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.
For what obscured light the heavens did grant
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
Which, though myself would gladly have em-
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife, [brac’d,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mournd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Fork’d me to seek delays for them and me,
And this it was,—for other means was none.—
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-rife, to us.
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fasten’d him unto a small spare mast,
Such as sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos’d, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix’d,
Fasten’d ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sun, gazeing upon the earth,
Dispers’d those vapours that offended us,
And by the benefit of his wish’d light
The seas wax’d calm, and we discovered
The ships from far making amain to us;
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Duke.
Nay, forward, old man; do not break off so,
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

Egon.
O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthy term’d them merciless to us! [Leagues,
For, ere the ships could meet by twice five
We were encounter’d by a mighty rock,
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
So that in this unfortunite divorce of us
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burden’d
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind,
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishersmen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another ship had seiz’d on us;
And an环节 whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthful welcome to their shipwreck’d guests;
And would have rent the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.

Thus have you heard me sever’d from my bliss,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong’d,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke.
And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall’n of them, and thee, till now.

Egon.
My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun’d me,
That his attendant (so his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain’d his name,) Might bear him company in the quest of him;
With which whilst I labour’d of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov’d.
Five sumneres have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia;
And, courting homeward, came to Ephesus,

Duke.
Hapless Egon, whom the fates have mark’d
To bear the extremity of dire mis hap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disdain,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But though thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall’d
But to our honour’s great disapparagement,
Yet will I favour thee in what I can;
Therefore, merchant, I’ll limit thee this day,
To seek thy help by beneficial help.
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if no, then thou art doom’d to die,—
Jailor, take him to thy custody.

Jailor.
I will, my lord.

Egon.
Hopeless and helpless, doth Egon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A public Place.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

Merchant.
Therefore, give out you are of Epidaurus,
Let that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusan merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And, not being able to buy out his life
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Go, bear it to the Contour, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour It will be dinner-time:
Till that I’ll view theウンの者 of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine inn,
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dromio of Syracuse.
Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean. [Exit.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
A trusty villain, sir; that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn, and dine with me?

Merchant.
I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o’clock,
Please you, I’ll meet with you upon the mart,
And after words confer you till the time;
My present business calls me from you now.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Farewell till then. I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.

Merchant.
Sir, I commend you to your own content.

[Exit. Antipholus
ACT II. Sc. I.

COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
He that commends me to mine own content, Commends me to the thing I cannot get. I to the world am like a drop of water, That in the ocean seeks another drop; Who, falling there to find his fellow forth, Unseen, Inquisite, confounds himself: So I, to find a mother, and a brother, In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.
Here comes the almanack of my true date.— What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Return'd so soon I rather approach'd too late, The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit, The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell; My mistress made it one upon my cheek: She is so hot, because the meat is cold; The meat is cold, because you come not home; You come not home, because you have no stomach; You have no stomach, having broke your fast; But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pray, Are penitent for your default to-day.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Stop in my wind, sir. Tell me this, I pray; Where have you left the money that I gave you?

Dromio of Ephesus.
O I sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper. The saddler had it, sir; I kept it not.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
I am not in a sportive humour now. Tell me, and daily not, where is the money? We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust So great a charge from thine own custom?

Dromio of Ephesus.
I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner. I from my mistress come to you in post; If I return, I shall be post indeed, For she will score your fault upon my pate. Methinks, your maw, like mine, should be your clock, And strike you home without a messenger.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Come, Dromio, come; these jests are out of season: Reserve them till a merrier hour than this. Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dromio of Ephesus.
To me, sir? why you gave no gold to me.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Come on, sir knave; have done your foolishness, And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

Dromio of Ephesus.
My charge was but to fetch you from the mart Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner. My mistress, and her sister, stay for you.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Now, as I am a Christian, answer me, In what safe place you have bestow'd my money, Or I shall break that merry scone of yours, That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd. Where is the thousand marks thou had'st of me?

Dromio of Ephesus.
I have some marks of yours upon my pate; Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders, But not a thousand marks between you both. If I should pay your worship those again, Verchance, you will not bear them patiently.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Your worship's wife, my mistress at the Phoenix; She that doth fast till you come home to dinner, And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face, Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave. [Strikes him.] Dromio of Ephesus. What mean you, sir? For God's sake, hold your hands. Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels. [Exit.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Upon my life, by some device or other The villain is o'er-raught of all my money. They say, this town is full of cozenage; As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye, Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind, Soul-killing witches that deform the body, Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks, And many such like liberties of sin; If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner. I'll to the decoy, to go seek this slave: I greatly fear, my money is not safe. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A public Place.

Enter Adriana. wife to Antipholus of Ephesus, and Luciana, her sister.

Adriana.
NEITHER my husband, nor the slave return'd, That in such haste I sent to seek his master? Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luciana.
Perhaps, some merchant hath invited him, And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner. Good sister, let us dine, and never fret: A man like mine to his liberty: Time is their master; and, when they see time, They'll go, or come: if so, be patient, sister.

Adriana.
Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Luciana.
Because their business still lies out o' door.

Adriana.
Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luciana.
O I know he is the b Victor of your will.

Adriana.
There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luciana.
Why, head-strong liberty is lashed with woe. There's nothing, situate under heaven's eye, But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky: The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls, Are their males' subjects, and at their controls. Men, more divine, the masters of all these. Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas, Indued with intellectual sense and soulis, Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls, Are COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT II. Sc. I.

Luciana.

Quoth who?

Dromio of Ephesus.

Quoth my master:

I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistress. So that my errand, due unto my tongue, I thank him, I bear home upon my shoulders; For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adriana.

Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dromio of Ephesus.

Go back again, and be new beaten home? For God's sake, send some other messenger.

Adriana.

Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dromio of Ephesus.

And he will bless that cross with other beating. Between you I shall have a holy head.

Adriana.

Hence, prating peasant! fetch thy master home.

Luciana.

Fie, how impatience lowreth in your face!

Adriana.

His company must do his milions grace, Whilst I at home starve for a merry look. Hi-th homely age th' alluring beauty took From my poor cheek? then, he hath wasted it: Are my discourses dull? barren my wit? If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd, Unkindness blunts it, more than marble hard. Do their gay vestments his affections hilt? That's not my fault; he's master of my state. What ruins are in me, that can be found By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground Of my defeatures. My decayed fair A sunny look of his would soon repair; But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale, And feeds from home: poor I am but his stale.

Luciana.

Self-harming jealousy! — fie! beat it hence.

Adriana.

Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense. I know his eye doth homage other where, Or else, what lets it but he would be here? Sister, you know, he promise'd me a chain: Would that alone, alone he would detain, So he would keep fair quarter with his bed! I see, the jewel best enamelled Will lose his beauty: yet though gold 'bides still, That others touch, an often touching will Wear gold; and no man, that hath a name, By falsehood and corruption doth it shame. Since that my beauty cannot please his eye, I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.

Luciana.

How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The same.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

The gold, I gave to Dromio, is laid up Safe at the Countur; and the heedful slave
Is wander’d forth, in care to seek me out.
By computation, and mine host’s report,
I could not speak with Dromio, since at first
I sent him from the mart. See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter’d?
As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
You know no Centaur? You receiv’d no gold?
Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phaenis? Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

Dromio of Syracuse.

What answer, sir? when speak I such a word?
Antipholus of Syracuse.

Even now, even here, not half an hour since.

Dromio of Syracuse.

I did not see you since you sent me hence,
Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Villain, thou didst deny the gold’s receipt,
And toldst me of a mistress, and a dinner;
For which, I hope, thou felt’st I was displeas’d.

Dromio of Syracuse.

I am glad to see you in this merry轩.
What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

You, dost thou jeer, and mock me at the teeth?
Thinkst thou, I jest? Hold, take thou that,
and that.

[Dating him.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Hold, sir, for God’s sake! now your jest is earnest:
Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,
Your sauciness will jest upon my love,
And make a common of my serious hours.
When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport,
But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.
If you will jest with me, know my aspect,
And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Sconce, call you it? so you would leave battering,
I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and insconce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Dost thou not know?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Nothing, sir; but that I am beaten.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Shall I tell you why?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Why, first,—for stoutling me; and then, wherefore,—for urging it the second time to me.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Was there ever any man thus beaten out of school,
When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme nor reason?—
Well, sir, I thank you.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Thank me, sir? for what?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Marry, sir, for this something, that you gave me for nothing.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

I’ll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?

Dromio of Syracuse.

No, sir: I think, the meat wants that I have.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

In good time, sir; what’s that?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Basting.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Well, sir, then ‘twill be dry.

Dromio of Syracuse.

If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Your reason?

Dromio of Syracuse.

I lest it make you choleric; and purchase me another dry basting.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Well, sir, learn to jest in good time: there’s a time for all things.

Dromio of Syracuse.

I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

By what rule, sir?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Let’s hear it.

Dromio of Syracuse.

There’s no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

May he not do it by fine and recovery?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Yes, to pass for fine for a periwig, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Why, but there’s many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers, without wit.

Dromio of Syracuse.

The planer dealer, the sooner lost: yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

For what reason?

Dromio of Syracuse.

For two: and sound ones too.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dromio
Who, every word by all my wit being scann'd,
Want wit in all one word to understand.

Luciana.

Pie, brother: how the world is chang'd with you!
When were you want to use my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

By Dromio?

Dromio of Syracuse.

By me?

Adriana.

By thee; and this thou didst return from him,—
That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Did you converse, sir, with this gentlewoman?
What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dromio of Syracuse.

I, sir? I never saw her till this time.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Villain, thou liest; for even her very words
Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

Dromio of Syracuse.

I never spake with her in all my life.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

How can she thus then call us by our names,
Unless it be by inspiration?

Adriana.

How ill agrees it with your gravity
To counterfeith thus grossly with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine;
Thou art en elm, my husband, I a vine,
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is cross,
Usurping ivy, brier, or idle moss;
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infest thy sap, and live on thy confusion.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

To me she speaks; she moves me for her theme!
What, was I married to her in my dream,
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives in my eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy.

Luciana.

Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.

Dromio of Syracuse.

O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner.
This is the fairy land: O, spite of sprites!
We talk with goblins, owls, and elvish sprites.
If we obey them not, this will ensue, [blue.
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and

I am transformed, master, am I not?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

I think thou art, in mind, and so am I.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Nay, master, both in mind and in my shape.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Thou hast thine own form.
ACT III. SC. 1. COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Luciana.

If thou art chang'd to aught, 'tis to an ass.

Dromio of Syracuse.

'Tis true; she rides me, and I long for grass.

'Tis so, I am an ass; else it could never be,

But I should know her, as well as she knows me.

Adriana.

Come, come; no longer will I be a fool,

To put the finger in the eye and weep,

Whilst man and master laugh my woes to scorn.

Come, sir, to dinner.—Dromio, keep the gate.—

Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,

And shrieve you of a thousand idle pranks.—

Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,

Say, he dines forth, and let no creature enter.

Come, sister.—Dromio, play the porter well.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?

Sleeping or waking? mad, or well-advis'd?

Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd?

I'll say as they say, and persever so,

And in this mist, at all adventures, go.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Master, shall I be porter at the gate?

Luciana.

Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your pate.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Ephesus,

Dromio, and Balthazar.

Good signor Angelo, you must excuse us all;

My wife is shrewish, when I keep not hours.

Say, that I linger'd with you at your shop

To see the making of her carkanet,

And that to-morrow you will bring it home;

But here's a villain, that would face me down.

He met me on the mart, and that I beat him,

Andcharg'd him with an thousand marks in gold;

And that I did deny my wife and house.

Thou drunkard, thou, what did'st thou mean by this?

Dromio of Ephesus.

Say what you will, sir; but I know what I know.

[To show:]

That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand

If the skin were parchment, and the blows you gave were ink,

[Think:]

Your own hand-writing would tell you what I Antipholus of Ephesus.

I think, thou art an ass.

Dromio of Ephesus.

Marry, so it doth appear,

By the wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear.

I should kick, being kick'd; and being at that pass

[An ass.

You would keep from my heels, and beware of Antipholus of Ephesus.

You are sad, signior Balthazar: pray God, our here.

May answer my good-will, and your good welcome

Balthazar.

I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

O, signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,

A table-full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.

Balthazar.

Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.

Balthazar.

Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Ay, to a niggardly host, and more sparing guest:

But though my cates be mean, take them in good

Better cheer may you have, but not with better heart.

But soft! my door is lock'd. Go bid them let us

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Who talks within there? ho! open the door.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Right, sir; I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to-day.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Nor to-day here you must not, come again when you may.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Dromio of Ephesus.

Let my master in, Luce.

Luce.

Faith no; he comes too late;

And so tell your master.

Dromio.
Dromio of Ephesus.

O Lord! I must laugh!—Have at you with a proverb.—Shall I set in my staff? Luce.

Have at you with another: that's,—when? can you tell? Dromio of Syracuse.

If thy name be called Luce, Luce, thou hast answer'd him well. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in, I hope? Luce. I thought to have ask'd you. Dromio of Syracuse.

And you said, no. Dromio of Ephesus.

So; come, help! well struck; there was blow for blow. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Thou baggage, let me in. Luce.

Can you tell for whose sake? Dromio of Ephesus.

Master, knock the door hard. Luce.

Let him knock till it ache. Antipholus of Ephesus.

You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down. Luce.

What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town? Adriana. [Within.

Who is that at the door, that keeps all this noise? Dromio of Syracuse.

By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Are you there, wife? you might have come before. Adriana.

Your wife, sir knave? go, get you from the door. Dromio of Ephesus.

If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore. Angelo.

Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome: we would fain have either. Balthazar.

In debating which was best, we shall part with neither. Dromio of Ephesus.

They stand at the door, master: bid them welcome hither. Antipholus of Ephesus.

There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in. Dromio of Ephesus.

You would say so, master, if your garments were thin. [In the cold: Your cake here is warm within; you stand here it would make a man mad as a buck to be so bought and sold. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Go, fetch me something: I'll break ope the gate.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate. Dromio of Ephesus.

A man may break a word with you, sir, and words are but wind; Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind. Dromio of Syracuse.

It seems, thou want'st breaking. Out upon thee, blind! Dromio of Ephesus.

Here's too much out upon thee! I pray thee, let me. Dromio of Syracuse.

Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Well, I'll break in. Go, borrow me a crow. Dromio of Ephesus.

A crow without feather? master, mean you so? [a feather. For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'llpluck a crow together. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Go, get thee gone: fetch an iron crow. Balthazar.

Have patience, sir; I let it not be so: Herein you war against your reputation, And draw within the compass of suspect Th' unviolated honour of your wife. [dom. Once this.—Your long experience of her wis- Her sober virtue, years, and modesty, Plead on her part some cause to you unknown; And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse Why at this time the doors are made against you. Be rul'd by me: depart in patience, And let us to the Tiger all to dinner; And about evening come yourself alone To know the reason of this strange restraint. If by strong hand you offer to break in, Now in the stirring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made of it; And that supposed by the common route, Against your yet ungi'led estimation, That may with foul intrusion enter in, And dwell upon your grave when you are dead; For slander lives upon succession, For ever housed, where it gets possession. Antipholus of Ephesus.

You have prevail'd: I will depart in quiet, And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry. I know a wench of excellent discourse, Pretty and witty; wild, and yet too, gentle; There will we dine: this woman that I mean, My wife (but, I protest, without desert,) Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal: To her will we to dinner.—Get you home, And fetch the chain; by this, I know, 'tis made: Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine; For there's the house. That chain will I bestow (Be it for nothing but to spare my wife) Upon mine hostess there. Good sir, make haste. Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me, I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disman me. Angelo.

I'll meet you at that place, some hour hence. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Do so. This jest shall cost me some extense.
SCENE II. The same.

Enter Luciana, and Antipholus of Syracuse.

Luciana.
And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus,
Even in the spring of love, thy love's springs rot?
Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then, for her wealth's sake use her with more kindness:
Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth:
Muffle your false love with some show of blindness;
Let not my sister read it in your eye;
Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator;
Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty;
Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger:
Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted;
Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint:
Be secret-true; what need she be acquainted?
What simple thief brags of his own attainment?
'Tis double wrong, to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy looks at board:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed;
Il leg deeds are doubled with an evil word.
Alas, poor women! make us but believe,
Being compact of credit, that you love us;
Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve;
We in your motion turn, and you may move us.
Then, gentle brother, get you up again:
Comfort my sister, cheer her, call her wife.
'Tis holy sport to be a little vain, [Strife.
When the sweet breath of flattery conquer kindred.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Sweet mistress, (what your name is else, I know not, Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine),
Less in your knowledge, and your grace you show not, [Divine.
Than our earth's wonder; more than earth
Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak?
Lay open to my earthly gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,
I've folded meaning of your words' deceit.
Against my soul's pure truth, why labour you
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transform me then, and to your power I'll
But if that I am, then well I know, [Yield.
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline.
O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,
'To drown me in thy sister's flood of tears.
Sing, syren, for thyself, and I will dote;
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take thee, and there lie;
And, in that glorious supposition, think
He gains by death, that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink!

Luciana.
Why call you me love? call my sister so.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Thy sister's sister.

Luciana.
That's my sister.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
No;

It is thyself, mine own self's better part;
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.

Luciana.
All this my sister is, or else should be.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Call thyself sister, sweet, for I aim thee.
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life:
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife.
Give me thy hand.

Luciana.
Do, soft, sir! hold you still:
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good-will.

[Exit.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse hastily.

Antipholus of Syracuse
Why, how now, Dromio! where run'st thou so fast?

Dromio of Syracuse.
Do you know, sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?

Antipholus of Syracuse.
I am an ass; I am a woman's man, and besides myself.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
What woman's man? and how besides thyself?

Dromio of Syracuse.
Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me no.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
What claim lays she to thee?

Dromio of Syracuse.
Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast: not that, I being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
What is she?

Dromio of Syracuse.
A very reverend body: ay, such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say, sir-reverence. I have but lean luck in the match, and yet she is a wondrous fat marriage.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
How dost thou mean a fat marriage?

Dromio of Syracuse.
Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her rage, and the tallow in them, will burn a Poland winter: if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
What complexion is she of?
Dromio of Syracuse.

Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: for why? she sweats; a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

That's a fault that water will mend.

Dromio of Syracuse.

No, sir; 'tis in grain: Noah's flood could not do it.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

What's her name?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Nell, sir; but her name is three quarters, that is, an ell; and three quarters will not measure her from hip to hip.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Then she bears some breadth?

Dromio of Syracuse.

No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe; I could find out countries in her.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Marry, sir, in her buttocks: I found it out by the bogs.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where Scotland?

Dromio of Syracuse.

I found it by the barrenness, hard, in the palm of the hand.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where France?

Dromio of Syracuse.

In her forehead; arm'd and reverted, making war against her heir.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where England?

Dromio of Syracuse.

I look'd for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them: but I guess, it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where Spain?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it hot in her breath.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where America, the Indies?

Dromio of Syracuse.

O! sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain, who sent whole armadoes of carracks to be ballast at her nose.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dromio of Syracuse.

O! sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or divider, laid claim to me; call'd me Dromio; swore, I was assured to her: told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch: and, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had trapped' me to a curtail dog, and made me turn 't the wheel.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Go, hie thee presently post to the road, and if the wind blow any way from shore, I will not harbour in this town to-night. If any bark put forth, come to the mart, Where I will walk till thou return to me. If every one knows us, and we know none, 'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and begone.

Dromio of Syracuse.

As from a bear a man would run for life, So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

There's none but witches do inhabit here, And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence. She that doth call me husband, even my soul Doth for a wife abhor; but her fair sister, Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace, Of such enchanting presence and discourse, Hath almost made me traitor to myself: But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong, I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo.

Master Antipholus?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ay, that's my name.

Angelo.

I know it well, sir. Lo, here is the chain. I thought to have ta'en you at the Porcupine; The chain unfinished'd made me stay, thus long.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

What is your will that I shall do with this?

Angelo.

What please yourself, sir: I have made it for you.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Made it for me, sir? I bespoke it not.

Angelo.

Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have. Go home with it, and please your wife withal; And soon at supper-time I'll visit you, And then receive my money for the chain.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

I pray you, sir, receive the money now. For fear you ne'er see chain, nor money, more.

Angelo.

You are a merry man, sir. Fare you well.

[Exit.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

What I should think of this, I cannot tell; But this I think, there's no man is so vain, That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain. I see, a man here needs not live by shifts, When in the streets he meets such golden gifts. I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay; If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1. The same.

Enter a Merchant, Angelo, and an Officer.

Merchant.

You know, since Pentecost the sum is due, And since I have not much importun'd you; Nor now I had not, but that I am bound To Persia, and want gilders for my voyage: Therefore make present satisfaction, Or I'll attach you by this officer.

Angelo.
Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and Dromio of Ephesus, from the courtier's.

Officer.

That labour may you save; see where he comes.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou And buy a rope's end, that will I bestow Among my wife and her confederates, For locking me out of my doors by day.— But soft, I see the goldsmith.—Get thee gone; Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dromio of Ephesus.

I buy a thousand pound a year? I buy a rope? [Exit.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

A man is well holp up that trusts to you: I promised your presence, and the chain. But neither chain, nor goldsmith, came to me. Belike, you thought our love would last too long, If it were chain'd together, and therefore came not.

Angelo.

Saying your merry humour, here's the note How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat, The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion, Which doth amount to three odd ducats more Than I stand debted to this gentleman: I pray you, see him presently discharge'd, For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I am not furnish'd with the present money; Besides, I have some business in the town. Good signior, take the stranger to my house, And with you take the chain, and bid my wife Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof: Perchance, I will be there as soon as you.

Angelo.

Then, you will bring the chain to her yourself? Antipholus of Ephesus.

No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Angelo.

Well, sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?

Antipholus of Ephesus.

An if I have not, sir, I hope you have, Or else you may return without your money.

Angelo.

Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain: Both wind and tide stay for this gentleman, And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Good lord! you use this dalliance, to excise Your breach of promise to the Porcupine. I should have chid you for not bringing it, But, like a throw, you first begin to brawl.

Merchant.

The hour steals on: I pray you, sir, dispatch.

Angelo.

You hear, how he importunes me: the chain— Antipholus of Ephesus.

Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Come, come; you know, I gave it you even now. Either send the chain, or send me by some token. Antipholus of Ephesus.

Fie! now you run this humour out of breath. Come where's the chain? I pray you, let me see it.

Merchant.

My business cannot brook this dalliance. Good sir, say, wher'e you'll answer me, or no? If not, I'll leave him to the officer.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I answer you! what should I answer you?

Angelo.

The money that you owe me for the chain.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I owe you none, till I receive the chain.

Angelo.

You know, I gave it you half an hour since.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

You gave me none: you wrong me much to say so.

Angelo.

You wrong me more, sir, in denying it: Consider how it stands upon my credit.

Merchant.

Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.

Officer.

I do, and charge you in the duke's name to obey me.

Angelo.

This touches me in reputation.— Either consent to pay this sum for me, Or I attach you by this officer.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Consent to pay thee that I never had? Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.

Angelo.

Here is thy fee: arrest him, officer.— I would not spare my brother in this case, If he should scorn me so apparently.

Officer.

I do arrest you, sir. You hear the suit.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I do obey thee, till I give thee bail.— But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear, As all the metal in your shop will answer.

Angelo.

Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus, To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Master, there is a bark of Epidamnum, That stays but till her owner comes aboard, And then, sir, she bears away. Our fraughtage, I have convey'd aboard, and I have bought [sir, The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vite.] The ship is in her trim: the merry wind [all, Blows fair from land; they stay for naught at But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

How now? a madman! Why, thou peevish sheep, What ship of Epidamnum stays for me?

Dromio of Syracuse.

A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope; And told thee to what purpose, and what end.
Dromio of Syracuse.
You sent me for a rope's end as soon. You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
I will debate this matter at more leisure, and teach your ears to list me with more heed. To Adriana, villain, he thee straight; give her this key, and tell her, in the desk that's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry, there is a purse of dukats: let her send it. Tell her, I am arrested in the street, [gone. And that shall bail me. He thee, slave, be on, officer, to prison till it come.

[Exeunt Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Antipholus of Ephesus.]

Dromio of Syracuse.
To Adriana? that is where we din'd, Where Dorothea did claim me for her husband: she is too big, I hope, for me to compass. Thither I must, although against my will, for servants must their masters' minds fulfill. [Exit.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adriana. Ah! Luciana, did he tempt thee so? Might'st thou perceive austerity in his eye; That he did plead in earnest? yes or no? Look'd he or red, or pale? or sad, or merrily? What observation mad'st thou in this case, Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?

Luciana. First he denied you had in him no right. Adriana. He meant, he did me none: the more my spite. Luciana. Then swore he, that he was a stranger here. Adriana. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were. Luciana. Then pleaded I for you. Adriana. And what said he?

Luciana. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me. Adriana. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?

Luciana. With words that in an honest suit might move. First, he did praise my beauty; then, my speech.

Adriana. Did'st speak him fairest?

Luciana. Have patience, I beseech.

Adriana. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still: [will. My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his lie is deformed, crooked, old, and sere, ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapeless every where; Violent, ungenteel, foolish, blunt, unkind, Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.

Luciana. Who would be jealous, then, of such a one? No evil lost was wait'd when it is gone.

Adriana. Ah! but I think him better than I say, And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away: My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dromio of Syracuse. Here, go: the desk! the purse! sweet, now make haste.

Luciana. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dromio of Syracuse. By running fast.

Adriana. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?

Dromio of Syracuse. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell: A devil in an everlasting garment hath him, One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel; A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough: A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff; A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands: A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot well; [soul's to hell. One that, before the judgment, carries poor Adriana. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dromio of Syracuse. I do not know the matter: he is 'rested on the case.

Adriana. What, is he arrested? tell me, at whose suit?

Dromio of Syracuse. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well; But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can I tell. Will you send him, mistress, redemption? the money in his desk?

Adriana. Go fetch it, sister.—This I wonder at; [Exit Luciana. That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:—Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dromio of Syracuse. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing; A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?

Adriana. What, the chain?

Dromio of Syracuse. No, no, the bell. 'Tis time that I were gone: It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

Adriana. The hours come back! that did I never hear.

Dromio of Syracuse. O yes; if any hour meet a serjeant, 'a turns back for very fear.

Adriana. As if time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dromio of Syracuse. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season. [say. Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men That time comes stealing on by night and day? If he be in debt and theft, and a serjeant in the way, [day? Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a Re-enter Luciana.

Adriana. Go, Dromio: there's the money, bear it straight,

And
And bring thy master home immediately.—
Come, sir; I am press’d down with conceit,
Conceit, my comfort, and my injury.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
There’s not a man I meet but doth salute me,
As if I were their well acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me; some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy;
Even now a tailor call’d me in his shop,
And show’d me silks that he had bought for me,
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Master, here’s the gold you sent me for.
What have you got the picture of old Adam new apparell’d?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Not that Adam that kept the prison: he that goes
In the calf’s-skin that was kill’d for the prodigals:
He that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel,
And bid you forsake thy liberty.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

I understand thec not.

Dromio of Syracuse.

No? why, ’tis a plain case: he that went, like a base-viol, in a case of leather: the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a sob, and rests them: he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durability: he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace, than a morris-pike.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

What, thou mean’st an officer?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Ay, sir, the serjeant of the band; he that brings any man to answer it, that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, “God give you good rest!”

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Well, sir, there rest in your jollity. Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the serjeant to tarry for the joy Delay. Here are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

The fellow is distract, and so am I,
And here we wander in illusions.
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtezan.

Courtezan.

Well met, well met, master Antipholus.
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now:
Is that the chain, you promis’d me to-day?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Satan, avoid! I charge thee, tempt me not!

Dromio of Syracuse.

Master, is this mistress Satan?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

It is the devil.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Nay, she is worse, she is the devil’s dam; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench:
and thereof comes that the wenchers say, “God damme,” that’s as much as to say, “God make me a light wench.” It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenchers will burn. Come not near her sir.

Courtezan.

Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir.
Will you go with me? we’ll mend our dinner here.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or be-speak a long spoon.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Why, Dromio?

Dromio of Syracuse.

Marry, he must have a long spoon that must cat with the devil.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Avoid them, mend! what tell’st thou me of Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress: [supping]
I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Courtezan.

Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner;
Or for my diamond the chain you promis’d,
And I’ll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Some devils ask but the parings of one’s nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise: an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it.

Courtezan.

I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain.
I hope you do but mean to cheat me so.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Avault, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dromio of Syracuse.

Fly pride, says the peacock: mistress, that you know. [Exeunt Antipholus and Dromio.

Courtezan.

Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad,
Else would he never so demean himself.
A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,
And for the same he promis’d me a chain:
Both one and other he denies me now.
The reason that I gather he is mad,
Besides this present instance of his rage,
Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner [trance.
Of his own doors being shut against his eu-
Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits,
On purpose shut the doors against his way.
My way is now, to his home to his house,
And tell his wife, that, being lunatic,
He rush’d into my house, and took perfume
My ring away. This course I fittest choose,
For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.

SCENE IV. The same.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and a Jailer.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Fear me not, man; I will not break away:
I’ll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money.

To
To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to-day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger:
That I should be attach'd in Ephesus,
I tell you, 'twould sound harshly in her ears.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus with a rope's end.
Here comes my man: I think he brings the money.—
How now, sir? have you that I sent you for?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
But where's the money?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?

Dromio of Ephesus.
I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
To what end did I bid thee tie thee home?

Dromio of Ephesus.
To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am I return'd.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
And to that end, sir, I will welcome you. [Beating him.]

Jailor.
Good sir, be patient.

Dromio of Ephesus.
Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Jailor.
Good now, hold thy tongue.

Dromio of Ephesus.
Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Thou whoreson, senseless villain! I

Dromio of Ephesus.
I would I were senseless, sir; that I might not feel your blows.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dromio of Ephesus.
I am an ass. Indeed: you may prove it by my long ears. I have serv'd him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service, but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am wak'd with it, when I sleep; rais'd with it, when I sit; driven out of doors with it, when I go from home; welcome'd home with it, when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar wont her braw; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Come, go along: my wife is coming yonder.

Enter Adriana, Lucieana, the Courtezan, and a Schoolmaster called Pinch.

Dromio of Ephesus.
Mistress, respece finem, respect your end; or rather the prophecy, like the parrot, "Be ware the rope's end."

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Wilt thou still talk? [Beats him.]

Courtezan.
How say you now? is not your husband mad?

Adriana.
His incivility confirms no less.—
Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer;
Establish him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.

Luciana.
Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!

Courtezan.
Mark, now he tries in his ecstasy!

Pinch.
Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.

Pinch.
I charge thee, Satan, how'st within this man,
To yield possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness his thee straight:
I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Peace, doting wizard, peace! I am not mad.

Adriana.
O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!

Antipholus of Ephesus.
You minion, you, are these your customers?
Did this companion with the saffron face
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house?

Adriana.
O husband, God doth know, you din't at home;
Where 'would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders, and this open shame!

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Din't at home! Thou, villain, what say'st thou?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you shut out.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
And did not she herself revile me there?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Did not her kitchen-maid, taunt, and scorn me?

Dromio of Ephesus.
CerTes, she did; the kitchen-vestal scorn'd you.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dromio of Ephesus.
In verity, you did:—my bones bear witness,
That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adriana.
Is't good to soothe him in these contraries?

Pinch.
It is no shame: the fellow finds his vein,
And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.

Adriana.
Alas, I sent you money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.
ACT IV. Sc. IV.

COMEDY OF ERRORS.

123

Dromio of Ephesus.
Money by me! heart and good-will you might;
But, surely, master, not a rag of money.
Antipholus of Ephesus.
Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?
Adriana.
He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luciana.
And I am witness with her that she did.

Dromio of Ephesus.
God and the rope-maker bear me witness,
That I was sent for nothing but a rope!
Pinch.
Mistress, both man and master is possess'd:
I know it by their pale and deadly looks.
They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to-day,
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?
Adriana.
I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.

Dromio of Ephesus.
And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold;
But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adriana.
Dissembling villain! thou speak'st false in both.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Dissembling harlot! thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned pack
To make a loathsome, abject scorn of me;
But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Enter three or four, and bind Antipholus and Dromio.

Adriana.
O bind him, bind him! let him not come near me.
Pinch.
More company!—the fiend is strong within him.

Luciana.
Ah me! poor man, how pale and wan he looks.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
What, will you murder me? Thou jailor, thou,
I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them
To make a rescue?

Jailor.
Masters, let him go;
He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
Pinch.
Go, bind this man, for he is frantic too.

Adriana.
What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Jailor.
He is my prisoner: if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adriana.
I will discharge thee, ere I go from thee.
Bear me forthwith unto his creditor,
And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay
Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd [lit.
Home to my house. — O, most unhappy day I

Antipholus of Ephesus.
O, most unhappy strumpet!

Dromio of Ephesus.
Master, I am here enter'd in bond for you.

Antipholus of Ephesus.
Out on thee, villain! wherefore dost thou mad me?

Dromio of Ephesus.
Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good
master:

Cry, the devil—

Luciana.
God help, poor souls! how idly do they talk.

Adriana.
Go bear him hence. — Sister, go you with me.—
[Exeunt Pinch and assistants with Antipholus and Dromio.

Say now, whose suit is he arrest'd at?

Jailor.
One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know him?

Adriana.
I know the man. What is the sum he owes?

Jailor.
Two hundred ducats.

Adriana.
Say, how grows it due?

Jailor.
Due for a chain your husband had of him.

Adriana.
He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.

Courtezan.
When as your husband, all in rage, to-day
Came to my house, and took away my ring,
(The ring I saw upon his finger now)
Straight after did I meet him with a chain.

Adriana.
It may be so, but I did never see it.—
Come, jailor, bring me where the goldsmith is:
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, with his rapier drawn, and Dromio of Syracuse.

Luciana.
God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.

Adriana.
And come with naked swords. Let's call more
To have them bound again. [help,

Jailor.
Away! they'll kill us.
[Exeunt Adriana, Luciana, and Jailor.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
I see, these witches are afraid of swords.

Dromio of Syracuse.
She, that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff from thence:
I long, that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dromio of Syracuse.
Faith, stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm; you saw they speak us fair, give us gold. Methinks they are such a gentle nation, that but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
I will not stay to-night for all the town;
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.
[Exeunt.

ACT
ACT V.

SCENE I. The same. Before an Abbey.

Enter Merchant and Angelo.

Merchant. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you; but, I protest, he had the chain of me. Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.

How is the man esteem'd here in the city?

Of very reverend reputation, sir, of credit infinite, highly belov'd, second to none that lives here in the city: His word might bear my wealth at any time.

Speak softly: yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse.

'Tis so; and that soft chain about his neck, which he foreswore most monstrously to have. Good sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him.—Signior Antipholus, I wonder much this trouble; that you would put me to this shame, and and not without some scandal to yourself. With circumstance and oaths so to deny this chain, which now you wear so openly: Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment, you have done wrong to this my honest friend; who, but for staying upon our conversation, had holsted sail, and put to sea to-day. This chain, you had of me: can you deny it?

I think, I had? I never did deny it.

Yes, that you did, sir; and foreswear it too.

Antipholus of Syracuse. Who heard me to deny it; or foreswear it?

Merchant. These ears of mine, thou knowest, did hear thee.

Thee on thee, wretch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st. To walk where any honest men resort.

Antipholus of Syracuse. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus. I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.

I dare, and do deny thee for a villain.

[They draw.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, and others.

Adriana. Hold! hurt him not, for God's sake! he is mad.

Some get within him; take his sword away.

Bloud Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dromio of Syracuse. Run, master, run; for God's sake take a house.

This is some priory:—in, or we are spoil'd.

[Exeunt Antipholus and Dromio to the Abbey.

Enter the Lady Abbess

Abbess. Be quiet, people; wherfore throng you thereby?

To fetch my poor distracted husband hence. Let us come in, that we may bind him fast, and bear him home for his recovery.

I knew, he was not in his perfect wits.

I am sorry now, that I did draw on him.

How long hath this possession held the man?

This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad; and much different from the man he was; but, till this afternoon, his passion ne'er brake into extremity of rage.

Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck of sea? Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye stray'd his affection in unlawful love? A sin prevailing much in youthful men, who give their eyes the liberty of gazing. Which of these sorrows is he subject to?

To none of these, except it be the last: namely, some love, that drew him oft from home.

You should for that have reprehended him.

Why, so I did.

Abbess. Ay, but not rough enough.

Adriana. As roughly, as most honestly would let me.

Abbess. Haply, in private.

Adriana. And in assemblies, too.

Ay, but not enough.

Adriana. It was the copy of our conference. In bed, he slept not for my urging it; at board, he fed not for my urging it; alone, it was the subject of my theme; in company, I often glanced it: still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abbess. And thereof came it that the man was mad: the venom clamours of a jealous woman poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth. It seems, his sleep were hinder'd by thy railing, and thereof comes it, that his head is light. Thou say'st, his meat was sauc'd with thy unquiet meals make ill digestions; [Braidings: thereof the raging fire of fever bred: and what's a fever but a fit of madness? Thou say'st, his sports were hinder'd by thy brauins:

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue, but moody and dull melancholy, Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair, and at her heels a huge infectious troop: Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life? In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest To be disturb'd, would mad or man beast. The consequence is, then, thy jealous fits Have scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.

She never reprehended him but mildly. When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly:—why bear you these rebukes, and answer not? Adriana.

COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Adriana.
She did betray me to my own reproof.—
Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.
(Exit Duke attended, with the Headsman and other Officers.

Abbess.

Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.

Adriana.

Neither: he took this place for sanctuary, And it shall privilege him from your hands, Till I have brought him to his wits again, Or lose my labour in essaying it.

Adriana.

I will attend my husband, be his nurse, Die his sickness; for it is my office, And will have no attorney but myself, And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abbess.

Be patient; for I will not let him stir, Till I have us'd the approved means I have, With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers, To make of him a formal man again. It is a branch and parcel of mine oath, A charitable duty of my order; Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

Adriana.

I will not hence, and leave my husband here; And ill it doth besemi your holiness To separate the husband and the wife.

Abbess.

Be quiet, and depart: thou shalt not have him. [Exit Adriana.

Luciana.

Complain unto the duke of this indignity.

Adriana.

Come, go: I will fall prostrate at his feet, And never rise, until my tears and prayers Have won his grace to come in person hither, And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

Merchant.

By this, I think, the dial points at five: Anon, I'm sure, the duke himself in person Comes this way to the melancholy vale, The place of death and sordid execution, Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Angelo.

Upon what cause?

Merchant.

To see a reverend Syracusan merchant, Who put unluckily into this bay Against the laws and statutes of this town, Beheaded publicly for his offence.

Angelo.

See, where they come: we will behold his death.

Luciana.

Kneel to the duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter Duke attended, with the Headsman and other Officers.

Duke.

Yet once again proclaim it publicly, If any friend will pay the sum for him, He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adriana.

Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess! Duke.

She is a virtuous and a reverend lady: It cannot be, that she hath done thee wrong.

Adriana.

May it please your grace, Antipholus, my hus- Whom I made lord of me, and all I had, (band, At your important letters, this ill day A most outrageous fit of madness took him, That desperately he hurried through the street, (With him his hondman, all as mad as he) Doing displeasure to the citizens By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, any thing his rage did like. Once did I get him bound, and sent him home, Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went, That here and there his fury had committed. Anon, I wot not by what strong escape, He broke from those that had the guard of him, And with his mad attendant and himself, Each one with irreful passion, with drawn swords, Met us again, and, madly bent on us, Chas'd us away; till, raising of more aid, We came again to bind them. Then they fled Into this abbey, whither we pursued them; And here the abbess shuts the gates on us, And will not suffer us to fetch him out, Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence. Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy com- mand, [help. Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for Duke.

Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars, And 1 to thee engag'd a prince's word, When thou didst make him master of thy bed, To do him all the grace and good I could.— Go, some of you, knock at the abbey gate, And bid the lady abbess come to me. I will determine this, before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Servant.

O mistress, mistress! shift and save yourself. My master and his man are both broke loose. Beaten the maids a-row, and bound the doctor, Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of And ever as it blazed they threw on him [fire Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair. My master preaches patience to him, and the while His man with scissors nicks him like a fool; And, sure, unless you send some present help, Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adriana.

Peace, fool! thy master and his man are here: And that is false, thou dost report to us.

Servant.

Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true; I have not breath'd, almost, since I did see it. He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you, To scorch your face, and to disfigure you. [Exit.

Hark, hark, I hear him, mistress: fly, be gone. Duke.

Come, stand by me; fear nothing. Guard with halberds!

Adriana.

Ah me, it is my husband! Witness you, That he is borne about invisible: Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here, And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Ephesus.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Justice, most gracious duke! O! grant me justice, Even for the service that long since I did thee, When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice. [Exit.
COMEDY OF ERRORS.
ACT V. SC. I.

Duke.

But had he such a chain of thee, or no?

Angelo.

He had, my lord; and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.

Merchant.

Besides, I will be sworn, these ears of mine
Heard you confess you had the chain of him,
After you first forswore it on the mart.

And, thereupon, I drew my sword on you;
And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I never came within these abbey walls,
Nor ever did'st thou draw thy sword on me.
I never saw the chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false you burden me withal.

Duke.

Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
I think, you all have drunk of Circe’s cup.
If here you have’t him, here he would have been;
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:—
You say, he dined at home; the goldsmith here
Denies that saying.—Sirrah, what say you?

Dromio of Ephesus.

Sir, he dined with her, there, at the Porcupine.

Courtezan.

He did, and from my finger snatch’d that ring.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

’Tis true, my liege; this ring I had of her.

Duke.

Saw’st thou him enter at the abbey here?

Courtezan.

As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace.

Duke.

Why, this is strange.—Go call the abbess hither.
I think you are all mated, or stark mad.

[Exit an Attendant.

Ægeon.

Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a
Haply, I see a friend will save my life, [word.
And pay the sum this messenger deliver me.

Duke.

Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou wilt.

Ægeon.

Is not your name, sir, call’d Antipholus,
And is not that your bondman Dromio?

Dromio of Ephesus.

Within this hour I was his bondman, sir;
But he, I thank him, gaz’d in two my cords:
Now am I Dromio, and his man, unbound.

Ægeon.

I am sure you both of you remember me.

Dromio of Ephesus.

Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;
For lately we were bound, as you are now.
You are not Pinch’s patient, are you, sir?

Ægeon.

Why look you strange on me? you know me
well.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I never saw you in my life, till now.

Ægeon.

O! grief hath chang’d me, since you saw me last;
And careful hours, with time’s deformed hand,
Have written strange defacements in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ægeon.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Neither.

Ægecon.

Dromio, nor thou?
Dromio of Ephesus.

No, trust me, sir, nor I.
Ægecon.

I am sure thou dost.
Dromio of Ephesus.

Ay, sir; but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.
Ægecon.

Not know my voice? O, time's extremity! I hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue in seven short years, that here my only son knows not my feeble key of untim'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,
My dull, deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses (I cannot err)
Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I never saw my father in my life.
Ægecon.

But seven years since, in Syracusa, boy,
Thou know'st we parted. But, perhaps, my son,
Thou shamt'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

The duke, and all that know me in the city,
Can witness with me that it is not so.
I ne'er saw Syracusa in my life.
Duke.

I tell thee, Syracusan, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracusa.
I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter Abbess, with Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse.

Abbess.

Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd.
[All gather to see them.
Adriana.

I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me!
Duke.

One of these men is Genius to the other
And so of these: which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who decipher them?
Dromio of Syracuse,
I, sir, am Dromio; command him away.
Dromio of Ephesus.

I, sir, am Dromio; pray let me stay.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ægecon, art thou not? or else his ghost?
Dromio of Syracuse.

O, my old master! who hath bound him here?

Abbess.

Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty.—
Speak, old Ægecon, if thou be'st the man
That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burden two fair sons.
O! if thou be'st the same Ægecon, speak,
And speak unto the same Æmilia!
Ægecon.

If I dream not, thou art Æmilia.
If thou art she, tell me, where is that son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abbess.

By men of Epidamnum, he, and I,

And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But, by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio, and my son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.
What then became of them, I cannot tell;
I, to this fortune that you see me in.

Duke.

Why, here begins his morning story right.
These two Antipholus', these two so like,
And these two Dromio's, one in semblance.—
Besides her urging of her wreck at sea:
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.

Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

No, sir, not I: I came from Syracuse.

Duke.

Stay, stand apart: I know not which is which.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord.
Dromio of Ephesus.

And I with him.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

Brought to this town by that most famous warrior.
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.

Adriana.

Which of you two did dine with me to-day?

Antipholus of Syracuse.

I, gentle mistress.

Adriana.

And are not you my husband?

Antipholus of Ephesus.

No; I say nay to that.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

And so do I, yet did she call me so;
And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
Did call me brother.—What I told you then,
I hope, I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see, and bear.

Angelo.

That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.
Antipholus of Syracuse.

I think it be, sir: I deny it not.
Antipholus of Ephesus.

And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.

Angelo.

I think I did, sir: I deny it not.

Adriana.

I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,
By Dromio; but I think, he brought it not.

Dromio of Ephesus.

No, none by me.

Antipholus of Syracuse.

This purse of ducats I received from you,
And Dromio, my man, did bring them me.
I see, we still did meet each other's man,
And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors all arose.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

These ducats pawn I for my father here.

Duke.

It shall not need: thy father hath his life.

Courtezan.

Sir, I must have that diamond from you.

Antipholus of Ephesus.

There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.

Abbess.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

ACT I.

Enter Leonato, Hero, Beatrice, and others, with a Messenger.

Leonato. I LEARN in this letter, that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Antipholus of Syracuse.
He speaks to me,—I am your master, Dromio;
Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon.
Embrace thy brother there; rejoice with him.
[Exeunt Antipholus of Syracuse and Ephesus, Adriana, and Luciana.
Dromio of Syracuse.
There is a fat friend at your master's house,
That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner;
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
Dromio of Ephesus.
Methinks, you are my glass, and not my brother:
I see by you I am a sweet-faced youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?
Dromio of Syracuse.
Not I, sir; you are my elder.
Dromio of Ephesus.
That's a question: how shall we try it?
Dromio of Syracuse.
We'll draw cuts for the senior: till then, lead thou first.
Dromio of Ephesus.
Nay, then thus:
We came into the world, like brother and brother;
And now, let's go hand in hand, not one before another.
[Exeunt.]

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.
Leonato.

A victory is twice itself, when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here, that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Messenger.

Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro: he hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leonato.

He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Messenger.

I have already deliver'd him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

Leonato.

Did he break out into tears?

Messenger.

In great measure.

Leonato.

A kind overflow of kindness. There are no faces truer than those that are so wash'd: how much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping?

Beatrice.

I pray you, is signior Montanto returned from the wars, or no?

Messner.

I know none of that name, lady: there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leonato.

What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero.

My cousin means signior Benedick of Padua.

Messenger.

O! he is returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beatrice.

He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt. — I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leonato.

Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Messenger.

He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beatrice.

You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencher-man; he hath an excellent stomach.

Messenger.

And a good soldier too, lady.

Beatrice.

And a good soldier to a lady; but what is he to a lord?

Messenger.

A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beatrice.

It is so, indeed: he is no less than a stuffed man; but for the stuffing,—Well, we are all mortal.

Leonato.

You must not, sir, mistake my niece. There is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there's a skirmish of wit between them every day.

Beatrice.

Alas! he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one; so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left to be known a reasonable creature. — Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Messenger.

Is't possible?

Beatrice.

Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

Messenger.

I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beatrice.

No; an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Messenger.

He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beatrice.

O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pounds ere he be cured.

Messenger.

I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beatrice.

Do, good friend.

Leonato.

You will never run mad, niece.

Beatrice.

No, not till a hot January.

Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, John, Claudio, Benedick, Bal- thatar, and others.

Don Pedro.

Good signior Leonato, are you come to meet your trouble? the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leonato.

Never came trouble to my house in the like-ness of your grace; for trouble being gone, comfort should remain, but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

Don Pedro.

You embrace your charge too willingly. I think, this is your daughter.

Leonato.

Her mother hath many times told me so.

Benedick.

Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

Leonato.

Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

Don Pedro.

You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by x this this what you are, being a man. — Truly, the lady fathers herself. — Be happy, lady, for you are like an honourable father.

Benedick.

If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beatrice.

I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedick: no body marks you.

Benedick.

What, my dear lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beatrice.

Is it possible disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Benedick.

Then is courtesy a turn-coat. But it is certain, I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for, truly, I love none.

Beatrice.

A dear happiness to women: they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God, and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that: I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Benedick.

God keep your ladyship still in that mind: so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beatrice.

Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

Benedick.

Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beatrice.

A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Benedick.

I would, my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way o' God's name; I have done.

Beatrice.

You always end with a jade's trick: I know you of old.

Don Pedro.

This is the sum of all. — Leonato, — signior Claudio, and signior Benedick. — my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a month, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leonato.

If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn. — Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

John.

I thank you: I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leonato.

Please it your grace lead on?

Don Pedro.

Your hand, Leonato: we will go together.

[Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.

Claudio.

Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?
ACT I. SC. I.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Claudio.

If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Don Pedro.

Amen, if you love her; for the lady is very well worthy.

Claudio.

You speak this, to fetch me in, my lord.

Don Pedro.

By my troth, I speak my thought.

Claudio.

And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Benedick.

And by my two faiths, and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claudio.

That I love her, I feel.

Don Pedro.

That she is worthy, I know.

Benedick.

That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I will die in it at the stake.

Don Pedro.

Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claudio.

And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Benedick.

That a woman conceived me, I thank her:

That she brought me up, I likewise give her my humble thanks:

But that I will have a recollection wined in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldric, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is, (for the which I may go the finer,) I will live a bachelor.

Don Pedro.

I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Benedick.

With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord; not with love: prove, that ever I lose more blood than that, that I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker’s pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

Don Pedro.

Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Benedick.

If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

Don Pedro.

Well, as time shall try:

“in time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.”

Benedick.

The savage bull may, but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull’s horns, and set them in my forehead; and let me be vilely painted, and in such great letters as they write, “Here is good horse to hire,” let them signify under my sign, “Here you may see Benedick the married man.”

Claudio.

If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

Don Pedro.

Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Benedick.

I look for an earthquake too, then.

Don Pedro.

Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the mean time, good signior Benedick, repair to Leonato’s: commend me to him, and tell him, I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he hath made great preparation.

Benedick.

I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

Claudio.

To the tuition of God: from my house, if I had it.—

Don Pedro.

The sixth of July: your loving friend, Benedick.

Benedick.

Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly based on neither; ere you flout old ends any farther, examine your conscience, and so I leave you.

[Exit Benedick.

Claudio.

My liege, your highness now may do me good.

Don Pedro.

My love is thine to teach: teach it but how, And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claudio.

Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

Don Pedro.

No child but Hero, she’s his only heir. Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claudio.

O! my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action, I look’d upon her with a soldier’s eye, That lik’d, but had a rougher task in hand, Than to drive likings to the name of love; But now I am return’d, and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant, in their rooms Come thronging soft and delicate desires, All prompting me how fair young Hero is, Speaking, I lik’d her ere I went to wars—

Don Pedro.

Thou wilt be like a lover presently, And tire the hearer with a book of words. If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it, And I will break with her, and with her father, And thou shalt have her. Was’t not to this end, That thou began’st to twist so fine a story?

Claudio.

How sweetly do you minister to love, That know love’s grief by his complexion! But lest my liking might too sudden seem, I would have sav’d it with a longer treatise.

Don Pedro.

What need the bridge much broader than the The fairest grant is the necessity. [food?]

Look, what will serve is: ‘tis once, thou, And I will fit thee with the remedy. [lovest, I know we shall have revelling to-night: I will assume thy part in some disguise, And tell fair Hero I am Claudio. And in her bosom I’ll unclasp my heart, And take her hearing prisoner with the force, And strong encounter of my amorous tale: Then, after, to her father will I break:
And, the conclusion is, she shall be thing. In practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Leonato.

How now, brother? Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Antonio.

He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamt not of.

Leonato.

Are they good?

Antonio.

As the event stamps them; but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leonato.

Hath the fellow any wit, that told you this?

Antonio.

A good sharp fellow: I will send for him, and question him yourself.

Leonato.

No, no: we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself; but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do.—O, I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill.—Good cousin, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter John and Conrade.

Conrade.

What the good year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

John.

There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Conrade.

You should hear reason.

John.

And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it?

Conrade.

If not a present remedy, at least a patient sufferance.

John.

I wonder, that thou being (as thou say'st thou art) born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Conrade.

Yea; but you must not make the full show of this, till you may do it without controlment.

You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root, but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

John.

I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all, than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering house man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle, and enfranchised with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Conrade.

Can you make no use of your discontent?

John.

I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here? What news, Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Borachio.

I came yonder from a great supper: the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

John.

Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he, for a fool, that betroseth himself to unquietness?

Borachio.

Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

John.

Who? the most exquisite Claudio?

Borachio.

Even he.

John.

A proper squire! And who, and who? which way looks he?

Borachio.

Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

John.

A very forward March-chick! How came you to this?

Borachio.

Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty-room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference: I whipt me behind the arras, and there heard it agreed upon, that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her, give her to count Claudio.

John.

Come, come; let us thither: this may prove food to my displeasure. That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me?

Conrade.

To the death, my lord.

John.

Let us to the great supper: their cheer is the greater, that I am subdued. 'Would the cook were of my mind!—Shall we go prove what's to be done?

Borachio.

We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.}
ACT II.

SCENE I. A Hall in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Hero, Beatrice, and others.

Leonato.

Was not count John here at supper?

I saw him not.

Beatrice.

How tarry that gentleman looks: I never can see him, but I am heart-burned an hour after.

Hero.

He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beatrice.

He were an excellent man, that were made just in the maid's way. But been him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing: and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leonato.

Then, half signor Benedick's tongue in count John's mouth, and half count John's melancholy in signor Benedick's face, —

Beatrice.

With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world,—if a' could get her good will.

Leonato.

By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Antonio.

In faith, she's too curt.

Beatrice.

Too curt is more than curt: I shall lessen God's sending that way, for it is said, "God sends a curst cow short horns;" but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leonato.

So, by being too curt, God will send you no horns?

Beatrice.

Just, if he send me no husband: for the which blessing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leonato.

You may light on a husband that hath no beard.

Beatrice.

What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is less than a man; and he that is more than a youth is not for me; and he that is less than a man I am not for him: therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bearward, and lead his apes into hell.

Leonato.

Well then, go you into hell?

Beatrice.

No: but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, "Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maid: so, deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter for the heavens: he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Antonio.

Well, niece, [to Hero.] I trust, you will be ruled by your father.

Beatrice.

Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make courtesy, and say, "Father, as it please you:" but yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say, "Father, as it please me.

Leonato.

Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beatrice.

Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be overmastered with a piece of vain dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leonato.

Daughter, remember, what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beatrice.

The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not woor'd in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him, there is measure in everything, and so dance out the answer: for, hear me, Hero; wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinquepace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical: the wedding, mannerly, modest, as a measure, full of state and anciently; and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leonato.

Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beatrice.

I have a good eye, uncle: I can see a church by day-light.

Leonato.

The revellers are entering, brother. Make good room!

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Batthyany, John, Borachio, Margaret, Ursula, and maskers.

Don Pedro.

Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero.

So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and, especially, when I walk away.

Don Pedro.

With me in your company?

Hero.

I may say so, when I please.

Don Pedro.

And when please you to say so?

Hero.

When I like your favour; for God defend, the lute should be like the case!

Don Pedro.

My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

ACT II. SC. I.

Hero.

Why, then your visor should be thatch'd.

Don Pedro.

Speak low, if you speak love.

Balthazar.

Well, I would you did like me.

Margaret.

So would not I, for your own sake; for I have many ill qualities.

Which is one?

Balthazar.

I say my prayers aloud.

Balthazar.

I love you the better; the hearers may cry Amen.

Margaret.

God match me with a good dancer!

Balthazar.

And God keep him out of my sight, when the dance is done!—Answer, clerk.

Balthazar.

No more words: the clerk is answered.

Ursula.

I know you well enough: you are signior Antonio.

Antonio.

At a word, I am not.

Ursula.

I know you by the waggling of your head.

Antonio.

To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Ursula.

You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man. Here's his dry hand up and down; you are he, you are he.

Antonio.

At a word, I am not.

Ursula.

Come, come: do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beatrice.

Will you not tell me who told you so?

Benedick.

No, you shall pardon me.

Beatrice.

Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Benedick.

Not now.

Beatrice.

That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the "Hundred merry Tales,"—Well, this was signior Benedick that said so.

What's he?

Benedick.

I am sure, you know him well enough.

Benedick.

Not I, believe me.

Beatrice.

Did he never make you laugh?

Benedick.

I pray, what is he?

Beatrice.

Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool, only his gift is in devising impossible slanders: none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy, for he both pleases men, and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him. I am sure, he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me!

Benedick.

When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beatrice.

Do, do; he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peregrination, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy: and then there's a partridge' wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Music within.] We must follow the leaders.

Benedick.

In every good thing.

Beatrice.

Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

[Music. Then, exequit all but John, Borachio, and Claudio.

John.

Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Borachio.

And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

John.

Are not you signior Benedick?

Claudio.

You know me well: I am he.

John.

Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero. I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is no equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

How know you he loves her?

Claudio.

I heard him swear his affection.

Borachio.

So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

John.

Come, let us to the banquet.

[B Exeunt John and Borachio.}

Claudio.

Thus answer I in name of Benedick, But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio. 'Tis certain so:—the prince woes for himself. Friendship is constant in all other things, Save in the office and affairs of love: Therefore, all hearts in love use their own Let every eye negotiate for itself, tongues; And trust no agent, for beauty is a witch, and Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. This is an accident of hourly proof. [Hero! Which I mistrusted not. Farewell, therefore,

Re-enter Benedick.

Benedick.

Count Claudio?

Claudio.

Yea, the same.

Benedick.

Come, will you go with me?

Claudio.

Whither?

Benedick.
Even to the next caller, about your own business, county. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer's chain, or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your hero:

Claudio.

I wish him joy of her.

Benedick.

Why, that's spoken like an honest drover: so they sell bullocks. But did you think, the prince would have served you thus?

Claudio.

I pray you, leave me.

Benedick.

He now you strike like the blind man: 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Claudio.

If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exit.

Benedick.

Alas, poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep into sedges. — But, that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool! — Ha! it may be, I go under that title, because I am merry. — Yea: but so I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed: it is the base, though bitter disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

Don Pedro.

Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

Benedick.

Troth, my lord, I have played the part of lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lode in a warren: I told him, and, I think, I told him true, that your grace had got the good will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

Don Pedro.

To be whipped! What's his fault?

Benedick.

The flat transgression of a school-boy; who, being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

Don Pedro.

Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

Benedick.

Yet it had not been amiss, the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's nest.

Don Pedro.

I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Benedick.

If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

Don Pedro.

The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you: the gentleman, that danced with her, told her she is much wronged by you.

Benedick.

O! she misused me past the endurance of a block: an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her: my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester; that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance, upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks polngards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you shall find her the infernal Mè in good apparel. I would to God, some scholar would conjure her; for, certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither, so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

Enter Claudio, Beatrice, Hero, and Leonato.

Don Pedro.

Look, here she comes.

Benedick.

Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes, that you can devise to send me on: I will fetch you a toothpickler now from the farthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Presiter John's foot; fetch you a hair of the great Cham's beard; do you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me?

Don Pedro.

None, but to desire your good company.

Benedick.

O God, sir, here's a dish I love not: I cannot endure my lady Tongue. [Exit.

Don Pedro.

Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of signior Benedick.

Beatrice.

Indeed, my lord, he lent it me a while; and I gave him use for it, a double heart for his single one: marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

Don Pedro.

You have put him down, lady; you have put him down.

Beatrice.

So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

Don Pedro.

Why, how now, count? wherefore are you sad?

Claudio.

Not sad, my lord.

Don Pedro.

How then? Sick?

Claudio.

Neithor, my lord.

Beatrice.

The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil, count, civil as an orange,
Much Ado About Nothing

Act II, Scene 1

Don Pedro.

I'faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have woo'd in thy name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, and, his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leonato.

Count, take of me thy daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beatrice.

Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much.—Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Beatrice.

Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let him not speak neither.

Don Pedro.

In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Beatrice.

Yea, my lord: I thank it, poor fool. It keeps on the windy side of care.—My cousin tells him in his ear, that he is in her heart.

Claudio.

And so she doth, cousin.

Good lord! for alliance thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burned: I may sit in a corner, and cry, heigh ho! for a husband.

Don Pedro.

Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beatrice.

I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Don Pedro.

Will you have me, lady?

Beatrice.

No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days: your grace is too costly to wear every day.—But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

Don Pedro.

Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beatrice.

No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.—Cousins, God give you joy!

Leonato.

Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beatrice.

I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's pardon.

Don Pedro.

By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leonato.

There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then, for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

Don Pedro.

She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leonato.

She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leonato.

O lord! my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

Don Pedro.

County Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claudio.

To-morrow, my lord. Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.

Leonato.

Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief, too, to have all things answer my mind.

Don Pedro.

Come, you speak the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules' labours, which is, to bring signior Benedick and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leonato.

My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio.

And I, my lord.

Don Pedro.

And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero.

I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

Don Pedro.

And Benedick is not the unlovefullest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him: he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his churlish stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer: his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. [Exeunt.]

Scene II. Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter John and Borachio.

John.

It is so; the count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Borachio.

Yea, my lord; but I can cross it.

John.

Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinal to me: I am sick in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?
ACT II. Sc. III.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Borachio.
Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

John.
Show me briefly how.

Borachio.
I think, I told your lordship a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

John.
I remember.

Borachio.
I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

John.
What life is in that to be the death of this marriage?

Borachio.
The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother: spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do you mightily hold up) to a contamined stale, such a one as Hero.

John.
What proof shall I make of that?

Borachio.
Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato. Look you for any other issue?

John.
Only to despise them I will endeavour any thing.

Borachio.
Go then; find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio, alone; tell them, that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, (as in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid) that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances, which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window, hear me call Margaret Hero; hear Margaret term me Borachio; and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding: for in the mean time I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be call'd assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

John.
Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Borachio.
Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

John.
I will presently go learn their day of marriage. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Leonato's Garden.

Enter Benedick.

Benedick.

Boy.

Enter a Boy.

Signior.

Benedick.
In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy.
I am here already, sir.

Benedick.
I know that; [Exit Boy.] but I would have thee hence, and here again. I do much wonder, that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love: and such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afoot to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man, and a soldier; and now is he turn'd orthographer: his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn, but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well; another virtuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheape her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. [Withdraws.

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio.

Don Pedro.
Come, shall we hear this music?

Claudio.
Yea, my good lord. How still the evening is, As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!

Don Pedro.
See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Claudio.
O, very well, my lord: the music ended, We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny-worth.

Enter Balthazar, with music.

Don Pedro.
Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balthazar.
O! good my lord, tis not so bad a voice To slander music any more than once.

Don Pedro.
It is the witness still of excellency, To put a strange face on his own perfection.— I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balthazar.
Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: Since many a wooer doth commence his suit To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos, Yet will he swear, he loves.

Don Pedro.
Nay, pray thee, come: Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Balthazar.
Balthazar.
Note this before my notes;
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Don Pedro.
Why these are very crotchets that he speaks;
Note notes, forsooth, and nothing!
[Music.]

Benedick.
[Aside.]
Now, divine air! now is his soul ravish'd!—
Is it not strange that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?—Well, a horn for my money when all's done.

The Song.
Balthazar.
Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea, and one on shore;
To one thing constant never.
Then sigh not so,
But let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into, Hey nonny, nonny.
Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of dumps so dull and heavy;
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy.
Then sigh not so, &c.

Don Pedro.
By my troth, a good song.

And an ill singer, my lord.

Don Pedro.
Ha? no, no; faith, thou singest well enough for a shift.

Benedick.
[Aside.]
An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hang'd him; and, I pray God, his bad voice bode no mischance! I had as liief he had heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

Don Pedro.
Yea, marry; dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, give us some excellent music, for tomorrow night we would have it at the lady
Hero's chamber window.

Balthazar.
The best I can, my lord.

Don Pedro.
Do so: farewell.
[Exeunt Balthazar and musicians.]
Come hither, Leonato: what was it you told me of to-day? that your niece
Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Claudio.
[Aside to Pedro.]
O, ay:—stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits.
[Aloud.] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leonato.
No, nor I neither; but most wonderful, that she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Benedick.
[Aside.]
Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leonato.
By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that she loves him with an ennraged affection: it is past the infinite of thought.

Don Pedro.
May be, she doth but counterfeit.

Claudio.
"Faith, like enough."

Leonato.
O God! counterfeit! There was never counterfeited passion come so near the life of passion, as she discovers it.

Don Pedro.
Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claudio.
[Aside.]
Bait the hook well: this fish will bite.

Leonato.
What effects, my lord? She will sit you,— you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claudio.
She did, indeed.

Don Pedro.
How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leonato.
I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Benedick.
[Aside.]
I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence.

Claudio.
[Aside.]
He hath ta'en the infection: hold it up.

Don Pedro.
Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leonato.
No, and swears she never will: that's her torrent.

Claudio.
"Tis true, indeed. So your daughter says:
"Shall I," says she, "that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?"

Leonato.
This says she, now, when she is beginning to write to him; for she'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper.—My daughter tells us all.

Claudio.
Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leonato.
O!—when she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet?

That.

Leonato.
O! she tore the letter into a thousand half-pence; ralled at herself, that she should be so immolate to write to one that she knew would flout her:—"I measure him," says she, "by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he write to me; yea, though I love him, I should."

Claudio.
Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;—"O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!"

Leonato.
She doth indeed: my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my my daughter is sometimes afeard she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

It were good, that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claudio.

To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

Don Pedro.

An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady, and out of all suspicion she is virtuous.

Claudio.

And she is exceeding wise.

Don Pedro.

In every thing, but in loving Benedick.

Leonato.

O, my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

Don Pedro.

I would, she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daff'd all other respects, and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what a' will say.

Leonato.

Were it good, think you?

Claudio.

Hero thinks surely, she will die; for she says, she will die if he love her not, and she will die ere she make her love known, and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will hate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

Don Pedro.

She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Claudio.

He is a very proper man.

Don Pedro.

He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Claudio.

Before God, and in my mind, very wise.

Don Pedro.

He doth, indeed, show some sparks that are like wit.

Leonato.

And I take him to be valiant.

Don Pedro.

As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leonato.

If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace: if he breaks the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

Don Pedro.

And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claudio.

Never tell him, my lord: let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leonato.

Nay, that's impossible; she may wear her heart out first.

Don Pedro.

Well, we will hear farther of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leonato.

My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Claudio. [Aside.

If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

Don Pedro. [Aside.

Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewomen carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter: that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato.

Benedick. [Advancing from the Arbour.

This can be no trick: the conference was sadly borne.—They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady: it seems, her affections have their full bent. Love me I why, it must be requisite. I hear how I am censured: they say, I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her: they say, too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection.—I did never think to marry. —I must not seem proud. —Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say, the lady is fair: 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and virtuous: 'tis so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me; by my troth, it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage; but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No; the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married—Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beatrice.

Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Benedick.

Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beatrice.

I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me: if it had been painful, I would not have come.

Benedick.

You take pleasure, then, in the message?

Beatrice.

Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal.—You have no stomach, signior: fare you well. [Exit.

Benedick.

Ha! "Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner"— there's a double meaning in that. "I took no more pains for those thanks, than you took pains to thank me"—that's as much as to say, any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks.—If I do not take pity of her, I am
I am a villain: If I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Leonato's Garden.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero.

GOOD Margaret, run thee to the parlour; There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her: say, that thou overheard'st us; And bid her steal into the pleased bower, Where honey-suckle, ripen'd by the sun, Forbid the sun to enter; like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it.—There will she hide her, To listen our propose. This is thy office; Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Margaret.

I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.

Hero.

Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick: When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit. My talk to thee must be, how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by ear'say. Now begin;

Enter Beatrice, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Ursula.

The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice; who even now Is couched in the woodbine coverture. Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero.

Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.— No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful; I know, her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

Ursula.

But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero.

So says the prince, and my new-trothed lord.

Ursula.

And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?

Hero.

They did intreat me to acquaint her of it; But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affliction, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Ursula.

Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed, As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero.

O God of love! I know, he doth deserve As much as may be yielded to a man; But nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice: D dusted and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on; and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak. She cannot love, Nor take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endear'd.

Ursula.

Sure, I think so: And therefore, certainly, it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero.

Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man, How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd, But she would spell him backward: if fair-faced, She'd swear the gentleman should be her sister: If black, why, nature, drawing of an antick, Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed: If low, an agate very vile cut; If speaking, why, a vase blown, with all winds: If silent, why, a block moved with none. So turns she every man the wrong side out, And never gives to truth and virtue That which simperess and merit purchaseth.

Ursula.

Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero.

No: not to be so odd, and from all fashions As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable. But who dare tell her so? If I should speak, She would mock me into air: O! she would laugh me Out of myself, press me to death with wit. Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire, Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly: It were a better death than die with mocks, Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Ursula.

Yet tell her of it: hear what she will say.

Hero.

No; rather I will go to Benedick, And counsel him to fight against his passion: And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders To stamn my cousin with. One doth not know, How much an ill word may empolson liking.

Ursula.

O I do not do your cousin such a wrong. She cannot be so much without true judgment, (Having so swift and excellent a wit, As she is priz'd to have) as to refuse So rare a gentleman as signior Benedick.

Hero.

He is the only man of Italy, Always excepted my dear Claudio.

Ursula.

I pray you, be not angry with me, madam, Speaking my fancy: signior Benedick, For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour, Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero.

Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

Ursula.

His excellency did earn it ere he had it.— When are you married, madam?

Hero.

Why, every day;—to-morrow. Come, go in: I'll show thee some attires, and have thy counsel, Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Ursula.
Scene II. A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

Don Pedro.
I do but stay till your marriage be consummated, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claudio.
I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

Don Pedro.
Nay; that would be as great a sol's in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat, and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth: he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.

Benedick.
Gallants, I am not as I have been. Leonato.
So say I: methinks, you are sadder.

Claudio.
I hope, he be in love.

Don Pedro.
Hang him, truant! there's no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touch'd with love. If he be sad, he wants money.

Benedick.
I have the tooth-ache.

Don Pedro.
Draw it.

Benedick.
Hang it!

Claudio.
You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

Don Pedro.
What! sigh for the tooth-ache?

Leonato.
Where is but a humour, or a worm?

Benedick.
Well, every one can master a grief, but he that has it.

Claudio.
Yet say I, he is in love.

Don Pedro.
There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as to be a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman tomorrow, or in the shape of two countries at once; as a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doubt. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claudio.
If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: a' brushes his hat o' mornings; what should that bode?

Don Pedro.
Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Claudio.
No, but the barber's man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leonato.
Indeed, he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

Don Pedro.
Nay, a' rubs himself with civit: can you smell him out by that?

Claudio.
That's as much as to say the sweet youth's in love.

Don Pedro.
The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claudio.
And when was he wont to wash his face?

Don Pedro.
Yea, or to paint himself? for the which, I hear what they say of him.

Claudio.
Nay, but his jesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string, and now governed by stops.

Don Pedro.
Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him. Conclude, conclude, he is in love.

Claudio.
Nay, but I know who loves him.

Don Pedro.
That would I know too: I warrant, one that knows him not.

Claudio.
Yes, and his ill conditions; and in despite of all dies for him.

Don Pedro.
Shall she be buried with her face upwards?

Benedick.
Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache.—Old signior, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

[Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.

Don Pedro.
For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Claudio.
'Tis even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John.

John.
My lord and brother, God save you.

Don Pedro.
Good den, brother.

John.
If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

Don Pedro.
In private?

John.
John.

If it please you; yet count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of concerns him.

Don Pedro.

What's the matter?

John. [To Claudio.

Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

Don Pedro.

You know, he does.

John.

I know not that, when he knows what I know.

Claudio.

If there be any impediment, I pray you, discover it.

John.

You may think, I love you not: let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I think, he holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage; surely, suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed!

Don Pedro.

Why, what's the matter?

John.

I came hither to tell you: and, circumstances shortened, (for she has been too long a talking of,) the lady is disloyal.

Claudio.

Who? Hero?

John.

Even she: Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.

Claudio.

Disloyal?

John.

The word is too good to paint out her wickedness: I could say, she were worse: think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till farther warrant: go but with me tonight, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claudio.

May this be so?

Don Pedro.

I will not think it.

John.

If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know. If you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claudio.

If I see any thing to-night, why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

Don Pedro.

And, as I woed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

John.

I will disparage her no farther, till you are my witnesses: hear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

Don Pedro.

O day untowardly turned!

Claudio.

O mischief strangely thwarting!

John.

O plague right well prevented! So will you say, when you have seen the sequel. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Street.

Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.

Dogberry.

Are you good men and true?

Verges.

Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogberry.

Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verges.

Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogberry.

First, who think you the most desartless man to be constable?

1 Watchman.

Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoal, for they can write and read.

Dogberry.

Come hither, neighbour Seacoal. God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune, but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watchman.

Both which, master constable,——

Dogberry.

You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge. You shall comprehend all vagrum men: you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

2 Watchman.

How, if a' will not stand?

Dogberry.

Why then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verges.

If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogberry.

True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects.—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for in the watch to bubble and talk is most tolerable, and not to be endured.

2 Watchman.

We will rather sleep than talk: we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogberry.

Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watch-man, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend; only, have a care that your bills be not stolen. Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

2 Watchman.

How, if they will not?

Dogberry.

Why then, let them alone till they are sober: if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

2 Watchman.

Well, sir.

Dogberry.
ACT III. SC. III.  MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Dogberry.

If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 Watchman.

If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dogberry.

Truly, by your office you may; but, I think, they that touch pitch will be defiled. The most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

Verges.

You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

Dogberry.

Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will; much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verges.

If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 Watchman.

How, if the nurse be asleep, and will not hear us?

Dogberry.

Why then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ege that will not hear her lamb when it baes, will never answer a call when he bleats.

' Twas very true.

Dogberry.

This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person: if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verges.

Nay by'r lady, that, I think, a' cannot.

Dogberry.

Five shillings to one o'nt, with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince being willing; for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verges.

By'r lady, I think, it be so.

Dogberry.

Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good night: an there be any matter of weight chances, call up me. Keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night. Come, neighbour.

2 Watchman.

Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to-bed.

Dogberry.

One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you, watch about signior Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night. Adieu, be vigilant, I beseech you.

[Exeunt Dogberry and Verges.]

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Borachio.

Mass, and my elbow itch'd; I thought, there would a scab follow.

Conrade.

I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Borachio.

Stand thee close, then, under this penthouse, for it drizzles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watchman. [Aside.

Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

Borachio.

Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

Conrade.

Is it possible that any villany should be so dear?

Borachio.

Thou should'st rather ask, if it were possible any villany should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Conrade.

I wonder at it.

Borachio.

That shows thou art unconfirmed. Thou knowest, that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Conrade.

Yes, it is apparel.

Borachio.

I mean, the fashion.

Conrade.

Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Borachio.

Tush! I may as well say, the fool's the fool. But seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watchman. [Aside.

I know that Deformed, a' has been a vile thief this seven year: a' goes up and down like a gentleman. I remember his name.

Borachio.

Didst thou not hear somebody?

Conrade.

No: 'twas the vane on the house.

Borachio.

Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is? how giddily a' turns about all the hot bloods between fourteen and five and thirty? sometime, fashioning them like Pharaoh's soldiers in the reed painting; sometime, like god Bel's priests in the old church window; sometime, like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club?

Conrade.

All this I see, and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. But at not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Borachio.

Not so, neither; but know, that I have to-night wooded Margaret, the lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero: she leans me out at her mistress' chamber window, bids me a thousand times good night.—I tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee, how the Prince, Claudia, and my master, planted, and placed, and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

Conrade.
Conrade.

And thought they Margaret was Hero?

Borachio.

Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil, my master, knew she was Margaret, and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chieflly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over-night, and send her home again without a husband.

1 Watchman.

We charge you in the prince's name, stand.

2 Watchman.

Call up the right master constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery, that ever was known in the commonwealth.

1 Watchman.

And one Deformed is one of them: I know him, a' wears a biret.

Conrade.

Masters, masters!

2 Watchman.

You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Conrade.

Masters,—

1 Watchman.

Never speak: we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Borachio.

We are like to prove a goodly commodity, oeing taken up of these men's bills.

Conrade.

A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero.

Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Ursula.

I will, lady.

Hero.

And bid her come hither.

Ursula. [Exit Ursula.

Well.

Margaret.

Troth, I think, your other rabato were better.

Hero.

No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.

Margaret.

By my troth, it's not so good; and I warrant, your cousin will say so.

Hero.

My cousin's a fool, and thou art another. I'll wear none but this.

Margaret.

I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your gown's a most rare fashion, I'faith. I saw the duchess of Milan's gown, that they praise so.

Hero.

O, that exceeds, they say.

Margaret.

By my troth, it's but a night-gown in respect of yours: cloth o' gold, and cuts, and laced with silver, set with pearls, down sleeves, side sleeves, and skirts round, under-borne with a bluish tinsel; but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero.

God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Margaret.

'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero.

Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Margaret.

Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? Is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think, you would have me say, saving your reverence,—a husband! an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend no body. Is there any harm in—the heavier for a husband? None, I think, an it be the right husband, and the right wife; otherwise 'tis light, and not heavy: ask my lady Beatrice else; here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero.

Good morrow, cox

Beatrice.

Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero.

Why, how now? do you speak in the sick tune?

Beatrice.

I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Margaret.

Clap us into—"Light o' love;" that goes without a burden: do you sing it, and 't'll dance it.

Beatrice.

Yea, "Light o' love," with your heels!—then, if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall lack no barns.

Margaret.

O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beatrice.

'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin: 'tis time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill. — Heigh ho!

Margaret.

For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beatrice.

For the letter that begins them all, H.

Margaret.

Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beatrice.

What means the fool, trow?

Margaret.

Nothing; but God send every one their heart's desire!

Hero.

These gloves the count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beatrice.

I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.

Margaret.

A maid, and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beatrice.
Re-enter Ursula.

Ursula.

Madam, withdraw: the prince, the count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula.

Exeunt.

SCENE V. Another Room in Leonato’s House.

Enter Leonato, with Dogberry and Verges.

Leonato.

What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Dogberry.

Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leonato.

Brief, I pray you; for, you see, it is a busy time with me.

Dogberry.

Marry, this it is, sir.

Verges.

Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leonato.

What is it, my good friends?

Dogberry.

Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.
ACT IV.

SCENE I. The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, John, Leonato, Friar, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, Beatrice, &c.

Claudio.

COMB, friar Francis, be brief: only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?

Claudio. No.

Leonato. To be married to her; friar, you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

Claudio. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment, why you should not be conjoined, I charge you on your souls to utter it.

Claudio. Know you any, Hero?

None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, Count?

Leonato. I dare make his answer; none.

Claudio. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!

Benedick. How now! Interjections? Why then, some be of laughing, as, ha! ha! ha!

Claudio. Stand thee by, friar,—Father, by your leave: Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leonato. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claudio. And what have I to give you back, whose worth May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Don Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claudio. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankful¬ness.— There, Leonato; take her back again: Give not this rotten orange to your friend; She's but the sign and semblance of her honour. Behold, how like a maid she blushes here: O, what authority and show of truth Can cunning sin cover itself withal!

Claudio. Comes not that blood, as modest evidence, To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear. All you that see her, that she were a maid, By these exterior shows? But she is none: She knows the heat of a luxurious bed; Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leonato. What do you mean, my lord?

Claudio. Not to be married, Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leonato. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof, Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginity,— Claudio. I know what you would say: if I have known her, You'll say, she did embrace me as a husband, And so extenuate the 'forehand sin: No, Leonato, I never tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his sister, showed Bashful sincerity, and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claudio. Out on the seeming! I will write against it, You seem to me as Dian in her orb, As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown: But you are more intemperate in your blood Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leonato. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

Don Pedro. What that should I speak? I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about To link my dear friend to a common state.

Leonato. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Benedick. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True? O God!

Leonato. Leonato, stand I here?

Don Pedro. Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother? Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leonato. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?

Claudio. Let me but move one question to your daugh¬And, by that fatherly and kindly power [ter, That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leonato. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God, defend me! how am I beast!— What kind of catechizing call you this?

Claudio. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name With any just reproach?
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Claud.
Marry, that can Hero:
Hero it self can blot out Hero's virtue.
What man was he, talk'd with you yesternight
Out at your window, bew'xt twelve and one?
Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero.
I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

Don Pedro.
Why, then are you no maiden.—Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this grieved count.
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber window;
Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal villain,
Confess'd the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.

John.
Fie, fie! they are not to be nam'd, my lord,
Not to be spoke of.
There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claudio.
O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!
But, fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
Thou pure implety, and impious purity!
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eye-lids shall conjure hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.

Leonato.
Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?

Beatrice.
Why, how now, cousin I wherefore shink you down?

John.
Come, let us go.
These things, come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, John, and Claudio.

Benedick.
How doth the lady?

Beatrice.
Dead, I think:—help, uncle!—
Hero: why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—friar!

Leonato.
O fate! take not away thy heavy hand:
Death is the fairest cover for her shame,
That may be wish'd for.

Beatrice.
How now, cousin Hero?

Friar.
Have comfort, lady.

Leonato.
Dost thou look up?

Friar.
Yea; wherefore should she not?

Leonato.
Wherefore? Why doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?—
Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes;
For did I think thou woul'dst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shame,

Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life.
Gadzooks! I, I had but one?
Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame?
O, one too much by thee! Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
I took up a beggar's issue at my gales?
Who smirched thus, and mir'd with infamy,
I might have said, "So part of it is mine,
This shame derives itself from unknown loves."
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was pround on; mine so much,
That I myself was to me sect and mine,
Valuing of her; why, she—O! she is fallen
Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little, which may season give
To her foul tainted flesh!

Benedick.
Sir, sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,
I know not what to say.

Beatrice.
O, on my soul, my cousin is belled!

Benedick.
Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?

Beatrice.
No, truly not; although, until last night,
I have this twelvemoon been her bedfellow.

Leonato.
Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made.
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie,
Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
Wash'd it with tears? Hence! from her; let her die.

Friar.
Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady: I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions [shames
To start into her face; a thousand innocent
In angel whiteness, beat away those blushes;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth.—Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.

Leonato.
Friar, it cannot be.
Thou seest, that all the grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury; she not denies it.
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?

Friar.
Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?

Hero.
They know, that do accuse me: I know none.
If I know more of any man alive,
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy—I, my father!
Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmole, or that I yesternight [ture, Maintain'd the change of words with any crea-refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Friar.
There is some strange misprision in the princes.
Benedick.
Two of them have the very bent of honour; and if their wisdom be misled in this, the practice of it lives in John the bastard, whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.
Leonato.
I know not. If they speak but truth of her, these hands shall tear her: if they wrong her honour, the eldest of them shall well hear of it. Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine, nor age so eat up my invention, nor fortune made such havoc of my means, nor my bad life left me so much of friends, but they shall find, awak'd in such a kind, both strength of limb, and policy of mind, ability in means, and choice of friends, to quit me of them thoroughly.
Friar.
Pause a while, and let my counsel sway you in this case. Your daughter, here, the princes left for dead; let her a while be secretly kept in, and publish it, that she is dead indeed: maintain a mourning ostentation; and on your family's old monument hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites that appertain unto a burial.
Leonato.
What shall become of this? What will this do?
Friar.
Marry, this, well carried, shall on her behalf change slander to remorse; that is some good: but not for that dream I on this strange course, but on this travail look for greater birth. She dying, as it must be so main'tain'd, upon the instant that she was accus'd, shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd of every hearer; for it so falls out, that what we have we prize not to the worth, whiles we enjoy it, but being lack'd and lost, why, then we rack the value; then we find the virtue, that possess'd would not shew us, whiles it was ours. — So will it fare with Claudio: when he shall hear she died upon his words, the idea of her life shall sweetly creep into his study of imagination, and every lovely organ of her life shall come apparel'd in more precious habit, more moving, delicate, and full of life, into the eye and prospect of his soul, [mourn, than when she liv'd indeed — then shall he (if ever love had interest in his liver) and wish he had not so accused her; no, though he thought his accusation true. Let this be so, and doubt not but success will fashion the event in better shape than I can lay it down in likelihood. But if all aim but this be level'd false, the supposition of the lady's death will quench the wonder of her infancy: and, if it sort not well, you may conceal her as best befits her wounded reputation, in some reclusive and religious life, out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.
Leonato.
Signor Leonato, let the friar advise you: and though you know, my inwardness and love is very much unto the prince and Claudio, yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this as secretly and justly, as your soul should with your body.
Act IV. Sc. 11.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Beatrice.

You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Benedick.

Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beatrice.

I am gone, though I am here:—there is no love in you.—Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Benedick.

Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beatrice.

Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman?—O, that I were a man!—What! bear her in hand until they come to take hands, and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour, — O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the marketplace.

Benedick.

Hear me, Beatrice—

Beatrice.

Talk with a man out at a window! — a proper saying.

Benedick.

Nay, but Beatrice—

Beatrice.

Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.

Benedick.

Beat—

Princes, and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a godly count, count capacit; a sweet gallant, surely! O, that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too; he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and swears it. — I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Benedick.

Tarry, good Beatrice. By this hand, I love thee.

Beatrice.

Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

Benedick.

Think you in your soul the count Claudio hath wronged Hero?

Beatrice.

Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or a soul.

Benedick.

Enough! I am engaged, I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so I leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account. As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead; and so, farewell.

SCENE II. A Prison.

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and Sexton, in gowns; and the Watch, with Conrade, and Borachio.

Dogberry.

Is our whole disorderly company? is not a stool and a cushion for the sexton?

Verges.

O! a stool and a cushion for the sexton.

Sexton.

Which be the malefactors?

Dogberry.

Marry, that am I and my partner.

Verges.

Nay, that's certain: we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton.

But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before master constable.

Dogberry.

Yea, marry, let them come before me.—What is you name, friend?

Borachio.

Dogberry.

Pray write down Borachio.—Yours, sirrah?

Conrade.

I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.

Dogberry.

Write down master gentleman Conrade.—Masters, do you serve God?

Conrade and Borachio.

Yea, sir, we hope.

Dogberry.

Write down—that they hope they serve God:—and write God first; for God defend but God should go before such villains!—Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves, and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Conrade.

Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogberry.

A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him. — Come you hither, sirrah; a word in your ear, sir: I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Borachio.

Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogberry.

Well, stand aside — For God, they are both in a tale. Have you writ down, that they are none?

Sexton.

Master constable, you go not the way to examine: you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dogberry.

Yea marry, that's the easiest way: — Let the watch come forth.—Masters, I charge you, in the prince's name, accuse these men.

I Watchman.

This man said, sir, that Don John, the prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogberry.

Write down — prince John a villain. — Why, this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother villain.

Borachio.

Master constable,—
Dogberry.
Pray thee, fellow, peace: I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton.
What heard you him say else?

2 Watchman.
Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John, for accusing the lady Hero wrongfully.

Dogberry.
Flat burglary as ever was committed.

Verges.
Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton.
What else, fellow?

And that Count Claudio did mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dogberry.
O villain I thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton.
What else?

This is all.

Sexton.
And this is more, master, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away: Hero was in this manner accused. In this very manner refused, and, upon the grief of this, suddenly died. Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's: I will go before, and show him their examination.

[Exit.

Dogberry.
Come, let them be opined on.

Verges.
Let them be in the hands—

Conrade.
Off, coxcombs!

God's my life! where's the sexton? let him writedown the prince's officer, coxcombs.—Come, bind them.—Thou naughty varlet!

Conrade.
Away! you are an ass; you are an ass.

Dogberry.
Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?...O, that we were here to write me down an ass!—but, masters, remember, that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. — No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and every thing hands-on about him. Bring him away. O, that I had been writ down an ass!

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I. Before Leonato's House. Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Antonio.
If you go on thus, you will kill yourself; and 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief against yourself.

Leonato.
I pray thee, cease thy counsel, Which falls into mine ears as profitless As water in a sieve. Give me not counsel; Nor let no comforter delight mine ear, But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine: Bring me a father that so low'd his child, Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine, And bid him speak of patience! Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine, And let it answer every strain for strain; As thus for thus, and such a grief for such, In every lineament, branch, shape, and form: If such a was never yet philosopher, And sorrow, wag I cry here, when he should groan; [drunk

Patch grief with proverbs; make misfortune With candle-wasters: bring him yet to me, And I of him will gather patience. But there is no such man; for, brother, men Can counsel, and speak comfort to that grief Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it, Their counsel turns to passion, which before Would give physicall medicine to rage, Fetter strong madness in a silken thread, Charm ache with air, and agony with words. No, no; 'tis all men's office to speak patience To those that wring under the load of sorrow, But no man's virtue, nor sufficiency, To be so moral when he shall endure The like himself. Therefore give me no coun-

My griefs cry louder than advertisement. [sel:

Antonio.
Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leonato.
I pray thee, peace! I will be flesh and blood; For these words was never yet accursed That could endure the tooth-ache patiently, However they have writ the style of gods, And made a push at chance and sufferance.

Antonio.
Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself: Make those that do offend you suffer too.

Leonato.
There thou speakest at reason: nay, I will do so. My soul doth tell me Hero is belied, [Prince, And that shall Claudio know; so shall the And all of them, that thus dishonour her.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio.

Antonio.
Here comes the prince, and Claudio hastily.

Don Pedro.
Good den, good den.

Claudio.
Good day to both of you.

Leonato.
Hear you, my lords.—

Don Pedro.
We have some haste, Leonato

Leonato.
Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well my lord:— Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one.

Don Pedro.
Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.

Antonio.
If he could right himself with quarrelling, Some of us would lie low.

Claudio.
Who wrongs him?

Leonato.
Leonato.

Marry, thou dost wrong me; thou, dissembler, thou.—
Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword, I fear thee not.
Claudio.

Marry, bestrew my hand.
If it should give your age such cause of fear.
In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leonato.

Tush, tush, man! never fleer and jest at me: I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool; As, under privilege of age, to brag [do, What I have done being young, or what would Were I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head, Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by, [me, And with grey hairs, and bristle of many days, Do challenge thee to trial of a man.
I say, thou hast belied mine innocent child: Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart:
And she lies buried with her ancestors, O! in a tomb where never scandal slept, Save this of her's, fram'd by thy villainy.
Claudio.

My villainy?
Leonato.
Thine, Claudio; thine, I say.
Don Pedro.

You say not right, old man.
Leonato.

My lord, my lord,
I'll prove it on his body, if he dare, Despite his nice fence, and his active practice, His May of youth, and bloom of lustyhood.
Claudio.

Away! I will not have to do with you.
Leonato.

Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd my child:
If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Antonio.

He shall kill two of us, and men indeed:
But that's no matter; let him kill one first:—
Win me and wear me,— let him answer me.—
Come, follow me, boy! come, sir boy, follow me.
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your folning fence;
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.
Leonato.

Brother —
Antonio.

Content yourself. God knows, I lov'd my niece;
And she is dead: slander'd to death by villains, That dare as well answer a man, indeed,
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.
Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops! —
Leonato.

Brother Antonio —
Antonio.

Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yea, [scruple: And what they weigh, even to the utmost Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring boys, That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander, Go antickly, and show outward hideousness, And speak half a dozen dangerous words, How they might hurt their enemies, if they And this is all! [durst, —
Leonato.

But, brother Antony —
Antonio.

Come, 'tis no matter:
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.
Don Pedro.

Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.
My heart is sorry for your daughter's death: But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing But what was true, and very full of proof.
Leonato.

My lord, my lord! —
Don Pedro.
I will not hear you. —
Leonato.

Come, brother, away. — I will be heard. —
Antonio.

And shall, or some of us will smart for it.
[Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.

Enter Benedick.
Don Pedro.

See, see: here comes the man we went to seek.
Claudio.

Now, signior, what news?
Benedick.

Good day, my lord.
Don Pedro.

Welcome, signior: you are almost come to part almost a fray.
Claudio.

We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.
Don Pedro.

Leonato and his brother. What think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt, we should have been too young for them.
Benedick.

In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.
Claudio.

We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Will thou use thy wit?
Benedick.

It is in my scabbard: shall I draw it?
Don Pedro.

Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?
Claudio.

Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit. — I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw to pleasure us.
Don Pedro.

As I am an honest man, he looks pale. — Art thou sick, or angry?
Claudio.

What! courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.
Benedick.

Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an you charge it against me. — I pray you, choose another subject.
Claudio.

Nay then, give him another staff: this last was broke cross.
Don Pedro.

By this light, he changes more and more. I think he be angry indeed.
Claudio.

If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.
Benedick.
Benedick.
Shall I speak a word in your ear?
Claudio.
God bless me from a challenge!
Benedick.
You are a villain.—I jest not:— I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare.—Do me right, or I will protest your reward! You have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you. Let me hear from you.
Claudio.
Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.
Don Pedro.
What, a feast? a feast?
Claudio.
I'faith, I thank him; he hath bid me to a call's-head and a capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught. Shall I not find a woodcock too?
Benedick.
Sir, your wit ambles well: it goes easily.
Don Pedro.
I'll tell thee how Beatrice praised thy wit the other day. I said, thou hadst a fine wit; "True," said she, "a fine little one." "No," said I, "a great wit." "Right," said she, "a great gross one." "Nay," said I, "a good wit." "Just," said she. "It hurts nobody." "Nay," said I, "the gentleman is wise." "Certain," said she, "a wise gentleman." "Nay," said I, "he hath the tongues." "That I believe," said she, "for he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forswore on Tuesday morning: there's a double tongue; there's two tongues." Thus did she, an hour together, trans-shape thy particular virtues; yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.
Claudio.
For the which she wept heartily, and said she cared not.
Don Pedro.
Yea, that she did; but yet, for all that, au if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly. The old man's daughter told us all.
Claudio.
All; all; and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.
Don Pedro.
But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?
Claudio.
Yea, and text underneath, "Here dwells Benedick the married man!"
Benedick.
Fare you well, boy: you know my mind. I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour: you break jests as braggers do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not.—My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you: I must discontinue your company. Your brother, the bastard, is fled from Messina: you have, among you, killed a sweet and innocent lady. For my lord Lack-beard, there, he and I shall meet; and till then, peace be with him.
[Exit Benedick.
Don Pedro.
He is in earnest.
Claudio.
In most profound earnest; and, I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

Don Pedro.
And hath challenged thee?
Claudio.
Most sincerely.
Don Pedro.
What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off his wit!
Claudio.
He is then a giant to an ape: but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.
Don Pedro.
But, soft you; let me be: pluck up my heart, and be sad! Did he not say, my brother was fled?

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch, with Conrade and Borachio.
Dogberry.
Come, you, sir: if justice cannot tame you, she shall not weigh more reasons in her balance. Nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.
Don Pedro.
How now! two of my brother's men bound? Borachio, one?
Claudio.
Hearken after their offence, my lord!
Don Pedro.
Officers, what offence have these men done?
Dogberry.
Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondly, they are slanders; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things; and, to conclude, they are lying knaves.

Don Pedro.
First, I ask thee what they have done? thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence? sixth and lastly, why they are committed? and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge?
Claudio.
Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.
Don Pedro.
Whom have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence?
Borachio.
Sweet prince, let me go no farther to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light; who, in the night, overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her. My villainy they have upon record, which I had rather seal with my death, than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

Don Pedro.
Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?
Claudio.
I have drunk poison whiles he utter'd it.
Don Pedro.
But did my brother set thee on to this?

Borachio.
Yea: and paid me richly for the practice of it.

Don Pedro.
He is compos'd and fram'd of treachery.—And fled he is upon this villainy.

Claudio.
Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear
In the rare semblance that I loved it first.

Dogberry.
Come; bring away the plaintiffs: by this time
Our sexton hath reformed signior Leonato of the matter. And masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

Verges.
Here, here comes master signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Re-enter Leonato, Antonio, and the Sexton.

Leonato.
Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes,
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him. Which of these is he?

Borachio.
If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leonato.
Art thou the slave, that with thy breath hast
Mine innocent child? [kill'd

Borachio.
Yea, even I alone.

Leonato.
No, not so. villain; thou believest thyself:
Here stand a pair of honourable men,
A third is fled, that had a hand in it.—
I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death:
Record it with your high and worthy deeds.
'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Claudio.
I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I must speak. Choose your revenge yourself;
Impose me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my sin: yet shin'd I not,
But in mistaking.

Don Pedro.
By my soul, nor I;
And yet, to satisfy this good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.

Leonato.
I cannot bid you bid my daughter live;
That were impossible: but, I pray you both,
Possess the people in Messina, here,
How innocent she died: and, if your love
Can labour aught in such invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,
And sing it to her bones: sing it to-night:—
To-morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my son-in-law,
Be yet my nephew. My brother hath a daugh-
Almost the copy of my child that's dead, [ter,
And she alone is heir to both of us:
Give her the right you should have given her
And so dies my revenge. [cousin,

Claudio.
O! noble sir, your over-kindness doth wring tears from me.
I do embrace your offer, and dispose
For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leonato.
To-morrow, then, I will expect your coming:
To-night I take my leave. — This naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who, I believe, was pact in all this wrong,
Hir'd to it by your brother.

Borachio.
No, by my soul, she was not; nor knew not what she did, when she spoke to
But always hath been just and virtuous, [me; in Any thing that I do know by her.

Dogberry.
Moreover, sir, which, indeed, is not under white and black, this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remembered in his punishment. And also, the watch heard them talk of one Deformed: they say, he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it, and borrow money in God's name;
the which he hath used so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted, and will lend nothing for God's sake. Fray you, examine him upon that point.

Leonato.
I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Dogberry.
Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth, and I praise God for you.

Leonato.
There's for thy pains.

Dogberry.
God save the foundation!

Leonato.
Go: I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

Dogberry.
I leave an arrant knife with your worship:
which, I beseech your worship, to correct yourself for the example of others. God keep your worship; I wish your worship well: God restore you to health. I humbly give you leave to depart, and if a merry meeting may be wished,
God prohibit it. — Come, neighbour.
[Exeunt Dogberry, Verge, and Watch.

Leonato.
Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell.

Antonio.
Farewell, my lords: we look for you tomorrow.

Don Pedro.
We will not fail.

Claudio.
To-night I'll mourn with Hero.
[Exeunt Don Pedro and Claudio.

Leonato.
Bring you these fellows on; we'll talk with
Margaret,
How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Leonato's Garden.

Enter Benedick and Margaret, meeting.

Benedick.
Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Margaret.
Will you, then, write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Benedick.
In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.

Margaret.
MUCH AND WHICH IT FOR BEATRICE.

THY WIT IS AS QUICK AS THE GREYHOUND’S MOUTH; IT CATCHES.

AND YOUR’S AS BLUNT AS THE FENCER’S FOLKS, WHICH HIT, BUT HURT NOT.

A MOST MANLY WIT, BEATRICE; IT WILL NOT HURT A WOMAN: AND SO, I PRAY THEE, CALL BEATRICE. I GIVE THEE THE BUCKLERS.

GIVE US THE SWORDS, WE HAVE BUCKLERS OF OUR OWN.

IF YOU USE THEM, BEATRICE, YOU MUST PUT IN THE PIKES WITH A VICE; AND THEY ARE DANGEROUS WEAPONS FOR MAIDS.

WELL, I WILL CALL BEATRICE TO YOU, WHO, I THINK, HATH LEGS. [EXIT BEATRICE.]

AND THEREFORE WILL COME.

THE GOD OF LOVE,

THAT SITS ABOVE,

AND KNOWS ME, AND KNOWS ME,

HOW PITYFUL I DESERVE,—

I MEAN, IN SINGING; BUT IN LOVING, LEANDER THE GOOD SWIMMER, TROILUS THE FIRST EMPLOYER OF PANDERS, AND A WHOLE BOD OF FULL OF THESE QUANDAM CARPET-MONGERS, WHOSE NAMES YET RUN SMOOTHLY IN THE EVEN ROAD OF A BLANK VERSE, WHY, THEY WERE NEVER SO TRULY TURNED OVER AND OVER AS MY POOR SELF, IN LOVE. MARRY, I CANNOT SHOW IT IN RHYME; I HAVE TRIED: I CAN FIND OUT NO RHYME TO “LADY” BUT “BABY,” AN INNOCENT RHYME; FOR “SCORN,” “HORN,” A HARD RHYME; FOR “SCHOOL,” “FOOL,” A BABBLING RHYME—VERY OMINOUS ENDINGS. NO, I WAS NOT BORN UNDER A RHYMING PLANET, NOR I CANNOT WHO IN FESTIVAL TERMS—

ENTER BEATRICE.

SWEET BEATRICE, WOULD’S THOU COME WHEN I CALLED THEE?

BEATRICE.

YEA, SIGILOR; AND DEPART WHEN YOU BID ME.

BENEDICK.

O, STAY BUT TILL THEN!

BEATRICE.

“THEN” IS SPOKEN; FARE YOU WELL NOW:—AND YET,ERE I GO, LET ME GO WITH THAT I CAME FOR; WHICH IS, WITH KNOWING WHAT HATH PASSED BETWEEN YOU AND CLAUDIO.

BENEDICK.

ONLY FOUL WORDS; AND THEREUPON I WILL KISS THEE.

BEATRICE.

FOUL WORDS IS BUT FOUL WIND, AND FOUL WIND IS BUT FOUL BREATH, AND FOUL BREATH IS NOLSONE; THEREFORE I WILL DEPARTUNKISSED.

BENEDICK.

THOU HAST FRIGHTED THE WORD OUT OF HIS RIGHT SENSE, SO FORCEABLE IS THY WIT. BUT, I MUST TELL THEE Plainly, CLAUDIO UNDERGOES MY CHALLENGE, AND EITHER I MUST SHORTLY HEAR FROM HIM, OR I WILL SUBSCRIBE HIM A COWARD. AND, I PRAY THEE NOW, TELL ME, FOR WHICH OF MY BAD PARTS DIJST THOU FIRST FALL IN LOVE WITH ME?

BEATRICE.

FOR THEM ALTOGETHER; WHICH MAINTAINED SO POLITIC A STATE OF EVIL, THAT THEY WILL NOT ADMIT ANY GOOD PART TO INTERMINGLE WITH THEM. BUT FOR WHICH OF MY GOOD PARTS DID YOU FIRST SUFFER LOVE FOR ME?

BENEDICK.

SUFFER LOVE! A GOOD EPITHET. I DO SUFFER LOVE, INDEED, FOR I LOVE THEE AGAINST MY WILL.

BEATRICE.

IN SPITE OF YOUR HEART, I THINK. ALS, POOR HEART! IF YOU SPOILE IT FOR MY SAKE, I WILL SPIT IT FOR YOURS; FOR I WILL NEVER LOVE THAT WHICH MY FRIEND HATES.

BENEDICK.

THOU AND I ARE TOO WISE TO WOO PEACEABLY.

BEATRICE.

IT APPEARS NOT IN THIS CONFESSION: THERE’S NOT ONE WISE MAN AMONG TWENTY THAT WILL PRAISE HIMSELF.

BENEDICK.

AN OLD, AN OLD INSTANCE, BEATRICE, THAT LIVED IN THE TIME OF GOOD NEIGHBOURS. IF A MAN DO NOT ERECT, IN THIS AGE, HIS OWN TOMB ER HE DIES, HE SHALL LIVE NO LONGER IN MONUMENT, THAN THE BELL RINGS, AND THE WIDOW WEEP.

BEATRICE.

AND HOW LONG IS THAT, THINK YOU?

BENEDICK.

QUESTION:—WHY AN HOUR IN CLAMOUR, AND A QUARTER IN RHEUM? THEREFORE IS IT MOST EXPEDIENT FOR THE WISE, (IF DON WORM, HIS CONSCIENCE, AND NO IMPEDIMENT TO THE CONTRARY,) TO BE THE TRUMPET OF HIS OWN VIRTUES, AS I AM TO MYSELF. SO MUCH FOR PRAISING MYSELF, WHO, I MYSELF WILL BEAR WITNESS, IS PRAISEWORTHY. AND NOW TELL ME, HOW DOTH YOUR COUSIN?

VERY ILL.

BENEDICK.

AND HOW DO YOU?

BEATRICE.

VERY ILL TOO.

BENEDICK.

SERVE GOD, LOVE ME, AND MEND. THERE WILL I LEAVE YOU TOO, FOR HERE COMES ONE IN HASTE.

ENTER URSULA.

URSULA.

MADAM, YOU MUST COME TO YOUR UNCLE. YOUNGER’S OLD COAT AT HOME: IT IS PROVED, MY LADY HERO HATH BEEN FALSELY ACCUSED, THE PRINCE AND CLAUDIO MIGHTILY ABUSED; AND DON JOHN IS THE AUTHOR OF ALL, WHO IS SLEP AND GONE. WILL YOU COME PRESENTLY?

BEATRICE.

WILL YOU GO HEAR THIS NEWS, SIGILOR?

BENEDICK.

I WILL LIVE IN THY HEART, DIE IN THY LAP, AND BE BURIED IN THY EYES; AND, MOREOVER, I WILL GO WITH THEE TO THY UNCLE’S.

EXC.]

SCENE III. THE INSIDE OF A CHURCH.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Attendants, with music and tapers.

CLAUDIO.

IS THIS THE MONUMENT OF LEONATO?

ATTENDANT.

IT IS, MY LORD.

CLAUDIO. [Reads.]

DONE TO DEATH BY SLANDEROUS TONGUES

WAS THE HERO THAT HERE LIES:

Death
Death, in guardon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies.
So the life, that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb.—

Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

Song.

Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that strew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our mom;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Graces, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Claudio.

Now, unto thy bones good night!
Yearly will I do this rite.

Don Pedro.
Good morrow, masters: put your torches out.
The wolves have prey’d; and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phæbus, round about
Dapples the dray east with spots of grey.
Thanks to you all, and leave us: fare you well.

Claudio.

Good morrow, masters: each his several way.

Don Pedro.
Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds;
And then to Leonato’s we will go.

Claudio.
And Hymen now with luckier issue speeds,
Than this, for whom we render’d up this woe!

---

SCENE IV. A room in Leonato’s House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beatrice, Ursula, Friar, and Hero.

Friar.
Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leonato.
So are the prince and Claudio, who accus’d her
Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.

Antonio.

Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Benedick.
And so am I, being else by faith enforce’d
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leonato.

Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves.
And, when I send for you, come hither mask’d:
The prince and Claudio promis’d by this hour
To visit me — You know your office, brother;
You must be father to your brother’s daughter,
And give her to young Claudio.
[Exeunt Ladies.]

Antonio.

Which I will do with confirm’d countenance.

Benedick.

Friar, I must entertain your pains, I think.

Friar.

To do what, signior?

Benedick.

I’d blind me, or undo me; one of them.—

---

Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior.

Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

Leonato.

That eye my daughter lent her: ’tis most true.

Benedick.

And I do with an eye of love requite her.

Leonato.

The sight whereof, I think, you had from me,
From Claudio, and the prince. But what’s your will?

Benedick.

Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But, for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin’d
In the state of honourable marriage:—
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.

Leonato.

My heart is with your liking.

Friar.

And my help.

Here come the prince, and Claudio.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio, with Attendants.

Don Pedro.

Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leonato.

Good morrow, prince; good morrow, Claudio: We here attend you. Are you yet determin’d
To-day to marry with my brother’s daughter?

Claudio.

I’ll hold my mind were she an Ethiope.

Leonato.

Call her forth, brother: here’s the friar ready.

[Exit Antonio.]

Don Pedro.

Good morrow, Benedick. Why, what’s the That you have such a February face, [matter,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness?

Claudio.

I think, he thinks upon the savage bull.—
Tush! fear not, man, we’ll tip th’ horns with
And all Europa shall rejoice at thee, [gold,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.

Benedick.
Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
[cow,
And some such strange bull leap’d your father’s
And got a calf in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you have just his beat.

Re-enter Antonio with the Ladies masked.

Claudio.

For this I owe you: here come other reckon-Which is the lady I must seize upon?
[ings.

Leonato.

This same is she, and I do give you her.

Claudio.

Why, then she’s mine.—Sweet, let me see your face.

Leonato.

No, that you shall not, till you take her hand
Before this friar, and swear to marry her.

Claudio.

Give me your hand before this holy friar:
I am your husband, if you like of me.

Hero.

And when I liv’d, I was your other wife:

[Unmasking.

Claudio.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Claudio.

Another Hero?

Hero.

Nothing certainer.

One Hero died depl'd; but I do live,

And, surely as I live, I am a mald.

Don Pedro.

The former Hero! Hero that is dead!

Leonato.

She died, my lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

Friar.

All this amazement can I qualify;

When after that the holy rites are ended,

I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death:

Mean time, let wonder seem familiar,

And to the chapel let us presently.

Benedick.

Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice?

Beatrice.

I answer to that name. [Unmasking.] What is your will?

Benedick.

Do not you love me?

Beatrice.

Why, no; no more than reason.

Benedick.

Why, then, your uncle, and the prince, and

Claudio,

Have been deceived: they swore you did.

Beatrice.

Do not you love me?

Benedick.

Troth, no; no more than reason.

Beatrice.

Why, then, my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,

Are much deceiv'd; for they did swear, you did.

Benedick.

They swore that you were almost sick for me.

Beatrice.

They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.

Benedick.

'Tis no such matter.—Then, do you not love me?

Beatrice.

No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leonato.

Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Claudio.

And I'll be sworn upon't, that he loves her;

For here's a paper, written in his hand,

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,

Fashion'd to Beatrice.

Hero.

And here's another,

Writ in my cousin's hand, stop'd from her

Containing her affection unto Benedick. [pocket,

Benedick.

A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts.—Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beatrice.

I would not deny you;—but, by this good day,

I yield upon great persuasion, and, partly, to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Benedick.

Peace! I will stop your mouth.

Don Pedro.

How dost thou, Benedick, the married man?

Benedick.

I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour.

Dost thou think, I care for a satire, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, a' shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it, for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part,

Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but,

in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claudio.

I had well hoped, thou wouldst have denied

Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer;

which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Benedick.

Come, come, we are friends.—Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

Leonato.

We'll have dancing afterward.

Benedick.

First, of my word; therefore, play, music!—

Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.

My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Benedick.

Think not on him till to-morrow: I'll devise thee brave punishments for him.—Strike up pipers.

Lords, attending on the Princess of France.
Mercade, Katharine.
Don Adrian de Armado, a Spaniard.
Sir Nathaniel, a Curate.
Jaquenetta, a country Wench.
Holofernes, a Schoolmaster.
Officers, and others, Attendants on the King and Princess.
Dull, a Constable.
Page, attending on the Prince of France.
Costard, a Clown.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Navarre. A Park, with a Palace in it.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumaine.

King.

LET fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring time,
Thee, in endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour, which shall hate his scythe's keen
And make us heirs of all eternity.

[Edge, Therefore, brave conquerors!—for so you are,
That war against your own affections,
And the huge army of the world's desires,
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force.
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world:
Our court shall be a little Academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Biron, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes,
That are recorded in this schedule here;
Your oaths are past, and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein.
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.

Longaville.

I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast.
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

Dumaine.

My loving lord. Dumaine is mortified.
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die,
With all these living in philosophy.

Biron.

I can but say their protestation over;
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years;
But there are other strict observances;
As, not to see a woman in that term,
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
And, one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside,
The which, I hope, is not enrolled there:
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day,
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night, too, of half the day,
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there.
O! these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.

King.

Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.

Biron.

Let me say no, my liege, and if you please.
I only swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Longaville.

You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.

Biron.

By yea, and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.
What is the end of study, let me know?

King.

ACT I. Sc. I.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

ACT I. SC. I

King.
Why, that to know which else we should not know.

Biron.
Things hid and bar'd, you mean, from common sense?

King.
Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

Biron.
Come on, then: I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus,—to study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid:
Or study where to meet some mistress fine,
Where mistress from study sense are hid:
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my truth,
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know.
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.

King.
These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Biron.
Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain,
Which, with pain purchas’d, doth inherit pain:
As painfully to pore upon a book, while
To seek the light of truth; while truth the Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Light. seeking light, doth light of light obscure,
So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye:
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his head,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heaven’s glorious sun, [Looks:
That will not be deep-search’d with saucy
Small have continual plodders ever won;
Save base authority from others’ books.
These earthly godfathers of heaven’s lights,
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights,
Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.
Too much to know is to know nought but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.

King.
How well he’s read, to reason against reading!

Dumaine.
Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!

Longaville.
He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Biron.
The spring is near, when green geese are a breeding.

Dumaine.
How follows that?

Biron.
Fit in his place and time.

Dumaine.
In reason nothing:

Biron.
Something, then, in rhyme.

King.
Biron is like an envious sneaping frost,
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Biron.
Well, say I am: why should proud summer boast,
Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in any abortive birth?

At Christmas I no more desire a rose,
Than wish a snow in May’s new-fangled shows
But like of each thing that in season grows.
So you, to study now it is too late,
Climb o’er the house to unlock the little gate.

King.
Well, sit you out: go home, Biron: adieu!

Biron.
No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:
And, though I have for barbarism spoke more,
Than for that angel knowledge you can say.
Yet confident I’ll keep what I have sworn,
And hide the penance of each three years’ day.
Give me the paper: let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I’ll write my name.

King.
How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Biron.
[Reads.]
Item, “That no woman shall come within a mile of my court.”—Hath this been proclaimed?

Longaville.
Four days ago.

Biron.
Let’s see the penalty. [Reads.] “On pain of losing her tongue.” —Who devi’d this penalty?

Longaville.
Marry, that did I.

Biron.
Sweet lord, and why?

Longaville.
To fright them hence with that dread penalty.

Biron.
A dangerous law against gentility!

[Reads.] Item, “If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.” —
This article, my liege, yourself must break;
For, well you know, here comes in embassy
The French king’s daughter with yourself to speak,—
A maid of grace, and complete majesty,—
About surrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-ridden father:
Therefore, this article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes th’ admired princess hither.

King.
What say you, lords? why, this was quite forgot.

Biron.
So study evermore is overshot:
While it doth study to have what it would,
’t doth forget to do the thing it should;
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
’I is won, as towns with fire; so won, so lost.

King.
We must of force dispense with this decree:  She must lie here on mere necessity.

Biron.
Necessity will make us all forsworn [space;
Three thousand times within this three years’
For every man with his affects is born;
Not by might master’d, but by special grace.
If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,
I am forsworn on mere necessity.—
So to the laws at large I write my name;
And he, that breaks them in the least degree,
Stands in attainted of eternal shame.
Suggestion are to others, as to me;
But,
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

ACT I. SC. I.

But, I believe, although I seem so loth,
I am the last that will last keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation granted?

King.

Ay, that there is. Our court, you know, is haunted
With a refined traveller of Spain;
A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain:
One, whom the music of his own vain tongue
Doth ravish like enchanting harmony;
A man of complements, whom right and wrong
Have chose as umpire of their mutiny:
This child of fancy, that Armado bright,
For interim to our studies, shall relate
In high-born words the worth of many a knight
From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.
How you delight, my lords, I know not, I,
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.

Biron.

Armado is a most illustrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.

Longaville.

Costard, the swarm, and he shall be our sport;
And so to study, three years is but short.

Enter Dudley, with a letter, and Costard.

Dull.

Which is the duke's own person?

Biron.

This is he.

Dull.

Signior Arm—Arm—commends you. There's villainy abroad: this letter will tell you more.

Costard.

Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King.

A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Biron.

How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Longaville.

A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!

Biron.

To hear, or forbear hearing?

Longaville.

To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately;
or to forbear both.

Biron.

Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.

Costard.

The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaguemeta. The manner of it, I was taken with the manner.

Biron.

In what manner?

Costard.

In manner and form following, sir; all those two: I was seen with her in the manor house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is, in manner and form following. Now, sir,
With a wench.

Costard.

"—with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I (as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Antony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation."

Dull.

Me, an't shall please you: I am Antony Dull.

"For Jaquenetta, (so is the weaker vessel called) which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain, I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

"Don Adriano de Armado."

Biron.

This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King.

Ay, the best for the worst.—But, sirrah, what say you to this?

Costard.

Sir, I confess the wench.

King.

Did you hear the proclamation?

Costard.

I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King.

It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.

Costard.

I was taken with none, sir: I was taken with a damsel.

King.

Well, it was proclaimed damsel.

Costard.

This was no damsel neither, sir: she was a virgin.

King.

It is so varied, too, for it was proclaimed virgin.

Costard.

If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.

King.

This maid will not serve your turn, sir.

Costard.

This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King.

Sir, I will pronounce your sentence: you shall fast a week with bran and water.

Costard.

I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King.

And Don Armado shall be your keeper.—My lord Biron, see him deliver'd o'er:
And go we, lords, to put in practice that Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumaine.

Biron.

I'll lay my head to any good man's hat,
These oaths and laws will prove an idle Sirrah, come on. [scorn.—

Costard.

I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and, therefore, welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again, and till then, set thee down, sorrow!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Armado's House in the Park.

Enter Armado, and Moth, his page.

Armado.

Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth.

A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Armado.

Why? sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Moth.

No, no; O lord I sir, no.

Armado.

How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenile?

Moth.

By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Armado.

Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth.

Why tender juvenile? why tender juvenile?

Armado.

I spoke it, tender juvenile, as a congruent epithet appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth.

And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Armado.

Pretty, and apt.

Moth.

How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my saying apt; or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Armado.

Thou pretty, because little.

Moth.

Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt?

Armado.

And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth.

Speak you this in my praise, master?

Armado.

In thy condition praise.

Moth.

I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Armado.

What, that an eel is ingenious?

Moth.

That an eel is quick.

Armado.

I do say, thou art quick in answers. Thou heatest my blood.

Moth.

I am answered, sir.

Armado.

I love not to be crossed.

Moth. [Aside. He speaks the mere contrary: crosses love not him?

Armado.

I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth.
ACT I. SC. II.  LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.  161

Moth.  You may do it in an hour, sir.
Armado.  Impossible.
Moth.  How many is one thrice told?
Armado.  I am ill at reckoning: it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.
Moth.  You are a gentleman, and a gamester, sir.
Armado.  I confess both: they are both the varnish of a complete man.
Moth.  Then, I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.
Armado.  It doth amount to one more than two.
Moth.  Which the base vulgar do call three.
Armado.  True.
Moth.  Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now, here is three studied ere you'll thrice wink; and how easy it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.
Armado.  A most fine figure!
Moth.  To prove you a cypher,
Armado.  I will hereupon confess I am in love; and, as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised courtesy. I think scorn to sigh: methinks, I should outswear Cupid. Comfort me, boy. What great men have been in love?
Moth.  Hercules, master.
Armado.  Most sweet Hercules! More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.
Moth.  Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage; for he carried the town-gates on his back, like a porter, and he was in love.
Armado.  O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too. Who was Samson's love, my dear Moth?
Moth.  A woman, master.
Armado.  Of what complexion?
Moth.  Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.
Armado.  Tell me precisely of what complexion.
Moth.  Of the sea-water green, sir.

Armado.  Is that one of the four complexions?
Moth.  As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.
Armado.  Green, indeed, is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks, Samson had small reason for it. He, surely, affected her for her wit.
Moth.  It was so, sir, for she had a green wit.
Armado.  My love is most immaculate white and red.
Moth.  Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.
Armado.  Define, define, well-educated infant.
Moth.  My father's wit, and my mother's tongue, assist me!
Armado.  Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty, and pathetic!
Moth.  If she be made of white or red,
Her faults will ne'er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale-white shown:
Then, if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know;
For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.
A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.
Armado.  Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?
Moth.  The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since, but, I think, now 'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing, nor the tune.
Armado.  I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl, that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard: she deserves well.
Moth.  To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master.
Armado.  Sing, boy: my spirit grows heavy in love.
Moth.  And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.
Armado.  I say, sing.
Moth.  Forbear till this company be past.
Enter Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta.
Dull.  Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance; but 's must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well.
Man.
Armado.
Armado.
I will visit thee at the lodge.
Jaquenetta.
That's hereby.
Armado.
I know where it is situate.
Jaquenetta.
Lord, how wise you are!
Armado.
I will tell thee wonders.
Jaquenetta.
With that face?
Armado.

I love thee.
Jaquenetta.
So I heard you say.
Armado.
And so farewell.
Jaquenetta.
Fair weather after you!
Dull.
Come, Jaquenetta, away.
[Exeunt Dull and Jaquenetta.
Armado.
Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences, ere thou be pardoned.
Costard.
Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.
Armado.
Thou shalt be heavily punished.
Costard.
I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.
Armado.
Take away this villain: shut him up.
Moth.
Come, you transgressing slave: away!
Costard.
Let me not be pent up, sir: I will fast, being loose.
Moth.
No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.
Costard.
Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—
Moth.
What shall some see?
Costard.
Nay nothing, master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet.
[Exeunt Moth and Costard.
Armado.

I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn, (which is a great argument of falsehood;) if I love; and how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil: there is no evil angel but love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength: yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is, to subdue men. Adieu, valour!

rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for, I am sure, I shall turn sonneteer. Devise wit, write pen, for I am for whole volumes in folio. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Another part of the Park. A Pavillion and Tents at a distance.
Enter the Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet.
NOW, madam, summon up your dearest spirits Consider whom the king your father sends, To whom he sends, and what's his embassy: Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem, To parley with the sole inheritor Of all perfections that a man may owe, Matchless Navarre: the plea of no less weight Than Aquitaine, a dowry for a queen. Be now as prodigal of all dear grace, As nature was in making graces dear, When she did starve the general world beside, And prodigally gave them all to you.

Princess.
Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean Needs not the painted flourish of your praise: Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye, Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues. I am less proud to hear you tell my worth, Than you much willing to be counted wise In spending your wit in the praise of mine. But now to task the tasker.—Good Boyet, You are not ignorant, all-telling fame Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow, Till painful study shall out-wear three years, No woman may approach his silent court: Therefore to us seem'th it a needful course, Before we enter his forbidden gates, To know his pleasure, and in that behalf, Bold of our worsting this, we single you As our best moving fair solicietor. Tell him, the daughter of the king of France, On serious business, craving quick despatch, Importunes personal conference with his grace He no matter much; while we attend, Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet.
Proud of employment, willingly I go. [Exit.

Princess.
All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.— Who are the vortaries, my loving lords, That are vort-fellows with this virtuous duke?

Longaville is one.

Princess.
Know you the man? Maria.

I know him, madam: at a marriage feast, Between lord Perigort and the beauteous heir Of Jaques Falconbridge, solemnized In Normandy, saw I this Longaville. A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd; Well fitted in arts; glorious in arms: Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well. The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss, If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil, Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will; Whose Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should none spare that come within his power.

Princess.

Some merry mocking lord, belike; is't so?

Martha.

They say so most that most his humors know.

Princess.

Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?

Katherine.

Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: if I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal.
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue (conceit's exponent,) Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished,
So sweet and volatile is his discourse.

Princess.

God bless my ladies! are they all in love,
That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter Boyet.

Princess.

Now, what admittance, lord?

Boyet.

Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he, and his competitors in oath,
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre.

[The ladies make.

Enter King, Longaville, Dumaine, Biron, and Attendants.

King.

Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Princess.

Fair, I give you back again; and welcome I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King.

You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Princess.

I will be welcome then. Conduct me thither.

King.

Hear me, dear lady: I have sworn an oath.

Princess.

Our lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King.

Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Princess.

Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King.

Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Princess.

Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance. I hear, your grace hath sworn out house-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold:
To teach a teacher I beseech me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Give a paper.

King.

Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Princess.

You will the sooner that I were away,
For you'll prove perjur'd, if you make me stay.

Biron.

Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Rosaline.

Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Biron.

I know you did.

Rosaline.

How needless was it, then,
To ask the question?

Biron.

You must not be so quick.

Rosaline.

"Tis 'long of you, that spur me with such questions.

Biron.

Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.

Rosaline.

Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron.

What time o' day?

Rosaline.

The hour that fools should ask.

Biron.

Now fair befall your mask!

Rosaline.

Fair fall the face I love!

Biron.

And send you many lovers!

Rosaline.

Amen, so you be none.

Biron.

Nay, then will I begone.

King.

Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum,
Disbursed by my father in his wars.
But say, that he, or we, (as neither have,) Receiv'd that sum, yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more; in surety of the One part of Aquitain is bound to us, (which,
Although not valued to the money's worth.
If, then, the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitain,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty. But
But that, it seems, be little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid
An hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitain;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitain, so gilded as it is.

Dear princess, were not his request so far
From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding, 'gainst some reason in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again.

Princess.

You do the king my father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseeming to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

King.

I do protest, I never heard of it;
And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitain.

Princess.

We arrest your word.

Boyet.

You can produce acquaintances
For such a sum, from special officers
Of Charles his father.

King.

Satisfy me so.

Boyet.

So please your grace, the packet is not come,
Where that and other specialties are bound:
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King.

It shall suffice me: at which interview,
All liberal reason I will yield unto.
Mean time, receive such welcome at my hand,
As honour, without breach of honour, may
Make tender of to thy true worthiness.
You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and fare-
To-morrow shall we visit you again.

Princess.

Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace!

King.

Thy own wish wish I thee in every place!

[Exeunt King and his Train.

Boyet.

Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.

Rosaline.

Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Biron.

Now, God save thy life!

Rosaline.

And yours from long living!

Biron.

I cannot stay thanksgiving.

Dumaine.

Sir, I pray you, a word. What lady is that same?

Boyet.

The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her name.

Dumaine.

A gallant lady. Monsieur, fare you well.

[Exit. Longaville. I beseech you a word. What is she in the white?

Boyet.

A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light.

Longaville.

Perchance, light in the light. I desire her name.

Boyet.

She hath but one for herself; to desire that, were a shame.

Longaville.

Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet.

Her mother's, I have heard.

Longaville.

God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet.

Good sir, be not offended.

She is an heir of Falconbridge.

Boyet.

Nay, my choler is ended.

She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet.

Not unlike, sir: that may be.

[Exit Longaville. Biron. What's her name, in the cap?

Boyet.

Katherine, by good hap.

Biron.

Is she wedded, or no?

Boyet.

To her will, sir, or so.

Biron.

O! you are welcome, sir. Adieu.

Boyet.

Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you.

[Exit Biron. — Ladies unmask Maria. Biron. That last is Biron, the merry mad-cap lord:
Not a word with him but a jest.

Boyet.

And every jest but a word.

Princess.

It was well done of you to take him at his word.

Boyet.

I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board.

Maria.

Two hot sheepes, marry I

Boyet.

And wherefore not ships?

No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.

Maria.
ACT III, Sc. 1. LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Maria.
You sheep, and I pasture: shall that finish the jest?

Boyet.
So ye'1 grant pasture for me.
[Offering to kiss her.

Maria.
Not so, gentle beast.

Boyet.
Belonging to whom?

Maria.
To my fortunes and me.

Princess.
Good wits will beangling; but, gentle, agree.
This civil war of wits were much better used
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 'tis abused.

Boyet.
If my observation, (which very seldom lies,)
By the heart's still rhetoric, disclosed with eyes,
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.

Princess.
With what?

Boyet.
With that which we lovers entitle, affected.

Princess.
Your reason?

Boyet.
Why, all his behaviours did make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire:
His heart, like an agate, with your print impressed,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed:
His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be;
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair.
Methought, all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy:
Who, tend'ring their own worth, from where they were glaze'd,
Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
His face's own margin did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.

Princess.
Come to our pavilion: Boyet is dispos'd—

Boyet.
But to speak that in words, which his eye

Maria.
Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully.

Rosaline.
He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.

Rosaline.
Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boyet.
Do you hear, my mad wenches?

Maria.
No.

Boyet.
What, then, do you see?

Rosaline.
Ay, our way to be gone.

Boyet.
You are too hard for me.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE 1. Another part of the same.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Armado.
WARBLE, child: make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth.
Concolinel——

Armado.
[Singing.

Sweet air!—Go, tenderness of years: take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him fortunately bolder; I must employ him in a letter to my love.

Moth.
Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?

Armado
How mearest thou? brawling in French?

Moth.
No, my complete master; but to jog off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eye-lids; sigh a note, and sing a note; sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love; sometime through the nose, as if you sniffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like, 'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly's doublet, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours; these betray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these, and make them men of note, (do you note, men?) that most are affected to these.

Armado.
How hast thou purchased this experience?

Moth.
By my penny of observation.

Armado.
But O, but O—

Moth.
—the hobby-horse is forgot.

Armado.
Callest thou my love hobby-horse?

Moth.
No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have you forgot your love?

Armado.
Almost I had.

Moth.
Negligent student I learn her by heart.

Armado.
By heart, and in heart, boy.

Moth.
And out of heart, master: all those three I will prove.

Armado.
What wilt thou prove?

Moth.
A man, if I live: and this, by, in, and without, upon
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act III. Sc.

upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Armado.

I am all these three.

Moth.

And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Armado.

Fetch hither the swain: he must carry me a letter.

Moth.

A message well sympathised: a horse to be ambassador for an ass.

Armado.

Ha, ha! what sayest thou?

Moth.

Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited: but I go.

Armado.

The way is but short. Away!

Moth.

As swift as lead, sir.

Armado.

Thy meaning, pretty Ingenious? Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

Moth.

Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.

Armado.

I say, lead is slow.

Moth.

You are too swift, sir, to say so: Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?

Armado.

Sweet smoke of rhetoric! He reproves me a cannon; and the bullet, that's I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth.

Thump then, and I flee. [Exit.

Armado.

A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace! By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place. My herald is return'd.

Re-enter Moth with Costard.

Moth.

A wonder, master! here's a Costard broken in a shin.

Armado.

Some enigma, some riddle: come, — thy Envoj; — begin.

Costard.

No egma, no riddle, no Envoj! no salve in the male, sir: O, sir, plantain, a plain plantain! no Envoj, no Envoj: no salve, sir, but a plantain.

Armado.

By virtue, thou enforces laughter: thy silly thought, my spleen; the hearing of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling. O, pardon me, my stars! Dost the inconsiderate take salve for Envoj, and the word Envoj for a salve?

Moth.

Do the wise think them other? is not Envoj a salve?

Armado.

No, page: it is an epilogue, or discourse, to make plain

Some obscure precedent that hath tofore been I will example it: [sain.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee, Were still at odds, being but three.

There's the moral: now the Envoj.

Moth.

I will add the Envoj. Say the moral again.

Armado.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee, Were still at odds, being but three.

Moth.

Until the goose came out of door, And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my Envoj.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee, Were still at odds, being but three.

Armado.

Until the goose came out of door, Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth.

A good Envoj, ending in the goose. Would you desire more?

Costard.

The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat. — Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be To sell a bargain well, is as cunning as fast and loose: Let me see, a fat Envoj; ay, that's a fat goose.

Armado.

Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?

Moth.

By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin. Then call'd you for the Envoj.

Costard.

True, and I for a plantain: thus came your argument in; [bought, Then the boy's fat Envoj, the goose that you And he ended the market.

Armado.

But tell me; how was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Moth.

I will tell you sensibly.

Costard.

Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth: I will speak that Envoj. I, Costard, running out, that was safely within, Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Armado.

We will talk no more of this matter.

Costard.

Till there be more matter in the shin.

Armado.

Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Costard.

O! marry me to one Frances? — I smell some Envoj, some goose, in this.

Armado.

By my sweet soul, I mean, setting thee at liberty, enfreedoming thy person: thouwert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Costard.

True, true; and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Armado.

I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this:
Enter Biron.

O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron.

What is a remuneration?

Costard.

Marry, sir, half-penny farthing.

Biron.

O! why then, three-farthings-worth of silk.

Costard.

I thank your worship. God be wi' you.

Biron.

O, stay, slave! I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Costard.

When would you have it done, sir?

Biron.

O! this afternoon.

Costard.

Well, I will do it, sir. Fare you well.

Biron.

O! thou knowest not what it is.

Costard.

I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Biron.

Why, villain, thou must know first.

Costard.

I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron.

It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:
The princess comes to hunt here in the park,
And in her train there is a gentle lady;
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her: ask for her,
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd-up counsel. There's thy guerdon: go.

Costard.

Guerdon. — O! sweet guerdon! better than remuneration; eleven pence farthing better.
Most sweet guerdon! — I will do it, sir, in print.
—Guerdon — remuneration!

Biron.

O! — And I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh;
A critic, nay, a night-watch constable,
A domineering prince for the boy,
Than whom no mortal so magnificent!
This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy;
This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,
Th' anointed sovereign of sighs and groans.
Liege of all loiterers and malcontents,
Dread prince of plackets, king of cod-pieces,
Solo imperator, and great general
Of trotting paritors, (O my little heart!) And I to be a corporal of his field,
And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!
What? I love! I sue! I seek a wife!
A woman, that is like a German clock,
Still a repairing, ever out of frame,
And never going aright: being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right?
Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;
And, among three, to love the worst of all;
A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes;
Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed,
Though Argus were her eumuch and her guard:
And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!
To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague
That Cupid will impose for my neglect
Of his almighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, groan:
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Another part of the same.

Enter the Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, Attendants, and a Forester.

Princess.

Was that the king, that spurr'd his horse so hard
Against the steep uprising of the hill?

Boyet.

I know not; but, I think, it was not he.

Princess.

Whoe'er a' was, a' show'd a mounting mind.
Well, lords, to-day we shall have our despatch;
On Saturday we will return to France.

Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush,
That we must stand and play the murderer in?

Forester.

Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;
A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.

Princess.

I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot.

Forester.

Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.

Princess.

What, what? first praise me, and again say, no?
O, short-iv'd pride! Not fair? alas! for woeful ease!

Yes, madam, fair.

Princess.

Nay, never paint me now:
Where fair Is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass, take this for telling true.

Fair payment for foul words is more than due.

[Forester.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act IV. Sc. 1.

Boyet.

Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

Princess.

See, see I my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresy in fair, fit for these days! [praise. —
A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair
But come, the bow: — now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well is then accounted ill.

Thus will I save my credit in the shot:
Not wounding, pity would not let me do't;
If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.

And, out of question, so it is sometimes;
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes, [part,
When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward
We bend to that the working of the heart;

As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no

Boyet.

Do not curst wives hold that self-sovereignty?
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be Lords o'er their lords?

Princess.

Only for praise; and praise we may afford
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Enter Costard.

Princess.

Here comes a member of the commonwealth.

Costard.

God dig-you-den all. Pray you, which is the head lady?

Princess.

Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.

Costard.

Which is the greatest lady, the highest?

Princess.

The thickest, and the tallest.

Costard.

The thickest, and the tallest? it is so; truth is truth [wit,
An your waist, mistress, were as slender as my One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit.

Are not you the chief woman? you are the Princess.

What's your will, sir? what's your will?

Costard.

I have a letter, from monsieur Biron to one lady Rosaline.

Princess.

O, thy letter, thy letter! he's a good friend of mine. Stand aside, good bearer. — Boyet, you can carve; Break up this capon.

Boyet.

I am bound to serve. —
This letter is mistook; it importeth none here:
It is wrt to Jaquenetta.

Princess.

We will read it, I swear.
Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet. [Reads.

"By heaven, that thou art fair, is most inflam-ible: true, that thou art beautious; truth itself; that thou art lovely. More fairer than fair, beautiful than beautious, truer than truth itself, have commisseration on thy heretical vassal! The magnanimous and most illustre king Co-phetus set eye upon the pernicious and imbittered beggar Penelopean; and he it was that might-rightly say, veni, vidi, vici; which to anatomize in the vulgar, (O base and obscure vulgar!) vividly, he came, saw, and overcame: he came, one;
Saw, two; overcame, three. Who came?
The king; thy did he come? to see; Why did he see? to overcome: To whom came he? to the beggar; What saw he? the beggar; Whom overcame he? the beggar. The conclusion is victory: on whose side? the king's: the captive is enriched on whose side? the beggar's. The cautel of a nuptial: on whose side? the kings? — no, on both in one, or one in both.
I am the king, for so stands the comparison; thou the beggar, for so witnesseth thy lowliness.
Shall I command thy love? I may, Shall I enforce thy love? I could. Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shall thou exchange for rags? robes; for titles? titles; for thyself? me.
Thus, expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

"Thine, in the dearest design of industry, Thy, Adriano de Armado."

"Thy dost thou hear the Nemeeion lion
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey:
Submit all his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play:
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou
then?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den."

Princess.

What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

What vane? what weathercock? did you ever hear better?

Boyet.

I am much deceiv'd, but I remember the style.

Princess.

Else your memory is bad, going o'er it ere-while.

Boyet.

This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in a phantasm, a Monarcho, and one that makes

Princess.

Thou, fellow, a word.

Who gave thee this letter?

Costard.

I told you; my lord.

Princess.

To whom shouldst thou give it?

Costard.

From my lord to my lady.

Princess.

From which lord, to which lady?

Costard.

From my lord Biron, a good master of mine,
To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Princess.

Thou hast mistaken his letter. — Come, lords, away. —

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day.

[Exeunt Princess and Train.

Boyet.

Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?

Rosaline.

Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet.

Ay, my continent of beauty.
Rosaline. Why, she that bears the bow.

Finely put off! Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck, if horns that year mis-
Finely put on! [carry.

Rosaline. Well, then, I am the shooter.

Boyet. And who is your deer?

Rosaline. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come not Finely put on, indeed! — [near.

Maria. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower. Have I hit her now?

Rosaline. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Rosaline. Thou cannot hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou cannot hit it, my good man.

Boyet. As I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can.

[Exit Rosaline and Katherine.

Costard. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did fit it!

Maria. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit [it].

Boyet. A mark! O mark but that mark: a mark, says my lady, [may be.
Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at, if it

Maria. Wode o' the bow hand: I'faith your hands is not.

Costard. Indeed, a' must shoot nearer, or he'll never hit the clout.

Boyet. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

Costard. Then will she get the upshot by clearing the pin.

Maria. Come, come, you talk greedily; your lips grow sou.

Costard. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir: challenge her to a bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. [Exit Boyet and Maria.

Costard. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown! Lord, lord, how the ladies and I have put him down! [vulgar wit! O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incoy When it comes so smoothly off, so obscurely, as it were, so fit. [man! Armado o' the one side, — O, a most dainty

To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan! — [a' will swear I — To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly And his page o' the other side, that handful of Ah, heavens, it is a most pathetical nit! [wit! Sola, sola! [Shouting within. [Exit Costard.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Nathaniel. Very reverend sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Holofernes. The deer was, as you know, sanguis, — in blood; ripe as the pomewater, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of caro, — the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon fallith like a crab, on the face of terra, — the soil, the land, the earth.

Nathaniel. Truly, master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: but sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Holofernes. Sir Nathaniel, hau'd credo.

Dull. 'Twas not a hau'd credo, 'twas a pricket.

Holofernes. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in sia, in way of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination, — after his undressed, unpolluted, unbruised, untrained, unlettered, or, rather, unconfessed fashion, — to insert again my hau'd credo for a deer.

Dull. I said, the deer was not a hau'd credo: 'twas a pricket.

Holofernes. Twice sod simplicity, bis coebris! — O, thou monster ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nathaniel. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eaten paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink; his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts; And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be (Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts that do fructify in us more than he; For as it would ill become me to be vain, in- discreet, or a fool, [him in a school! Holofernes. Dichtymna, good man Dull; Dichtymna, good man Dull.

Dull. What is Dichtymna?

Nathaniel. A title to Paebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Holofernes.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Holofernes.
The moon was a month old when Adam was no more; [five-score.]

Dull.
'Tis true indeed: the collusion holds in the exchange.

Holofernes.
God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull.
And I say the pollution holds in the exchange, for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess kill'd.

Holofernes.
Sir, Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I have call'd the deer the princess kill'd, a pricket.

Nathaniel.
Perge, good master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Holofernes.
I will something affect the letter, for it argues facility.

The precyful princess piecr'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket; [sore with shooting.]

Some say, a sore; but not a sore, till now made

Nathaniel.
A rare talent! Dull.

If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Holofernes.
This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions: these are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pis mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nathaniel.
Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters prof't very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

Holofernes.
Meherele! If their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them; but, vir sapit, qui pauca loquitur. A soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.
Jaquenetta.
God give you good morrow, master person.

Holofernes.
Master person.—quasi pers-on. An if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Costard.
Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshead.

Holofernes.
Of piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of concelt in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaquenetta.

Good master parson, be so good as read me this letter, which I sent unto me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you, read it.

Holofernes.
Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbro.
Ruminat,—and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan! I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

—Venegia, Venegia,

Ay, sir, and very learned.

Holofernes.
You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent: let us supervise the canzonet. Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the elegance, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, canzonet. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jorks of invention? Imitari is nothing: so doth the hound is master, the ape his keeper, the 'tired horse his rider. But damosella, virgin, was this directed to you?

Jaquenetta.

Aye, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Holofernes.
I will overglance the superscription. "To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline." I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto: "Your ladyship's, in all desired employment, Biron." Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, bath miscarried.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king: it may concern
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act 1, Sc. 5.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act iv. Sc. iii.

LOVE'S Costard.

By God, King. I think you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain father saith.

Holofernes.

Sir, tell not me of the father; I do fear colourable colours. But, to return to the verses: did they please you, sir Nathaniel?

Nathaniel.

Marvellous well for the pen.

Holofernes.

I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where if before repast it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention. I beseech you for your society.

Nathaniel.

And thank you too; for society (saith the text) is the happiness of life.

Holofernes.

And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it.—Sir, [To Dull.] I do invite you too: you shall not say me nay: pauce serba. Away I the gentle are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.]

SCENE III. Another part of the same.

Enter Biron, with a paper.

Biron.

The king he is hunting the deer; I am courting myself: they have pitch'd a toil; I am toiling in a pitch—pitch that defiles. Defile? a foul word. Well, set thee down, sorrow for so, they say, the fool saith and so say I, and I the fool. Well proved, wit! By the lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep. Well proved again o' my side! I will not love; if I do, hang me: I' faith, I will not. O! but her eye.—by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her I yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love, and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already: the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweetener fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper: God give him grace to grow!—

[Gets up into a tree.]

Enter the King, with a paper.

King.

Ay me!

Biron. [Aside.]

Shot, by heaven!—Proceed, sweet Cupid: thou hast thump'd him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap.—In faith, secrets!—

King.

So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not To those fresh morning drops upon the rose. As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote [Flour:]

The night of dew that on my cheeks down Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright Through the transparent bosom of the deep, As doth thy face through tears of mine give light; Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep: No drop but as a coach doth carry thee; So ridest thou triumphant in my woe. Do but behold the tears that swell in me, And they thy glory through my grief will show: But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep My tears for glasses, and still make me weep. O queen of queens, how far dost thou excel! No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.

Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes here? [Steps aside.]

Enter Longaville, with a paper.

[Aside.] What, Longaville 1 and reading? listen, ear.

Biron. [Aside.]

Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear! Longaville.

Ay me! I am forsworn.

Biron. [Aside.]

Why, he comes in like a perjurier, wearing papers.

King. [Aside.]

In love, I hope. Sweet fellowship in shame.

Biron. [Aside.]

One drunkard loves another of the name.

Longaville.

Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?

Biron. [Aside.]

I could put thee in comforts: not by two that I know.

Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner-cap of The shape of love's Tyburn, that hangs up simplicity.

Longaville.

I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move. O sweet Maria, empress of my love! These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.

Biron. [Aside.]

O I rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's Disfigure not his slop. [hose:

Longaville.

This same shall go.—

[He reads the sonnet.]

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument, Persuade my heart to this false perjury? Fours for thee broke deserve not punishment. A woman I forswore; but I will prove, Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee: My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love; Thy grace, being gain'd, cures alldisgrace in me. Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is: Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost Eshart this vapour—vow; in thee is: [shine, If broken, then, it is no fault of mine. If by me broke, what fault is not so wise, To lose an oath, to win a paradise?

Biron. [Aside.]

This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity; A green goose, a goddess: pure, pure idolatry. God amend us, God amend we are much out o' the way.

Enter
Enter Dumaine, with a paper.

Longaville.

By whom shall I send this? — Company I stay.

[Steps aside.]

Biron. [Aside.]

All hâd, all hâd: an old infant play.
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedlessly o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O heavens! I have my wish:

Dumaine transform'd four woodcocks in a dish!

Dumaine.

O most divine Kate!

Biron. [Aside.]

O most profane cockcomb!

Dumaine.

By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!

Biron. [Aside.]

By earth, she is not: — corporal; there you lie.

Dumaine.

Her amber hairs for foul have amber quoted.

Biron. [Aside.]

An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.

Dumaine.

As upright as the cedar.

Biron. [Aside.

My love was a child.

As fair as day.

Biron. [Aside.]

Ay, as some days: but then no sun must shine.

Dumaine.

O, that I had my wish!

Longaville. [Aside.]

And I had mine.

King. [Aside.]

And I mine too, good lord!

Biron.

Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?

Dumaine.

I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.

Biron. [Aside.]

A fever in your blood? why, then incline Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!

Dumaine.

Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. [Aside.

Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.

Dumaine.

On a day, alack the day!

Love, whose mouth is ever May,

Spirited blossoms, passing fair,

Playing in the wanton air:

Through the ecstasy leaves the wind,

All unseen, 'gan passage find;

That the lover, sick to death,

Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.

Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;

Air, would I might triumph so!

But alack! my hand is sworn,

'Neer to pluck thee from thy thorn:

'Fou, alack! for youth unmeet,

Youth so apt to pluck a sweet,

Do not call it sin in me,

That I am forsworn for thee;

Dumaine.

Thou for whom Jove would swear

Juno but an Ethelind were;

And deny himself for Jove,

Turning mortal for thy love.

This will I send, and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
Were lovers too! I will, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend, where all alike do dote.

Longaville. [Advancing.]

Dumaine, thy love is far from charity,
That in love's grief desir'd society:
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'heard, and taken napping so.

King. [Advancing.]

Come, sir, you blush; as his your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much:
You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never lay his wreathed arms about
His loving bosom, to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your Saw sights reek from you, noted well your passion:
Ay me! I says one; O Jove! the other cries;
One, her hair was gold, crystal the other's eyes:
You would for paradise break faith and troth;
And Jove for your love would injure an oath.

[To Dumaine.]

What will Biron say, when that he shall hear
Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?
How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it!
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron.

Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.

[Descends from the tree.]

Ah, good my liege, I pray thee pardon me.

Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reproove
These worms for loving, that art most in love?
Your eyes do make no coachees; in your tears There is no certain princess that appears:
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing:
Tush! I none but minstrels like of sonneting.
But are you not ashamed? nay, are you not,
All three of you, to be thus much o'shott?
You three found his mote; the king your mote did
But I a beam do find in each of three. [see;]
O! what a scene of foolery have I seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of tears! O me! with what strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformed to a giant:
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jig,
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys:
Where lies thy grief? O! tell me, good
Dumaine:
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my liege's all about the breast: —
A caudle, ho!

King.

Too bitter is thy jest.

Are we betrayed thus to thy over-view?

Biron.

Not you by me, but I betray'd to you:
I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin.
ACT IV. Sc. III.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

173

To break the vow I am engaged in;
I am betray'd, by keeping company
With men, like men of strange inconstancy.
When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme?
Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time
In pruning me? When shall you hear that I will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
A leg, a limb? —

King.

Soft! Whither away so fast?
A true man, or a thief, that galspos so?

Biron.

I post from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.

Jaquenetta.

God bless the king! —

King.

What present hast thou there?

Costard.

Some certain treason.

King.

What makes treason here?

Costard.

Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King.

If it mar nothing neither,
The treason and you go in peace away together.

Jaquenetta.

I beseech your grace, let this letter be read;
Our parson misdubts it; 'twas treason, he said.

King.

Biron, read it over. [Biron reads the letter.

Where had'st thou it?

Jaquenetta.

Of Costard.

King.

Where had'st thou it?

Costard.

Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

King.

How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it?

Biron.

A toy, my liege, a toy: your grace needs not Fear it.

Longaville.

It did move him to passion, and therefore
Let's hear it.

Dumaine.

It is Biron's writing, and here is his name.

[Picking up the pieces.

Biron.

Ah, you whoreson loggerhead! [To Costard.] you were born to do me shame. —

Guilty, my lord, guilty! I confess, I confess.

King.

What?

Biron.

That you three fools lack'd me, fool, to make Up the mess.

He, he, and you, and you my liege, and I,
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
O I dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dumaine.

Now the number is even.

Biron.

True, true; we are four. —

Will these turtles be gone?

King.

Hence, sirs; away!

Costard.

Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.

Biron.

Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O! let us embrace.
As true we are, as flesh and blood can be:
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;
Young blood doth not obey an old decrees;
We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King.

What, did these rent lines show some love of thine?

Biron.

Did they? quoth you. Who sees the heavenly Rosaline.

That, like a rude and savage man of Jude,
At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
Bows not his vassal head; and, stricken blind,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What peremptory, or wise-sighted eye,
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty?

King.

What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now?
My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon,
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron.

My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron.

O! but for my love, day would turn to night.
Of all complexions the cuir'selevengy
Do meet, as at a fair, In her fair cheek;
Where several worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues, —
Fie, painted rhetoric! O! she needs it not:
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs;
She passes praise; then praise too short doth fit.

A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crust the cradle's infancy.
O! 'tis the sun, that makest all things shine!

King.

By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Biron.

Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.
O! who can-give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair, that is not full so black.

King.

O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night;
And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron.

Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.
O! if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,
It morns, that painting, and usurping hair,
Should ravish doters with a false aspect;
And therefore is she born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the fashion of the days:
For native blood is counted painting now,
And therefore red, that would avoid displeasure,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.

Dumaine.

To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.

Longaville.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act IV. Sc. III.

Longaville.
And since her time are colliers counted bright.

King.
And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack.

Dumaine.
Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Biron.
Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King.
'Twere good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain, I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.

Biron.
I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.

King.
No devil will fright thee then so much as she.

Dumaine.
I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.

Longaville.
Look, here's thy love; my foot and her face see.

Biron.
O! if the streets were paved with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.

Dumaine.
O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies
The street should see, as she walk'd over head.

King.
But what of this? Are we not all in love?

Biron.
O! nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.

Longaville.
Then leave this chat; and, good Biron, now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.

Dumaine.
Ay, marry, there; some fancy for this evil.

Biron.
O! some authority how to proceed;
Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.

Dumaine.
Some salve for perjury.

Biron.
O! tis more than need.

Have at you, then, affection's men at arms.
Consider, what you first did swear unto;
To fast,—to study,—and to see no woman:
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young,
And abstinence engenders maladies.

And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book,
Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look?

For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence,
Without the beauty of a woman's face?
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the Academias,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean
Why, universal plodding prisons up fire.

The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion, and long-during action, tires
The sinewy vigour of the traveller.

Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes,
And study, too, the cause of your vow;
For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are, our learning likewise is:
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
With ourselves,
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O! we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our books;
For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,
In headen contemplation have found out
Such fiery numbers, as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain,
And therefore, finding barren practisers,
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil;
But love, first learned in a lady's eye,
Lives not alone immersed in the brain,
But with the motion of all elements
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye;
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;
Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible.
Than are the tender horns of cocked snails:
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in
For valour is not love a Hercules, [taste.
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as sphinx; as sweet, and musical,
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And, when love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Makes heaven drowsy, and the harmony,
Never burst post on such a pen to write.

'till his ink were temper'd with love's sighs;
O! then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkel still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the Academias,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world,
Else none at all in aught proves excellent;
Thus, fools you were these women to forswear.
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love,
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men,
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women,
Or woman's sake, by whom we men are men.
Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn;
For charity itself fulfils the law,
And who can sever love from charity?

Saint Cupid, then I, and soldiers, to the field!

Biron.
Advance your standards, and upon them, lords!
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advised,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Longaville.
Now to plain-dealing: lay these glozes by.
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King.
And win them too: therefore, let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Biron.
First, from the park let us conduct them
Then, homeward, every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress. In the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For we'll have vales, masques, and merry hours, Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
ACT V.

SCENE I. Another part of the same.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull. Holofernes.

SATIS quod sufficit.

Nathaniel.

I praise God for you, sir; your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without surdry, witty without affectation, audacious without impudence, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse thisgroundom day with a companion of the king’s, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Holofernes.

Novi hominem tanguam te: his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestic, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thra-sonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too perigrinate, as I may call it.

Nathaniel.

A most singular and choice epithet. [Draws out his table-book.

Holofernes.

He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasms, such insolcable and point-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak dout, fine, when he should say, doubt; det, when he should pronounce, debit—d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour vocatur nebour; neighb abominable ne. This is abominable, (which he would call abominable,) it insinuateth me of insanite: ne intelligis domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

Nathaniel.

Laus Deo, bone intelligo.

Holofernes.

Bone? bone, for bene: Priscian a little scratch’d: ‘twill serve.

Enter Armado, Moth, and Costard.

Nathaniel.

Videte quis venit?

Holofernes.

Video, et gaudio.

Armado.

Chirrah!

Holofernes. [To Moth.

Quare Chirrah, not sirrah?

Armado.

Moth.

Men of peace, well encounter’d.

Holofernes, Most military sir, salutation. Moth.

They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

Costard.

O! they have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatis; thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Moth.

Peace! the peal begins.

Armado.

Monsieur, [To Holofernes:] are you not letter’d?

Moth.

Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book.—What is a, b, spelt backward with the horn on his head?

Holofernes.

Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth.

Ba! most silly sheep, with a horn.—You hear his learning.

Holofernes.

Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Moth.

The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Holofernes.

I will repeat them, a, e, i.—

Moth.

The sheep: the other two conclude it; o, u. Armado.

Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick renew of wit! snip, snap, quick and home: it rejoiceth my intellect; true wit!

Moth.

Offer’d by a child to an old man; which is wit-old.

Holofernes.

What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth.

Horns.

Holofernes.

Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip thy gig.

Moth.

Lend me thy horn to make one, and I will whip about thy infamy circumscribed. A gig of a cuckold’s horn!

Costard.

An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou half-penny purser of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O! an the heavens were so pleased, that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst thou make me. Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers’ ends, as they say.

Holofernes.

O! I smell false Latin; dunghill for unguem.

Armado.

Arts-man, præambula: we will be singed from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Holofernes.

Or mons, the hill.

Armado.

At your sweet pleasure for the mountain.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.  Act v. Sc. 1

SCENE 11. Another part of the same. Before the Princess's Pavilion.

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria.

Princess.

Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in:
A lady well'd about with diamonds —
Look you, what I have from the loving king.

Rosaline.

Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Princess.

Nothing but this? yes; as much love in rhyme,
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper,
Write on both sides the leaf, margin and all,
That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Rosaline.

That was the way to make his god-head wax;
For he hath been five thousand years a boy.

Katharine.

Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Rosaline.

You'll ne'er be friends with him: a' kill'd your sister.

Katharine.

He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;
And so she died: had she been light, like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might a' been a grandam ere she died;
And so may you, for a light heart lives long.

Rosaline.

What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Katharine.

A light condition in a beauty dark.

Rosaline.

We need more light to find your meaning out.

Katharine.

You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;
Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Rosaline.

Look, what you do, you do it still I' the dark.

Katharine.

So do not you, for you are a light wench.

Rosaline.

Moth.

Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Armado.

Shall I tell you a thing?

Holofernes.

We attend.

Armado.

We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. I beseech you, follow.

Holofernes.

Vis! — Goodman Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull.

Nor understood none neither, sir.

Holofernes.

Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull.

I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Holofernes.

Most dull, honest Dull. To our sport, away! [Exeunt.

Holofernes.

Sirs, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posterior of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Holofernes.

The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well cull'd, chose; sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir; I do assure.

Armado.

Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend. — For what is inward between us, let it pass.—I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy: I beseech thee, apparel thy head: — and among other important and most serious designs, — and of great import indeed, too,— but let that pass; — for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus daily with my excrement, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable: some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel; that hath seen the world; but let that pass. — The very all of all is, — but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, — that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crav your assistance.

Holofernes.

Sir, you shall present before her the nine Worthies. — Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance, — the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman,—before the princess, I say, none so fit as to present the nine Worthies.

Nathaniel.

Where will you find men worthy enough to present them!

Holofernes.

Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabaeus; this swain, (because of his great limb or joint,) shall pass Pompey the great; the page, Hercules.

Armado.

Pardon, sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Holofernes.

Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth.

An excellent device I so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, " Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!" that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Armado.

For the rest of the Worthies? —

Holofernes.

I will play three myself.

Armado.

Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Armado.

Shall I tell you a thing?

Holofernes.

We attend.

Armado.

We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. I beseech you, follow.

Holofernes.

Vis! — Goodman Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull.

Nor understood none neither, sir.

Holofernes.

Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull.

I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Holofernes.

Most dull, honest Dull. To our sport, away! [Exeunt.

Katharine.

A light condition in a beauty dark.

Rosaline.

We need more light to find your meaning out.

Katharine.

You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff; Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Rosaline.

Look, what you do, you do it still I' the dark.

Katharine.

So do not you, for you are a light wench.
As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd,
Hath wisdom's warrant, and the help of school,
And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Rosaline.
The blood of youth burns not with such excess,
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Marla.
Folly in fools bears not so strong a note,
As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove by wit worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Princess.
Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet.
O ! I am stabb'd with laughter. Where's her grace?

Princess.

Thy news, Boyet?

Boyet.
Prepare, madam, prepare!
Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace. Love doth approach disguise'd,
Armed in arguments: you'll be surpris'd.
Muster your wits; stand in your own defence,
Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Princess.

Saint Dennis to saint Cupid! What are they,
That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say.

Boyet.

Under the cool shade of a sycamore,
I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour,
When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold addrest
The king and his companions: warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And overheard what you shall over hear;
That by and by disguis'd they will be here.
Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath conj'd his embassage:
Action, and accent, did they teach him there;
"Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear."
And ever and anon they made a doubt
Presence majestical would put him out;
"For," quoth the king, "an angel shalt thou see;
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously."
The boy replied, "An angel is not evil;
I should have feared her, had she been a devil."
With that all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.
One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd and swore
A better speech was never spoke before:
Another, with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd "Via! we will do, come what will come;"
[well:]
The third he caper'd, and cried, "All goes
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.
With that, they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter, so profound,
That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Princess.

But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boyet.

They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus,—
Like Muscovites, or Russians: as I guess,
Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance;
And every one his love-feat will advance
Unto his several mistress: which they'll know
By favours several which they did bestow.
Princess. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd; For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd. And not a man of them shall have the grace, Despite of suit, to see a lady's face. —
Hold, Rosaline; this favour shall thou wear, And then the king will court thee for his dear: Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Biron take me for Rosaline. —[loves And change you favours, too; so shall your Woo contrary, deceived by these removes.
Rosaline. Come on then; wear the favours most in sight.
Katharine. But in this changing what is your intent?
Princess. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs: They do it but in mocking merriment; And mock for mock is only my intent. Their several counsels they unbosom shall To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal, Upon the next occasion that we meet, With visages display'd, to talk, and greet.
Rosaline. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?
Princess. No; to the death, we will not move a foot: Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace; But, while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.
Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart, And quite divorce his memory from his part.
Princess. Therefore I do it; and, I make no doubt, The rest will never come in, if he be out. There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'erthrown; I'll make theirs ours, and ours none but our own: So shall we stay, mocking intended game; And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.
[Trumpets sound within.
Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd, the maskers come. [The Ladies mask.
Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain, in Russian habits, and masked; Moth, Musicians, and Attendants.
Moth. "All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!"
Biron. Beauties no richer than rich taffeta.
Moth. "A holy parcel of the fairest dames, [The Ladies turn their backs to him. That ever turn'd their backs to mortal views!"
Biron. "Their eyes," villain, "their eyes."
Moth. "That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views! Out—"
Boyet. True; "out," indeed.
Moth. "Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouch-Not to behold"—
Biron. [safe "Once to behold," rogue.
Moth. "Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes, —with your sun-beamed eyes"—
Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it daughter-beamed eyes.
Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.
Biron. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue.
Rosaline. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet. If they do speak our language, 'tis our will That some plain man recount their purposes. Know what they would.
Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.
Rosaline. What would they, say they?
Boyet. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.
Rosaline. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.
Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.
King. Say to her, we have measured many miles, To tread a measure with her on this grass.
Boyet. They say, that they have measured many a mile, To tread a measure with you on this grass.
Rosaline. It is not so: ask them how many inches Is in one mile? if they have measured many, The measure then of one is easily told.
Boyet. If, to come hither you have measured miles, And many miles, the princess bids you tell, How many inches do fill up one mile.
Biron. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps.
Boyet. She hears herself.
Rosaline. How many weary steps, Of many weary miles you have o'ergone, Are number'd in the travel of one mile?
Biron. We number nothing that we spend for you: Our duty is so rich, so infinite, That we may do it still without accompt. Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face, That we, like savages, may worship it.
Rosaline. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do! Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine (Those clouds removed) upon our watery eye.
Rosaline. O, vain petitioner! I beg a greater matter; Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.
The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen As is the razor's edge invisible, Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen; Above the sense of sense, so sensible. Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings, Swiftier things. Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, Not one word more, my maids: break off, break off. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff! Farewell, mad wenches: you have simple wits.

[Exeunt King, Lords, Moth, Music, and Attendants.]
Princess.

Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovites.—
Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

Boyet.

Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.

Roseline.

Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross; fat, fat.

Princess.

O, poverty in wit, klugly-poor flout! [night,

Will they not, think you, hang themselves to—

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?

This pert Biron was out of countenance quite.

Roseline.

They were all in lamentable cases

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Princess.

Biron did swear himself out of all suit.

Maria.

Dumaine was at my service, and his sword:

No point, quoth I: my servant straight was mute.

Katharine.

Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;

And trow you, what he call'd me?

Princess.

Katharine.

Yes, in good faith.

Princess.

Go, sickness as thou art!

Roseline.

Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.

But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.

Princess.

And quick Biron hath plighted faith to me.

Katharine.

And Longaville was for my service born.

Maria.

Dumaine is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet.

Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear.

Immediately they will again be here.

Katharine.

In their own shapes; for it can never be,

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Princess.

Will they return?

Boyet.

They will, they will, God knows;

And leap for joy, though they are lame with brows:

[pair,

Therefore, change favours; and, when they re-

Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.

Princess.

How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.

Boyet.

Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud:

Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds or roses blown.

Princess.

Avant perplexity! What shall we do,

If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Roseline.

Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,

Let's mask them still, as well, known, as dis-guis'd.

Let us complain to them what fools were here,

Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder, what they were, and to what end

Their shallow shows, and prologue vilely penn'd

And their rough carriages so ridiculous,

Should be presented at our tent to us.

Boyet.

Ladies, withdraw; the gallants are at hand.

Princess.

Whip to our tents, as roses run over land.

[Exeunt Princess, Rosaline, Katharine, and

Maria.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Du-maine, in their proper habits.

King.

Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?

Boyet.

Gone to her tent: please it your majesty,

Command me any service to her thither?

King.

That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet.

I will; and so will she, I know, my lord.

[Exit.

Biron.

This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons peas,

And utters it again when God doth please.

He is wit's pedler, and retails his wares

At wakes, and wassalls, meetings, markets, fairs;

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant pins the wenchers on his sleeve:

Id'd he been Adam, he had tempted Eve.

A' can carve too, and lisp; why, this is he,

That kis'd away his hand in courtesy:

This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms: nay, he can sing

A mean most meanly; and, in usherring,

Mend him who can: the ladies call him, sweet;

The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.

This is the flower that smiles on every one,

To show his teeth as white as whales bone;

And consciences, that will not die in debt,

Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.

[Enter the Princess, ushered by Boyet; Rosalline, Maria, Katharine, and Attendants.

Biron.

See where it comes I— Behaviour, what wert

thou,

[now?

Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou

King.

All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Princess.

Fair, in all hall, is fowl, as I conceive.

King.

Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Princess.

Then wish me better: I will give you leave.

King.

We came to visit you, and purpose now

To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it, then.

Princess.

This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:

Nor God, nor I, delight in perfur'd men.

King.

Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Princess.
Act v. Sc. ii.  LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Princess.
You nick-name virtue; vice you should have spoke,
For virtue's office never breaks men's truith.
Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unassuiled lilly, I protest.
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heavenly oats, vow'd with integrity.

King.
O! you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited; much to our shame.

Princess.
Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear:
We have had pastimes here, and pleasant game.
A mess of Russians left us but of late.

King.
How, madam! Russians?
Trim gallants, full of courtship, and of state.

Rosaline.
Madam, speak true—It is not so, my lord:
My lady (to the manner of the days)
In courtesy gives undeserving praise.
We four, indeed, confronted were with four
In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,
And talk'd aspace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fam have drink.

Biron.
This jest is dry to me.—Gentle sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish when we meet.
With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye,
By light we lose light: your capacity
Is of that nature, that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.

Rosaline.
This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye,—

Biron.
I am a fool, and full of poverty.

Rosaline.
But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Biron.
O! I am yours, and all that I possess.

Rosaline.
All the fool mine?

Biron.
I cannot give you less.

Rosaline.
Which of the visors was it, that you wore?

Biron.
Where? when? what visor? why demand you this?

Rosaline.
There, then, that visor; that superfluous case,
That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.

King.
We are descried: they'll mock us now downright.

Dumaine.
Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.

Princess.
Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.
ACT V. SC. 11.

Princess. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Princess. Peace! peace! forbear:
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Princess. I will; and therefore keep it.—Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear?

Rosaline.

Madam, he swore, that he did hold me dear
As precious eye-sight, and did value me
Above this world: adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Princess. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.

King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my troth,
I never swore this lady such an oath.

Rosaline.

By heaven, you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith, and this, the princess I did give:
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.

Princess. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;
And lord Biron, I think him, is my dear.—
What! will you have me, or your pearl again?

Biron. Neither of either! I remit both twain.—
I see the trick on't:—here was a consent,
Knowing aforesaid of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy. [zany,
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight; some Dick, [trick

That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the
To make my lady laugh when she's disposed,
Told our intents before; which once disclosed,
The ladies did change favours, and then we,
Following the signs, wo'd but the sign of she.
Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn,—in will, and error.
Much upon this it is:—and might not you

[To Boyet.

Forestal our sport, to make us thus untruse?
Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
You put our page out: go, you are allow'd;
Dye when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye,
Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.

Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace! I have done.

Enter Costard.

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.

Costard. O Lord, sir, they would know,
Whether the three Worthies shall come in, or no.

Biron. What, are there but three?

Costard. No, sir; but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.

Biron. And three times thrice is nine.

Costard. Not so, sir; under correction, sir, I hope, it is not so.

Biron. Is not nine.

Costard. Under correction, sir, we know whereunto it doth amount.

Biron. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.

Costard. O Lord! sir, it were pity you should get your living, by reckoning, sir.

Biron. How much is it?

Costard. O Lord! sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereunto it doth amount: for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man,—'en one poor man.—Pompius the great, sir.

Biron. Art thou one of the Worthies?

Costard. It pleased them, to think me worthy of Pompius the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.

Biron. Go, bid them prepare.

Costard. We will turn it finely off, sir: we will take some care.

[Exit Costard.

King. Biron, they will shame us; let them not approach.

Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis some policy [his company.
To have one show worse than the king's and King. I say, they shall not come.

Princess. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule you now.
That sport best pleases, that doth least know
how:

Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Dye in the zeal of them which it presents,
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth;
When great things labouring perish in their Biron. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Armado.

Armado. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breaths, as will utter a brace of [Armado converses with the King, and de-

Princess. livers a paper to him.

Armado. Doth this man serve God?

Biron. Why ask you?

Princess.
Princess.

He speaks not like a man of God his making.

Armado.

That's all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch; for, I protest, the school-master is exceeding fantastical: too, too, vain; too, too, vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna della guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal companion!

[Exit Armado.]

King.

Here is like to be a good present of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the great; the parish curate, Alisander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Maccabees. And if these four Worthies in their first show thrive, these five. These four will change habits, and present the

Biron.

There is five in the first show.

King.

You are deceived; 'tis not so.

Biron.

The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the boast, and the boy:— Abate throw at novum, and the whole world again. Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his

King.

The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

Enter Costard armed, for Pompey.

Costard.

"I Pompey am,——"

Boyet.

You lie, you are not he.

Enter I Pompey am,——

Boyet.

With libbard's head on knee.

Biron.

Well said, old mocker: I must needs be friends with thee.

Enter I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big,——

Dumaine.

The great.

Costard.

It is great, sir; — "Pompey surnam'd the great; That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my arms to sweat: [by chance. And travelling along this coast 1 here am come And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France." : I had done. If your ladyship would say, "Thanks, Pompey,"

Princess.

Great thanks, great Pompey.

Costard.

'Tis not so much worth; but, I hope, I was perfect. I made a little fault in, "great."

Biron.

My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Sir Nathaniel armed, for Alexander.

Nathaniel.

"When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;" [querie might: By east, west, north, and south, I spread my con-

My scutchecoon plain declares, that I am Al-

Biron.

Princess.

Your nose says no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Biron.

Your nose smells, no, in this, most tender-smelling knight.

Princess.

The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Alexander.

Nathaniel.

"When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;" —

Boyet.

Most true; 'tis right: you were so, Alisander.

Biron.

Pompey the great,——

Costard.

Your servant, and Costard.

Biron.

Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

Costard.

O! sir [To Nathaniel] you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror. You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax: he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afoard to speak? run away for shame, Alisander. [Nathaniel retires.] There, an't shall please you: a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd! He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler: but, for Alisander, alas! you see, how 'tis; — a little o' perted. — But there are Worthies a coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Princess.

Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Holofernes armed, for Judas, and Moth armed.

Holofernes.

"Great Hercules is presented by this imp, Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed centis; And, when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp. Thus did he strange serpents in his manus. Qoniam, he seemeth in minority, Ergo, I come with this apology. Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish."

[Exit Moth.]

Holofernes.

"Judas I am," —

Dumaine.

A Judas!

Holofernes.

Not Iscarath, sir.---"Judas I am, sycip'd Maccabes."

Dumaine.

Judas Maccabes elipt is plain Judas.

Biron.

A kissing traitor.—How art thou prov'd Judas?

Holofernes.

"Judas I am," —

Dumaine.

The more shame for you, Judas.

Holofernes.

What mean you, sir?

Boyet.

To make Judas hang himself.

Holofernes.

Begin, sir: you are my elder.
LOVE’S LABOUR’S LOST.

Act V. Sc. ii.

Biron. Well follow’d: Judas was hang’d on an elder.

Holofernes. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face.

Holofernes. What is this?

Boyet. A citron head.

Dumaine. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death’s face in a ring.

Longaville. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pummel of Caesar’s faulchion.

Dumaine. The carv’d-bone face on a flask.

Biron. S. George’s half-cheek in a brooch.

Dumaine. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer.

And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance.

Holofernes. You have put me out of countenance.

Biron. False: we have given thee faces.

Holofernes. But you have out-fac’d them all.

Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dumaine. For the latter end of his name.

Biron. For the ass to the Jude? give it him:—Judas, away.

Holofernes. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble.

Princess. Alas, poor Maccabeus, how hath he been baited!

Enter Armado armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes Hector in arms.

Dumaine. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-timber’d.

Longaville. His leg is too big for Hector’s.

Dumaine. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.

Biron. This cannot be Hector.

Dumaine. He’s a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Armado. “The armipotent Mars, of lances the al-

Gave Hector a gift, —” [mighty,

Dumaine. A gift nutmeg.

Biron. A lemon.

Longaville. Stuck with cloves.

Dumaine. No, cloven,

Armado. Peace!

“ The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,

Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;

A man so breath’d, that certain he would fight,

From morn till night, out of his pavilion.

I am that flower,—”

Dumaine. That mint.

Longaville. That columbine.

Armado. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Longaville. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.

Dumaine. Ay, and Hector’s a greyhound.

Armado. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten: sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried: when he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing. [Biron whispers Costard.

Princess. Speak, brave Hector: we are much delighted.

Armado. I do adore thy sweet grace’s slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot.

Dumaine. He may not by the yard.

Armado. “This Hector far surmounted Hannibal.”

Costard. The party is gone: fellow Hector, she is gone;

she is two months on her way.

Armado. What meanest thou?

Costard. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away: she’s quick; the child brags in her belly already: ’tis yours.

Armado. Dost thou infamouze me among potentates? Thou shalt die.

Costard. Then shall Hector be whipp’d for Jaquenetta that is quick by him, and hang’d for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Boyet.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

ACT V. SC. II.

Dumaine.

Most rare Pompey!

Renowned Pompey!

Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the huge

Dumaine.

Hector trembles.

Pompey is moved.—More Aes, more Aes! stir them on! stir them on!

Dumaine.

Hector will challenge him.

Ay, if a' have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.

Armado.

By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Costard.

I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man: I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword.—I pray you, let me borrow your arms again.

Dumaine.

Room for the incensed Worthies!

Costard.

I'll do it in my shirt.

Dumaine.

Most resolute Pompey!

Moth.

Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the contest? What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Armado.

Gentlemen, and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt.

Dumaine.

You may not deny it: Pompey hath made the challenge.

Armado.

Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron.

What reason have you for't?

Armado.

The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt. I go woolward for penance.

Boyet.

True, and it was enjoind him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none, but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's, and that a' wears next his heart for a favour.

Enter Monsieur Mercade, a Messenger.

Mercade.

God save you, madam.

Princess.

Welcome, Mercade.

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mercade.

I am sorry, madam, for the news I bring is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Princess.

Dead, for my life.

Mercade.

Even so: my tale is told.

Biron.

Worthies, away! The scene begins to cloud.

Armado.

For mine own part, I breathe free breath. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

[Exeunt Worthies.

King.

How fares your majesty?

Princess.

Broyt, prepare: I will away to-night.

King.

Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.

Princess.

Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious lords, For all your fair endeavours; and, entreat, Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouc safe In your rich wisdom to excuse, or hide, The liberal opposition of our spirits: If over-boldly we have borne ourselves In the converse of breath, your gentleness Was guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord! A heavy heart bears not a bumble tongue. Excuse me so, coming too short of thanks For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King.

The extreme parts of time extremely form All causes to the purpose of his speed; And often, at his very loose, decides That which long process could not arbitrate: And though the mourning brow of progeny Forbid the smiling courtesy of love The holy suit which is so fair it would convince; Yet, since love's argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it [lost From what it purpos'd: since, to wall friends Is not by much so wholesome, profitable, As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Princess.

I understand you not: my griefs are double.

Biron.

Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;

And by these badges understand the king. For your fair sakes have we neglected time, Play'd soul play with our oaths: your beauty, ladies, Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours Even to the opposed end of our intents; And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,— As love is full of unbecitting straits: All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain; Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye, Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms, Varying in subjects, as the eye doth roll To every varied object in his glance: Which party-coated presence of loose love Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes, Have misbecome our oaths and gravities, Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults, Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies, Our love being yours, the error that love makes Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false; By being once false for ever to be true To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you; And even that falsehood, in itself a sin, Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace.

Princess.

We have receiv'd your letters full of love; Your favours, the ambassadors of love; And, in our maiden council, rated them At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy, As bombast, and as lining to the time. But more devout than this, in our respects Have we not been; and therefore met your In their own fashion, like a merriment. [loves

Dumaine.

Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest.

Longaville.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

ACT V. SC. 11.

Longaville.

So did our looks.

Rosaline.

We did not quote them so.

King.

Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Princess.

A time, methinks, too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your grace is perf’r’d much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this. —
If for my love (as there is no such cause)
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about their annual reckoning.
If this austere insensible life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood;
If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thin weeds,
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial, and last love;
Then, at the expiration of the year, [deserts,
Come challenge me, challenge me by these
And by this virgin palm, now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
My woful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the tears of lamentation,
For the remembrance of my father’s death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part,
Neither intituled in the other’s heart.

King.

If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye.
Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast.

Biron.

And what to me, my love? and what to me?

Rosaline.

You must be purged too, your sins are rank:
You are attaint with faults and perjury;
Therefore, if you my favour mean to get,
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dumaine.

But what to me, my love? but what to me?

Katherine.

A wife! — A beard, fair health, and honesty;
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dumaine.

O! I shall say, I thank you, gentle wife?

Katherine.

Not so, my lord. A twelvemonth and a day
I’ll mark no words that smooth-fac’d wooers say:
Come when the king doth to my lady come,
Then, if I have much love, I’ll give you some.

Dumaine.

I’ll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Katherine.

Yet swear not, lest you be forsworn again.

Longaville.

What says Maria?

Maria.

At the twelvemonth’s end,
I’ll change my black gown for a faithful friend.

Longaville.

I’ll stay with patience; but the time is long.

Maria.

The liker you: few taller are so young.

Biron.

Studies my lady? mistress, look on me:
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for thy love.

Rosaline.

Oft have I heard of you, my lord Biron,
Before I saw you, and the world’s large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks;
Full of comparisons and wondring flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute,
That lie within the mercy of your wit:
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain,
And, therewithal, to win me, if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won, [day,
You shall this twelvemonth term, from day to day
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Biron.

To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
It cannot be; it is impossible:
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Rosaline.

Why, that’s the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.
A jest’s prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
Dear’d with the clannery of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withal;"But, if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your reformation.

Biron.

A twelvemonth? well, befal what will befal,
I’ll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Princess.

Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave.

[To the king.

King.

No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Biron.

Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
Jack hath not Jilt: these ladies’ courtesy
Might well have made our sport a comedy.

King.

Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
And then ‘twill end.

Biron.

That’s too long for a play.

Enter Armado.

Armado.

Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

Princess.

Was not that Hector?

Dumaine.

The worthy knight of Troy.

Armado.

I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vowed to Jocucento to hold the pledge for your sweet love three years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? It should have followed in the end of our show.

King.

Call them forth quickly: we will do so.

Armado.
I.

This is Our MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S WEDDING.

Enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth, Costard, and others.

This side is Hemens, winter; this Ver, the spring; the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

Song.

Spring.

When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he;
Cuckoo,
Cuckoo, cuckoo, — O word of fear!
Unpleasing to a married ear.

II.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he;
Cuckoo,
Cuckoo, cuckoo, — O word of fear!
Unpleasing to a married ear.

Winter.

When twixt the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the starting owl,
To-whoo,
Tu-whit, to-whoo, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

IV.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drouns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marilan's nose looks red and raw;
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the starting owl,
To-whoo,
Tu-whit, to-whoo, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Armado.

The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way: we, this way.

Exeunt.

---

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

Dramatis Personae.

Theseus, Duke of Athens.
Egeus, Father to Hermia.
Lysander, in love with Hermia.
Demetrius, in love with Hermia.
Philostrate, Master of the Revels to Theseus.
Quince, a Carpenter.
Snug, a Joiner.
Bottom, a Weaver.
Flute, a Bellows-mender.
Snout, a Tinker.
Starveling, a Tailor.
Hippolita, Queen of the Amazons.
Hermia, in love with Lysander.
Helena, in love with Demetrius.
Oberon, King of the Fairies.
Titania, Queen of the Fairies.
Puck, or Robin-Goodfellow.
Peas-blossom, Cobweb,
Moth,
Mustard-seed,
Pyramus,
Thistle,
Wall,
Moonshine,
Lion,
Other Fairies attending their King and Queen.
Attendants on Theseus and Hippolita.

Scene 1. Athens. A Room in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, Philostrate, and Attendants.

Now, fair Hippolita, our nuptial hour

Dawns on space: four happy days bring in Another moon; but, oh, methinks, how slow

This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame, or a dowager,
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hippolita.

Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights;
Four nights will quickly dream away the time;
And then the moon, like to a silver bow
New bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.

Theseus.
Go, Philostrate.
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth:
Turn melancholy forth to funerals.
The pale companion is not for our pomp.—
[Exit Philostrate.

Hippolyta. I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus, with his daughter Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Egeus.
Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!

Theseus.
Thanks, good Egeus: what's the news with thee?

Egeus.
Full of vexation come I; with complaint
Against my child, my daughter Hermia.—
Stand forth, Demetrius.—My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.—
Stand forth, Lysander;—and, my gracious duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child;
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
And interchanging's love-token's with my child:
Thou hast by moon-light at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy (feits,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gauds, con-Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweet-meat (messengers
Of strong prevailment in unharden'd youth;)
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;
Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness.—And, my gracious duke,
Be it so, she will not here, before your grace,
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens,
As she is mine, I may dispose of her,
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.

Theseus.
What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair maid,
To you your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax,
By him Imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Hermia.
So is Lysander.

Theseus.
In himself he is;
But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

Hermia.
I would, my father look'd but with my eyes!

Theseus.
Rather, your eyes must with his judgment look.

Hermia.
I do entreat your grace to pardon me,
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty,
In such a presence here, to plead my thoughts;
But I beseech your grace, that I may know

The worst that may befal me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

Theseus.
Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires;
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun,
For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life.
Dancing faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthly happier is the rose distill'd,
Than that which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.

Hermia.
So well I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Here I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

Theseus.
Take time to pause: and by the next new moon,
The sealing-day betwixt my love and me
For everlasting bond of fellowship,
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your father's will,
Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would;
Or on Diana's altar to protest,
For aye, austerity and single life.

Demetrius.
Relent, sweet Hermia;—and, Lysander, yield
Thy craz'd title to my certain right.

Lysander.
You have your father's love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.

Egeus.
Scrornful Lysander! true, he hath my love,
And what is mine my love shall render him;
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lysander.
I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd;—my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd;
(If not with vantage,) as Demetrius;
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry.
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

Theseus.
I must confess, that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus: you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.—
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will,
Or else the law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.—
Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?—
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along.
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial, and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Egeus.
Enter Helena.

Helena.

God speed fair Helena! Whither away?

Helena.

Call you me fair? that fair again usay.

Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!

Your eyes are love-stars, and your tongue's sweet air

More tuneful than lark to shepherd's ear,

When wheat is green, when hatchow buds appear.

Sickness is catching: O, were favour so!

Your words I catch, fair Hermia; ere I go,

My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye,

My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.

Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,

The rest I'll give to be to you translated.

O! teach me how you look, and with what art

You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.

Hermia.

I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Helena.

O, that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill!

Hermia.

I give him curses, yet he gives me love.

Helena.

O, that my prayers could such affection move!

Hermia.

The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Helena.

The more I love, the more he bateth me.

Hermia.

His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.

Helena.

None, but your beauty: would that fault were mine!

Hermia.

Take comfort: he no more shall see my face;

Lysander and myself will fly this place.—

Before the time I did Lysander see,

Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me:

O then, what graces in my love do dwell,

That he hath turn'd a heaven into hell!

Lysander.

Helen, to your minds we will unfold

To-morrow night when Phebe doth behold

Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,

Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass.

(A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal),

Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.

Hermia.

And in the word, where often you and I

Upon faint primrose-beds were wont to lie,

Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet,

There my Lysander and myself shall meet;

And thence, from Athens, turn away our eyes,

To seek new friends and stranger companies.

Farewell, sweet playfellow: pray thou for us,

And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius! —

Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight

From lovers' food, till morrow deep midnight.

Lysander.

I will, my Hermia. — Helena, adieu:

As you on him, Demetrius dote on you.

[Exit Hermia.]

[Exit Lysander.]

Helena.

How happy some, o'er other some can be!

Through Athens I am thought as fair as she;

But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so;

He will not know what all but he do know:

And
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities.
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpose to form and dignity.
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind;
Nor hath love's mind of any judgment taste;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unheedy haste;
And therefore is love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.

As wagish boys in game themselves forswear,
So the boy love is perjur'd every where;
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eye,
He half'd down oaths that he was only mine;
And when this hall some heat from Hermia's sight;
Then to the wood will he, to-morrow night,
Pursue her; and for this intelligence
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither, and back again.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A Room in a Cottage. Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quince.

All our company here?

Bottom.

You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quince.

Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interior before the dukes and duchess on his wedding-day at night.

Bottom.

First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors, and so grow to a point.

Quince.

Marry, our play is—The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bottom.

A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll. Masters, spread yourselves.

Quince.

Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bottom.

Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quince.

You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bottom.

What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quince.

A lover, that kills himself most gallant for love.

Bottom.

That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms; I will con- dole in some measure. To the rest:—yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to bear a cat in, to make all split.

"The raging rocks,
"And shivering shocks,
"Shall break the locks
"Of prison-gates:"

Quince.

Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flute.

Here, Peter Quince.

Quince.

You must take Thisby on you.

Flute.

What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quince.

It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flute.

Nay, faith, let me not play a woman: I have a beard coming.

Quince.

That's all one. You shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bottom.

An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too.

I'll speak in a monstrous little voice:—
"Thine, Thisne—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear! I thy Thisby dear, and lady dear!"

Quince.

No, no; you must play Pyramus, and, Flute, you Thisby.

Bottom.

Well, proceed.

Quince.

Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Starveling.

Here, Peter Quince.

Quince.

Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout.

Here, Peter Quince.

Quince.

You, Pyramus's father; myself, Thisby's father.—Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part;—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug.

Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quince.

You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bottom.

Let me play the lion too. I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me: I will roar, that I will make the duke say, "Let him roar again: let him roar again."

Quince.

An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shrill; and that were enough to hang us all.

All.

That would hang us, every mother's son.

Bottom.

I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us, but I will aggrava-

190 "And Phileus' ear
"Shall shine from far,
"And make and mar
"The foolish fairest."

This was lofty!—Now name the rest of the players. —This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quince.

Bottom.

Pyramus, the gardener.

Pyramus.

Here, Peter Quince.

Quince.

In the role of Pyramus.

Quince.

This was my turn. Now, Thisby.

Quince.

I take it; and I'll to-morrow night play to your hearing.

Quince.

This is my play, Quince. We have our parts quite.

as any sucking dove: I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale.

Quince.
You can play no part but Pyramus; for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man, a proper man, as one shall see in a summer’s day, a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore, you must needs play Pyramus.

Well, I will undertake it. What beast were I best to play it in?

Quince.
Why, what you will.

[Enter Oberon and Titania from opposite sides.]

Oberon.
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild;
But she, perforce, withholds the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy:
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen,
But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fairy.
Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite, Call’d Robin Good-Fellow. Are you not he,
That frights the mailus of the villagery;
Skims milk, and sometimes labours in the quern,
And footless makes the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime makes the drink to bear no harm;
Misleads night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good
Are not you he? [Luck.

Puck.
Thou speak’st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a silly foal:
And sometime lurk I in a gossip’s bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither’d dew-lap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And “taller” cries, and falls into a couch;
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and laugh, [Swear.
And waxen in their mirth, and sneeze, and
A merrier hour was never wasted there.—
But room, Fairy: here comes Oberon.

Fairy.
And here my mistress.—Would that he were gone!

Enter Oberon, from one side, with his train, and Titania, from the other, with hers.

Oberon.
Ill me by moon-light, proud Titania.

Titania.
What, jealous Oberon! Fairy, skip hence:
I have forsworn his bed and company.

Oberon.
Tarry, rash wanton. Am not I thy lord?

Titania.
Then, I must be thy lady; but I know
When thou hast stol’n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versings love
To amorous Philida. Why art thou here, come from the farthest steep of India,
But that, forsooth, the bounding Amazon,
Your buskin’d mistress and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded? and you come to give their bed joy and prosperity.

Oberon.
How canst thou thus, for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering
From Perigenia, whom he ravished? [night
And make him with fair Eglé break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiope?

Titania.
These are the forgeries of jealousy:—
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or on the beached margin of the sea,
That since our zinglets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawl thou hast disturb'd our sport.
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs; which, falling in the land,
Have every pelting river made so proud,
That they have overborne their continents:—
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweet; and the green corn
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrain flock:
The nine men's Morris is fill'd up with mud;
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread are undistinguishable:
The human mortals want their winter here:
No night is now with hymn or carol blest;
Therefore the moon, the governor of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatic diseases do abound:
And thorough this distemper, we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall on the fresh lap of the crimson rose;
And on old Hygen's thin and icy crown,
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set. The spring, the summer,
The childing autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted livery; and the 'marked world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which.
And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our digestion:
We are their parents and original.

Do you amend it then; it lies in you.
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.

Set your heart at rest:
The faery land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a votress of my order:
And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
Full often hath she gospel'd by my side,
And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
Marking th'embarked traders on the flood;
When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive,
And grow big-bellied, with the wanton wind;
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait
Following, (her womb, then rich with my young sire)
Would imitate, and sail upon the land,
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And for her sake I do rear up her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.

How long within this wood intend you stay?

Perchance, till after Theseus' wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.
MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

Act 2, Sc 2.

(From the original picture in the collection of Mr. Augustus Egg.)
ACT II. SC. II. MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

The more you best me, I will fawn on you: Use me but as your spaniel, spur me, strike me, Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave, Unworthy as I am, to follow you. What worse place can I beg in your love, (And you know, no place of more respect with me,) Than to be used as you use your dog?

Demetrius.
Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit, For I am sick when I do look on thee.

Helena.
And I am sick when I look not on you.

Demetrius.
You do impeach your modesty too much, To leave the city, and commit yourself Into the hands of one that loves you not; To trust the opportunity of night, And the ill counsel of a desert place, With the rich worth of your virginity.

Helena.
Your virtue is my privilege for that. It is not night, when I do see your face, Therefore I think I am not in the night; Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company, For you. In my respect, are all the world. Then how can I be said, I am alone, When all the world is here to look on me?

Demetrius.
I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes, And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.

Helena.
The wildest hath not such a heart as you. Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd; Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase: The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind Makes speed to catch the tiger. Bootless speed! When cowardice pursues, and valour flies.

Demetrius.
I will not stay thy questions; let me go; Or, if thou follow me, do not believe But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Helena.
Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field, You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius! Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex; We cannot fight for love, as men may do; We should be wo'd, and were not made to woo. I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell, To die upon the hand I love so well.

[Exeunt Demetrius and Helena.]

Oberon.
Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove, Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.

Puck.
Ay, there it is.

Oberon.
I pray thee, give it me. I know a bank where the wild thyme blows, Where ox-lips, and the nodding violet grows; Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine, With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine: There sleeps Titania, some time of the night, Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight; And there the snake throws her enameled skin, Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in; And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes, And make her full of hateful fantasies. [grove: Take thou some of it, and seek through this A sweet Athenian lady is in love With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes; But do it, when the next thing he espies May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man By the Athenian garments he hath on. Effect it with some care, that he may prove More fond on her, than she upon his love. And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck.
Fear not, my lord: your servant shall do so.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Another part of the Wood.

Enter Titania, with her train.

Titania.
Come, now a roundel, and a fairy song; Then, for the third part of a minute, hence: Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds; Some war with rear-mice for their leathern wings, [back To make my small elves coats; and some keep The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep; Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies' Song.

1 Fairy.
You spotted snakes, with double tongue, Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen, Next, and blind-worms, do no wrong; Come not near our fairy queen:

Chorus.
Philemon, with melody, Sing in our sweet lullaby; Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby: Never harm, Nor spell nor charm, Come our lovely lady nigh; So, good night, with lullaby.

2 Fairy.
Weaving spiders, come not here; Hence, you long-legged spinners, hence! Beetles black, approach not near; Worm, nor spaniel, do no offence.

Chorus.
Philemon, with melody, &c.

2 Fairy.
Hence, away! now all is well. One, aloof, stand sentinel.

[Exeunt Fairies. Titania sleeps.

Enter Oberon.

Oberon.
What thou seest, when thou dost wake, [Squeezes the flower on Titania's eye-lids. Do it for thy true love take; Love, and languish for his sake: Be it ounce, or cat, or bear, Pard, or boar with bristled hair, In thy eye that shall appear When thou wak'st, it is thy dear. Wake when some vile thing is near. [Exit.

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lysander.
Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood; And to speak tru'th, I have forgot our way: We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good, And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Hermia.
Be it so, Lysander: and you out a bed, For I upon this bank will rest my head.

Lysander.
Lysander.

One turf shall serve as pillow for us both:
One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.

Hermia.

Nay, good Lysander: for my sake, my dear,
Lie further off yet: do not lie so near.

Lysander.

O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocence;
Love takes the meaning in love’s conference.
I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart we can make of it:
Two bosoms interchained with an oath;
So then, two bosoms, and a single troth.
Then, by your side no bed-room me deny,
For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Hermia.

Lysander riddles very pretty.
Now much behorsw my manners and my pride.
If Hermia meant to say Lysander lied.
But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy
Lie further off: in human modesty
Such separation as may well be said
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid:
So far be distant; and good night, sweet friend.
Thy love ne’er alter till thy sweet life end!

Lysander.

Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;
And then end life, when I end loyalty!
Here is my bed: sleep give thee all his rest!

Hermia.

With half that wish the wisher’s eyes be press’d!

Enter Puck.

Puck.

Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower’s force in stiring love.
Night and silence I who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid:
And gave him the golden sound
On the dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power that this charm doth owe.
When thou wak’st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid.
So awake when I am gone,
For I must now to Oberon.

Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia, running.

Hermia.

Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

Demetrius.

I charge thee, hence; and do not haunt me thus.

Hermia.

O! wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.

Demetrius.

Stay, on thy peril: I alone will go.

[Exit Demetrius.

Hermia.

O! I am out of breath in this fond chase.
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe’er she lies,
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
If so, my eyes are often wash’d than her’s.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear.
For beasts that meet me, run away for fear:

Therefore, no marvel, though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia’s sphyry eyes?

But who is here? — Lysander on the ground?
Dead, or asleep? — I see no blood, no wound. —
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lysander.

And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

[Waking.

Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.

Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word Is that vile name to perish on my sword!

Helen.

Do not say so, Lysander; say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord!
Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.

Lysander.

Content with Hermia? No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena I love.
Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason swayed,
And reason says you are the worshipful maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season;
So, I being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o’erlook
Love’s stories, written in love’s richest book.

Helen.

Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?
Is’t not enough, is’t not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius’ eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
[do.
Good troth, you do me wrong: good sooth, you
In such dishonorable manner me to woo.
But fare you well: perforce I must confess,
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refus’d,
Should, of another, therefore, be abus’d! [Exit.

Lysander.

She sees not Hermia. — Hermia, sleep thou there;
And never mayst thou come Lysander near;
For, as a surfet of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive;
So thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me.
And, all my powers, address your love and might.
To honour Helen, and to be her knight.

Hermia.

[Starting.

Help me, Lysander, help me! I do thy best,
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast.
Ah, me, for pity! — what a dream was here! Lysander, look, how I do quake with fear. Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey. —
Alack! where are you? speak, an if you hear; Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No, — then I well perceive you are not nigh.
Either death, or you, I’ll find immediately. [Exit.

ACT
ACT III.

SCENE I. The same. The Queen of Fairies lying asleep.
Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Are we all met?

Quince.

Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our 'tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

Bottom.

Peter Quince.—Quince.

What say'st thou, Bottom?

Bottom.

There are things in this comedy of "Pyramus and Thisby," that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself, which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout.

By'rlakin, a parlous fear.

Starveling.

I believe, we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bottom.

Not a whit: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and, for the more better assurance, tell them, that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver. This will put them out of fear.

Quince.

Well, we will have such a prologue, and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bottom.

No, make it two more: let it be written in eight and eight.

Quince.

Will not the ladies be afraid of the lion?

Starveling.

I fear it, I promise you.

Bottom.

Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living, and we ought to look to it.

Snout.

Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bottom.

Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect:—"Ladies, or fair ladies, I wish you, or, I would request you, or, I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I comp hither as a lion, It were pitty of my life: no, I am no such thing: I am a man as other men are;" and there, indeed, let him name his name, and tell them plainly he is Snug, the joiner.

Quince.

Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things: that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug.

Doth the moon shineth at night we play our play?

Bottom.

A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Quince.

Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bottom.

Why, then you may leave a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quince.

Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say, he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby (says the story,) did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug.

You can never bring in a wall.—What say you, Bottom?

Bottom.

Some man or other must present wall; and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; or let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quince.

If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin. When you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Puck behind.

Puck.

What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here, So near the cradle of the fairy queen? What, a play toward? I'll be an auditor; An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quince.

Speak, Pyramus.—Thisby, stand forth.

Pyramus.

"Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweet,"—

Quince.

Odours, odours.

Pyramus.

"Odours savours sweet: So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby, dear.— But, hark, a voice I stay thou but here a while, And by and by I will to thee appear."

Puck.

A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here!

Exit.

Thisbe.

Must I speak now?

Quince.

Ay, marry, must you; for you must understand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

Thisbe.

"Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue, Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,
Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,
I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb."—

Pyramus.

Ninus' tomb, man. Why you must not speak that yet; that answer to Pyramus. You speak all your part at once, cues and all.—Pyramus, enter: your cue is past; it is: new tire.

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom with an ass's head.

Thisbe.

O!—"As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire."—

Pyramus.

"If I were, fair Thisby, I were only thine:"—

Quince.

O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.
Pray, masters! fly, masters! help! [Exeunt Clowns.

Puck.

I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round,
Through bog, through bush, through brake, through briar.
Sometimes a horse I'll be, sometimes a hound,
A hog, a headless bear, sometimes a fire;
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,
Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn.

Bottom.

Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them, to make me afeard.

Re-enter Snout.

O Bottom! thou art changed; what do I see on thee?—

Bottom.

What do you see? you see an ass's head of your own, do you?

Re-enter Quince.

Quince.

Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated.

Bottom.

I see their knavery. This is to make an ass of me, to fright me, if they could; but I will not stir from this place, do what they can. I will walk up and down here, and I will sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid.

Sings.

The cowslip-cock, so black of hue,
With orange-tauerny bill,
The thrush with his note so true,
The wren with little quill.

Titania.

What angel wakes me from my flowery bed?

Bottom.

The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo gray,
Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dare not answer, nay;

for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry "cuckoo" never so?

Titania.

I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again:
Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note,
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape; [me,
And thy fair virtue's force, perforce, doth move
On the first view, to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bottom.

Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: and yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Titania.

Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bottom.

Not so, neither; but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Titania.

Out of this wood do not desire to go:
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or I am a spirit of no common rate; [no.
The summer still doth tend upon my state,
And I do love thee; therefore, go with me;
I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee;
And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,
And sing while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep:

And I will purge thy mortal grossness so,
That thou shalt like an airy spirit go. [seed! Peas-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-

Enter four Fairies.

1 Fairy.

Ready.

2 Fairy.

And 1.

3 Fairy.

And 1.

4 Fairy.

And 1.

All.

Where shall we go?

Titania.

Be kind and courteous to this gentleman:
Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes;
Feed him with apricocks, and dewberries,
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries.
The honey bags steal from the humble-bees,
And for night tapers crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,
To fan the moon-beams from his sleeping eyes.
Not to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

I cry your worship's mercy, heartily.—I beseech, your worship's name.

Cobweb.

1 Fairy.

Hail, mortal!

2 Fairy.

Hail!

3 Fairy.

Hail!

4 Fairy.

Hail!

Bottom.

I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master. [Cobweb. If I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman?

Peas-blossom.

I pray you, commend me to mistress Squash, your mother, and to master Peascod, your father. Good master Peas-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.—Your name, I beseech you, sir?
Act III. Sc. 11. MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. 197

Mustard-seed.

Mustard-seed.

Bottom.

Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well: that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

Titania.

Come, wait upon him: lead him to my bower. The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye, And when she weeps, weeps every little flower, Lamenting some enforced chastity. Tie up my lover's tongue, bring him silently. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Another part of the Wood.

Enter Oberon.

Oberon.

I wonder, if Titania be awak'd; Then, what it was that next came in her eye, Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger.—How now, mad spirit? What night-rule now about this haunted grove?

Puck.

My mistress with a monster is in love. Near to her close and consecrated bower, While she was in her dull and sleeping hour, A crew of patches, rude mechanics, That work for bread upon Athenian stalls, Were met together to rehearse a play, Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day. The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort, Who Pyramus presented in their sport, Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake, When I did him at this advantage take; An ass's now! I fixed on his head: Anon, his Thisbe must be answered, [spy, And forth my mimic comes. When they him As wild geese that the creage, Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort, Rising and cawing at the gun's report, Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky; So, at his sight, away his fellows fly. And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls: He murder cries, and help from Athens call's. Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong, Made senseless, things begin to do them wrong, For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch, Some, sleeves, some, hats, from yielders all things catch. I led them on in this distracted fear, And left sweet Pyramus translated there; When in that moment (so it be my fowler pass,) Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

Oberon.

This fails out better than I could devise. But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes With the love-juice as I did bid thee do?

Puck.

I took him sleeping, (that is finish'd too,) And the Athenian woman by his side, That, when he wak'd, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Oberon.

Stand close: this is the same Athenian.

Puck.

This is the woman; but not this the man.

Demetrius.

O! why refuse you him that loves you so? Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Hermia.

Now, I but chide; but I should use thee worse, For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse. If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep, Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep, And kill me too. The sun was not so true unto the day, As he to me. Would he have stolen away from sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon, This whole earth may be bor'd, and that the moon May through the centre creep, and so displease Her brother's noon tide with th' Antipodes. It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him: So should a murderer look, so dead, so grim.

Demetrius.

So should the murder'd look, and so should I, Pier'd through the heart with your stern cruelty; Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear, As yonder Vener in her glimmering sphere.

Hermia.

What's this to my Lysander? where is he? Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Demetrius.

I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Hermia.

Out, dog! I out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then? Henceforth be never number'd among men! O! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake; Durst thou have look'd upon him, being awake, And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch! Could not a worm in adder, do so much? An adder did it: for with doubler tongue Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Demetrius.

You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood: I am not guilty of Lysander's blood, Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Hermia.

I pray thee, tell me, then, that he is well.

Demetrius.

And, if I could, what should I get therefore? Hermia.

A privilege, never to see me more.— And from thy hated presence part I so; See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit.

Demetrius.

There is no following her in this fierce vein: Here, therefore, for a while I will remain. So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe; Which now in some slight measure it will pay, If for his tender here I make some stay. [Dies down.

Oberon.

What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken quite, And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight: Of thy misprision must perforce ensue [true. Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd

Puck.

Then fate o'er-rules; that one man holding truth, A million fall, confounding oath on oath.
Oberon.

About the wood go swifter than the wind, And Helena of Athens look thou find:
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer [ dear.
With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood
By some illusion see thou bring her here:
I'll charm his heart against she do appear.

Puck.

I go, I go; look how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit.

Oberon.

Flower of this purple dle,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye.
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky, —
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.

Puck.

Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee.
Shall we thereto fond pageant see?
Lord, what tools these mortals be!

Oberon.

Stand aside: the noise they make
Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Puck.

Then will two at once woo one;
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please me,
That beal preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lysander.

Why should you think that I should woo in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears.
Look, when I vow I weep, and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true?

Helena.

You do advance your cunning more and more.
When truth kills truth, O, devilish-holy fray!
These vows are Hernia's: will you give her o'er?
[weigh:
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.

Lysander.

I had no judgment, when to her I swore.

Helena.

Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.

Lysander.

Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.

Demetrius. [A wakeing.

O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!
To what shall I compare thine eyne?
Crystal is muddily. O! how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure concealed white, high Taurus snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crowd,
When thou holdest up by hand. O, let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!

Helena.

O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me, for your merriment:
If you were civil, and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too?
If you were men, as if you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so;
To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When, I am sure, you hate me with your hearts.
You both are rivals, and love Hernia,
And now both rivals to mock Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes
With your derision! I none of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin, and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.

Lysander.

You are unkild, Demetrius; be not so,
For you love Hernia: this, you know, I know:
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hernia's love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do till my death.

Helena.

Never did mockers waste more idle breath.

Demetrius.

Lysander, keep thy Hernia: I will none:
If ever I loved her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd,
And now to Helen it home return'd,
There to remain.

Lysander.

Hernia.

Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompense.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
But why unkindly dist thou leave me so?

Lysander.

Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go?

Hernia.

What love could press Lysander from my side?

Lysander.

Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night
Than all you fiery oes and eyes of light.

Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know

The hate I bare thee made me leave thee so?

Hernia.

You speak not as you think: it cannot be.

Helena.

Lo! she is one of this confederacy.
Now I perceive they have confounded, all three
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Injurious Hernia! most ungrateful maid!
Have you conspir'd, have you with these cons-
To bait me with this foul derision? [triv'd
It is all the counsel that we two have shar'd:
The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us,— O! is all forgot? [cence
All school-days' friendship, childhood inno-
We, Hernia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion, Both warbling of one song, both in one key, As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds, Had been incorporate. So we grew together, Like to a double cherry, seeming parted, But yet an union in partition; Two lovely berries moulded on one stem, So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart; Two of the first, like coats in heraldry, Due but to one, and crowned with one crest. And will you rend our ancient love asunder, To join with men in scoring your poor friend? It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly; Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it, Though I alone do feel the injury.

Hermia.
I am amazed at your passionate words. I scorn you not: it seems that you scorn me.

Helena.
Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn, To follow me, and praise my eyes and face, And made your other love, Demetrius, (Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,) To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare, Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander Deny your love, so rich within his soul, And tender me, forsooth, affection, But by your setting on, by your consent? What though I be not so in grace as you, So hung upon with love, so fortunate, But miserable most to love unlov'd, This you should pity, rather than despise.

Hermia.
I understand not what you mean by this.

Helena.
Ay, do, persever, counterfeit sad looks, Make mouths upon me when I turn my back; Wink at each other; hold the sweet jest up: This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled. If you have any pity, grace, or manners, You would not make me such an argument. But, faire ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault, Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.

Lysander.
Stay, gentle Helena! hear my excuse: My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!

O excellent I
Helena.
Sweet, do not scorn her so.

Demetrius.
If she cannot entreat, I can compel.

Lysander.
Thou canst compel no more than she entreat: Thy threats have no more strength, than her weak prayers.

Helena.
I love thee; by my life, I do: I swear by that which I will lose for thee, To prove him false, that says I love thee not.

Demetrius.
I say, I love thee more than he can do.

Lysander.
If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.

Demetrius.
Quick, come,——

Hermia.
Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lysander.
Away, you Ethiop!
Hermia.
  Lower! hark, again.
Helen.

Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me. I evermore did love you, Hermia. Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you; Save that, in love unto Demetrius, I told him of your stealth unto this wood. He follow'd you; for love, I follow'd him; But he hath chid me hence, and threaten'd me To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too: And now, so you will let me quiet go, To Athens will I bear my folly back, And follow you no further. Let me go; You see how simple and how fond I am.

Hermia.

Why, get you gone. Who 's it that hinders you?
Helen.

A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.
Hermia.

What, with Lysander?
Helen.

With Demetrius.

Lysander.

Be not afraid; she shall not harm thee, Helen.
Demetrius.

No, sir; she shall not, though you take her part.
Helen.

O! when she is angry, she is keen and shrewd. She was a vixen, when she went to school; And, though she be but little, she is fierce.
Hermia.

Little again? nothing but low and little?— Why will you suffer her to flout me thus? Let me come to her.
Lysander.

Get you gone, you dwarf; You minimus, of hindering knot-grass made; You bead, you acorn.
Demetrius.

You are too officious In her behalf that scars your services. Let her alone; speak not of Helen; Take not her part, for if thou dost intend Never so little show of love to her, Thou shalt aby it.
Lysander.

Now she holds me not, Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right, Of thine or mine, is most in Helen.

Demetrius.

Follow? nay, I'll go with thee, check by jowl.

Exeunt Lysander and Demetrius.

Hermia.

You, mistress, all this coll is 'long of you. Nay, go not back.
Helen.

I will not trust you, I, Nor longer stay in your curtse company. Your hands, than mine, are quicker for a fray; My legs are longer though, to run away.

Hermia.

I am amaz'd, and know not what to say.

Oberon.

This is thy negligence: still thou mistak'st, Or else commit'st thy knavery willfully. I'll have thee thither another thing to do.

Puck.

Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook. Did not you tell me I should know the man By the Athenian garments he had on?

And so far blameless proves my enterprize, That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes; And so far am I glad it so did sort, As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Oberon.

Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to fight: He, therefore, Robin, overcast the night; The starry willow cover thou anon With drooping fog, as black as Acheron; And lead these tawdy rivas so astra, As one come not within another's way. Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue, Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong; And sometime raff thou like Demetrius; And from each other look thou lead them thus, Till I'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep. With leaden legs and batty wings, doth creep; Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye; Whose liquor hath this virtuous property, To take from thence all error with his might, And make his eye-balls roll with wond't sight. When they next wake, all this derision Shall seem a dream, and fruitless vision; And back to Athens shall the lovers wand, With league, whose date till death shall never Whiles I in this affair do thee employ, [end. I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy; And then I will her charmed eye release [peace. From monster's view, and all things shall be

Puck.

My fairy lord, this must be done with haste, For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast, And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger: [there, At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and Troop home to church-yards; damned spirits That in cross-ways and floods have burial, [fall, Already to their wormy beds are gone; For fear lest day should look their shames upon, They willfully themselves exile from light, And must for aye consort with black-brow'd night.

Oberon.

But we are spirits of another sort. I with the morning's love have oft made sport; And, like a forester, the groves may tread, Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red, Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams, Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams. But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay: We may effect this business yet each day.

Oberon.

[Exit Oberon. Puck.

Up and down, up and down; I will lead them up and down: I am fear'd in field and town; Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Lysander.

Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now.

Puck.

Here, villain! drawn and ready. Where art thou?

Lysander.

I will be with thee straight.

Puck.

Follow me then

To planter ground.

Exeunt Lysander as following the voice.

Enter Demetrius.

Demetrius.

Lysander! speak again.
ACT IV.  SC. 1.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

Gentle lover, remedy.

[Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eye.

When thou wak'st, thou tak'st
True delight in the sight
Of thy former lady's eye:
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your walk; g shall be shown:
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again,
And all shall be well.
[Exit Puck. — Demetrius, Helena, & c. sleep.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.  The same.

Enter Titania and Bottom; Fairies attending: Oberon behind unseen.

Titania.

COME, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

Bottom.

Where's Peas-blossom?

Peas-blossom.

Ready.

Bottom.

Scratch my head, Peas-blossom. — Where's monsieur Cobweb?

Cobweb.

Ready.

Bottom.

Monsieur Cobweb, good monsieur, get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not: I would be loath to have you over-flown with a honey-bag, signor—Where's monsieur Mustard-seed?

Mustard-seed.

Ready.

Bottom.

Give me your neff, monsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you, leave your courtesies, good monsieur.

Mustard-seed.

What's your will?

Bottom.

Nothing, good monsieur, but to help cavalry Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for, methinks, I am marvellous hairy about the face, and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

Titania.

What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

Bottom.

I have a reasonable good ear in music: let's have the tongs and the bones.

Titania.

Or, say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.

Bottom.

Truly, a peck of provender: I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks, I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

Titania.
MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

ACT IV. SC. I.

TITANIA.
I have a venturous fairy that shall seek
The squirrel's beard, and fetch thee new nuts.

BOTTOM.
I had rather have a handful or two of dried pens:
But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me:
I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

TITANIA.
Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.
Fairies, be gone, and be all ways away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweet osyucke,
Gently entwist: the female i'th so
Enrings the barking fingers of the elm.
O, how I love thee! how I dote on thee!

Enter PUCK.

OBERON. [Advancing.

Welcome, good Robin. Seest thou this sweet
Her doteage now do I begin to pity?
[sight? For meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraud her, and fall out with her;
For she his hairy temples then had roun'd
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flow'rs' eyes,
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child,
Which straight she gave me; and her fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes:
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain,
That he, awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.
Be, as thou wast wont to be;
See, as thou wast wont to see:
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.
Now, my Titania! I wake thee, my sweet queen.

TITANIA. My Oberon! what visions have I seen! I Methought, I was enamour'd of an ass.

OBERON. There lies your love.

TITANIA. How came these things to pass?
O, how mine eyes do loath his visage now!

OBERON. Silence, a while.—Robin, take off this head.—

TITANIA, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these live the sense.

TITANIA. Music, ho! music! such as charmeth sleep.

PUCK. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

OBERON. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands
With me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair posterity.

There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

FAIRY KING, attend, and mark:
I do hear the morning lark.

OBERON. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade;
We the globe can compass so
Swifter than the wandering moon.

TITANIA.
Come, my lord: and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.

[Exeunt.

HORNS sound within.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and Train.

THESEUS. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is perform'd:
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds. —
Uncouple them in the western valley: let them go! —
Despatch, I say, and find the forester. —
We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top;
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

HIPPOLYTA. I was with Hercules, and Cadmus, once,
When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding can for, besides the groves,
The skles, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry. I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

THESEUS. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So dew'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-kneed, and dew-lap'd like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hallo'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Judge, when you hear. — But, soft! what nymphae are these?

EGEUS. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep;
And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena;
I wonder of their being here together.

THESEUS. No doubt, they rose up early, to observe
The rite of Mow; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity. —
But speak, Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermione should give answer of her choice?

EGEUS. It is, my lord.

THESEUS. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

[Horns, and shott within. Demetrius, Ly-sander, Hermione, and Helena, wake and start up.

THESEUS. Good-morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

LYSANDEHR. Pardon, my lord.

THESEUS.
MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. 203

ACT IV. SC. II. MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. 203

Helena. And Hippolyta.

Lyanser.

And he did bid us follow to the temple.

Demetrius.

Why then, we are awake. Let's follow him;
And by the way let us recount our dreams.

Bottom. [Exeunt. [Waking.

When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer;—my next is, "Most fair Pyramus."

—He, ho!—Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life! stolen hence, and left me asleep. I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream,—past the wit of man to say what dream it was: man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was—there is no man can tell what. Methought I was, and methought I had,—but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom, and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

[Exit.

SCENE II. Athens. A Room in Quince's House.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quince.

Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet?

Starveling.

He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is transported.

Flute.

If he come not, then the play is marred. It goes not forward, doth it?

Quince.

It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus, but he.

Flute.

No; he hath simply the best wit of any handycraft man in Athens.

Quince.

Yea, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

Flute.

You must say, paragon: a paramour is, God bless us! a thing of nought.

Enter Snug.

Snug.

Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married. If our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flute.

O, sweet bully Bottom! Thus hast he lost sixpence a-day during his life; he could not have 'scapeped sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a-day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day in Pyramus, or nothing.
ACT V.

SCENE I. The same. An Apartment in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, Lords, and Attendants.

Hippolyta.

'TIS strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

Theseus.

More strange than true: I never may believe These antic fables, nor these fairy toys. Lovers, and madmen, have such seething brains, Such shaping fantazies, that apprehend More than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatic, the lover, and the poet, Are of imagination all compact: One sees more devils than vast hell can hold; That is, the madman: the lover, all frantic, Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt: The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth And, as imagination bodies forth [to heaven; The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing A local habitation and a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination, That, if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some bringer of that joy; Or in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush supposed a bear?

Hippolyta.

But all the story of the night told over, And all their minds transfixed so together, More witnesseth than fancy's images, And grows to something of great constancy, But, however strange, and admirable.

Theseus.

Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.

Enter Bottom, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

Joy, gentle friends! joy, and fresh days of love, Accompany your hearts!

Lysander.

More than to us
Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

Theseus.

Come now; what masks, what dances shall we have,
To wear away this long age of three hours,
Between our after-supper, and bed-time?
Where is our usual manager of mirth?
What revels are in hand? Is there no play,
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?
Call Philostrate.

Philostrate.

Here, mighty Theseus.

Theseus.

Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?
What mask? what music? How shall we be-
The lazy time, if not with some delight? [gulle
Philostrate.

There is a brief how many sports are ripe; Make choice of which your highness will see first. [Giving a paper. Theseus.

"The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung By an Athenian exult to the harp." We'll none of that: that have I told my love, In glory of my kinsman Hercules.
"The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage." That is an old device; and it was play'd When I from Theseus came last a conqueror. "The thrie three Muses mourning for the death Of learning, late deceased in beggary." That is some satire, keen, and critical, Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.
"A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus, And his love Thisbee: very tragical mirth." Merry and tragical! Tedioue and brief! That is, hot ice, and wondrous strange snow. How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philostrate.

A play there is, my lord, some ten words long, Which is as brief as I have known a play; But by ten words, my lord, it is too long, Which makes it tedious; for in all the play There is not one word apt, one player fitted. And tragicall, my noble lord, it is For Pyramus therein doth kill himself. Which, when I saw rehearse'd, I must confess, Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears The passion of loud laughter never shed.

Theseus.

What are they, that do play it?

Philostrate.

Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here, Which never labour'd in their minds till now; And now have told 'em their unbreath'd memories With this same play, against your nuptial.

Theseus.

And we will hear it.

Philostrate.

No, my noble lord; It is not for you: I have heard it over, And it is nothing: nothing in the world, Unless you can find sport in their intents, Extremely stretch'd and curd'd with cruel pain, To do you service.

Theseus.
This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present

Wall, that vile wall which did these lovers
And through wall's chink, poor souls, they are content
To whisper, at the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Theseus:—for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which lion hight by name,
The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright:
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall,
Which lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
Whereat, with blade, with bloody shameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;
And Thisby, tarrying in mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let lion, moonshine, wall, and lovers twain,
At large discourse, while here they do remain:"

[Exeunt Prologue, Theseus, Thise, Lion, and Moonshine.

Theseus.

I wonder, if the lion be to speak.

Demetrius.

No wonder, my lord:
One lion may, when many asses do.

Wall.

"In this same interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a cranny'd hole, or chink,
Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
Did whisper often very secretly.
Show this lime, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth
That I am that same wall: the truth is so:
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper."

Theseus.

Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Demetrius.

It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

Theseus.

Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter Pyramus.

Pyramus.

"O, grim-look'd night! O, night with hue so black!
O night, which ever art, when day is not!
O night! O night! I alack, alack, alack!
I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot.—
And thou, O wall! O sweet, O lovely wall!
That standeth between her father's ground and mine;
Thou wall, O wall! O sweet, and lovely wall!
Show me thy chink to blink through with mine eye.
[Wall holds up his fingers.

Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!
But what see I? No Thisby do I see.
O wicked wall! through whom I see no bliss:
Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me!"

Theseus.

The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyramus.

No, in truth, sir, he should not.—"Deceiving me,"
Enter Thisbe.

Thysbe.

"O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones;
Thy stones with lime and hair knot in thee."

Pyramus.

"I see a voice; now will I to the chink,
To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face.
Thisby!"

Thysbe.

"My love I thou art my love, I think." Pyramus.

"Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's
And like Lysander am I trusty still."

Thysbe.

"And I like Helen, till the fates me kill."

Pyramus.

"Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true."

Thysbe.

"As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you."

Pyramus.

"O! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall."

Thysbe.

"I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all." Pyramus.

"Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway?"

Thysbe.

"Tide life, 'tide death, I come without delay."

Wall.

"Thus have I, wall, my part discharged so;
And, being done, thus wall away doth go."

[Exeunt Wall, Pyramus, and Thysbe.

Theseus.

Now is the mural down between the two neighbours.

Demetrius.

No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning.

Hippolyta.

This is the silliest stuff that e'er I heard.

Theseus.

The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

Hippolyta.

It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

Theseus.

If we imagine no worse of them, than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men. Here come two noble beasts in, a man and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion.

"You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,
[here,
May now, perchance, both quake and tremble
When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.
Then know, that I, one Snug the Joiner, am
A lion fall, nor else no lion's dam:
For, if I should as lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pity on my life."

Theseus.

A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Demetrius.

The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

Lysander.

This lion is a very fox for his valour.

Theseus.

True; and a goose for his discretion.

Demetrius.

Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion, and the fox carries the goose.

Theseus.

His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour, for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moonshine.

"This lantern doth the horned moon present;"

Demetrius.

He should have worn the horns on his head.

Theseus.

He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumferenc.

Moonshine.

"This lantern doth the horned moon present; Myself the man I the moon do seem to be."

Theseus.

This is the greatest error of all the rest. The man should be put into the lantern: how is it else the man I the moon?

Demetrius.

He dares not come there for the candle; for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hippolyta.

I am awear of this moon: would, he would change!

Theseus.

It appears by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lysander.

Proceed, moon.

Moonshine.

All that I have to say, is, to tell you, that the lantern is the moon: I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Demetrius.

Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence! here comes Thysbe.

Enter Thysbe.

Thysbe.

"This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?"

Lion.

"Oh—."

[The Lion roars.—Thysbe runs off.

Demetrius.

Well roared, lion.

Theseus.

Well run, Thysbe.

Hippolyta.

Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

[The Lion tears Thysbe's mantle, and exit.

Theseus.

Well moused, lion.

Demetrius.

And then came Pyramus.

Lysander.
Lysander.

And so the lion vanished.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyramus.

"Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams; I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright,

For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams, I trust to taste of truest Thisby sight.

But stay; — O spile! — But mark, poor knight,

What dreadful dole is here! Eyes, do you see?

How can it be?

O dainty duck! O dear! Thy mantle good,

What! stan'd with blood?

Approach, ye furles fell!

O fates! come, come;

Cut thread and thread;

Quell, crush, conclude, and quell!"

Theseus.

This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hippolyta.

Beshew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyramus.

"O, wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame,

Since lion vile hath here defou'd my dear?

Which is,— no, no,—which was the fairest dame,

That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.

Come, tears, confound;

Out, sword, and wound

The pap of Pyramus:

Ay, that left pap,

Where heart doth hop:

Thus die I; thus, thus, thus!

Now I be dead,

Now am I fled;

My soul is in the sky:

Tongue, lose thy light!

Moon, take thy flight!

Now die, die, die, die!"

[Dies. — Exit Moonshine.

Demetrius.

No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.

Lysander.

Less than an ace, man, for he is dead; he is nothing.

Theseus.

With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and yet prove an ace.

Hippolyta.

How chance moonshine is gone, before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

Theseus.

She will find him by starlight. — Here she comes, and her passion ends the play.

Enter Thisbe.

Hippolyta.

Methinks, she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.

Demetrius.

A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better; he for a man, God warrant us; she for a woman, God bless us.

Lysander.

She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Demetrius.

And thus she moans, videlicet. —

Thisbe.

"Asleep, my love?

What, dead, my dove?

O Pyramus! arise:

Speak, speak! Quite dumb?

Dead, dead? A tomb

Must cover thy sweet eyes.

These lily lips,

This cherry nose,

These yellow cowslip checks,

Are gone, are gone.

Lovers, make moon!

His eyes were green as leeks.

O! sisters three,

Come, come to me,

With hands as pale as milk;

Lay them in gore,

Since you have shore

With shears his thread of silk.

Tongue, not a word: —

Come, trusty sword;

Come, blade, my breast imbrue:

And farewell, friends. —

Thus Thisby ends:

Adieu, adieu, adieu."

[Dies. — Theseus.

Moonshine and Lysander are left to bury the dead.

Demetrius.

Ay, and wall too.

Bottom.

No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company? —

Theseus.

No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse, for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it, had play'd Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garner, it would have been a fine tragedy; and so it is, truly, and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone. —

A dance.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve. —

Lovers, to bed: 'tis almost fairest time. I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn, As much as we this night have overwatch'd. This palpable gross play hath well beguil'd The heavy gait of night. — Sweet friends, to A fortnight hold we this solemnity. —

[Exeunt. —

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

Puck.

Now the hungry lion roars,

And the wolf behowlis the moon:

Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,

All with weary task for done.

Now the wasted brands do glow,

Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud

Puts the wretch, that lies in woe,

In remembrance of a shroud.

Now it is the time of night,

That the graves, all gaping wide,

Every one lets forth his sprite,

In the church-way paths to glide:

And we fairies, that do run

By the triple Hecate's team,

From the presence of the sun.

Following darkness like a dream,

Now are frolic; not a mouse

Shall disturb this hallow'd house:

I am sent with broom before,

To sweep the dust behind the door. —

[Exit. —
MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Enter Oberon and Titania, with all their Train.

Oberon: Through the house give glimmering light, By the dead and drowsy fire; Every elf, and fairy sprite, Hop as light as bird from brier; And this ditty after me Sing, and dance it trippingly.

Titania: First, rehearse your song by rote, To each word a warbling note: Hand in hand with fairy grace Will we sing, and bless this place.

THE SONG.

Oberon: Now, until the break of day, Through this house each fairy stray. To the best bride-bed will we, Which by us shall blessed be; And the issue there create Ever shall be fortunate. So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be; And the blots of nature’s hand Shall not in their issue stand: Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar, Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity, Shall upon their children be. With this field-dew consecrate, Every fairy take his gait, And each several chamber bless, Through this palace with sweet peace; Ever shall in safety rest, And the owner of it blest. Trip away; make no stay; Meet me all by break of day.

[Exeunt Oberon, Titania, and Train.

Puck: If we shadows have offended, Think but this, and all is mended, That you have but slumber’d here, While these visions did appear; And this weak and idle theme, No more yielding but a dream, Gentles, do not reprehend: If you pardon, we will mend. And, as I am an honest Puck, If we have unearned luck Now to ‘scape the serpent’s tongue, We will make amends ere long. Else the Puck a lier call: So, good night unto you all. Give me your hands, if we be friends, And Robin shall restore amends. [Exit.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

DUKE OF VENICE.

SCENE, partly at Venice, and partly at Belmont.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Venice. A Street.

Enter Antonio, Salarino, and Salanio.

Antonio.

IN sooth, I know not why I am so sad. It wearies me: you say, it wearies you: But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
That curr'y to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Salarino.
Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind,
Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads;
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt,
Would make me sad.

Salarino.
My wind, cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andros dock'd in sand,
Vailing her high top lower than her ribs,
To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle vessel's side,
Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,
And, in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing? Shall I have the
To think on this, and shall I lack the thought,
That such a thing bechanc'd would make me
But, tell not me: I know, Antonio,
[sad?] Is sad to think upon his merchandise.

Antonio.
Believe me, no. I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore, my merchandise makes me not sad.

Salarino.
Why, then you are in love.

Antonio.
Fie, fie!

Salarino.
Not in love neither? Then let's say, you are sick,
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as easy
For you to laugh, and leap, and say, you are merry,
[Janus,
Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh, like parrots, at a bag-piper;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor wear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Salarino.
Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kins-
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare you well: [man,
We leave you now with better company.

Salarino.
I would have stay'd till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Antonio.
Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it, your own business calls on you,
And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salarino.
Good morrow, my good lords.

Bassanio.
Good signiors both, when shall we laugh?
Say when?
You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?

Salarino.
We'll make our pleasures to attend on yours,
[Exeunt Salarino and Salarino.

Lorenzo.
My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,
We two will leave you; but at dinner-time,
I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.

Bassanio.
I will not fail you.

Gratiano.
You look not well, signior Antonio;
You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it, that do buy it with much care.
Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Antonio.
I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.

Gratiano.
Let me play the fool:
With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come
And let my liver rather heat with wine,
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
Sleep when he wakes, and creep into the jaundice
By being peevish? I shall thee what, Antonio,—
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks: —
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle, like a standing pond,
And do a wilful stillness entertain,
With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;
As who should say, 'I am Sir Oracle,
And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark!' O!
my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing: when, I am very sure,
If they should speak, would almost damn those ears,
Which, hearing them, would call their brethren.
I'll tell thee more of this another time;
But fish not, with this thin ichankoly seal,
For this fool-gudgeon, this opinion.
Come, good Lorenzo.— Fare ye well, awhile:
I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lorenzo.
Well, we will leave you, then, till dinner-time.
I must be one of these same dumb wise men,
For Gratiano never lets me speak.

Gratiano.
Well, keep me company but two years more.
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Antonio.
Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this gear.

Gratiano.
Thanks, I'faith; for silence is only commendable
In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vend-[Exeunt Gratiano and Lorenzo.

Antonio.
It is that:— any thing now.

Bassanio.
Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them;
and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Antonio.

Well; tell me now, what lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to-day promised to tell me of?

Bassanio.

'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port
Than my faint means would graces continue:
Nor do I make mean to be abridged
From such a noble rate; but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts,
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Bath left me gaged. To you, Antonio,
I owe the most, in money, and in love;
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Antonio.

I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
And if it stand, as you yourself still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd,
My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bassanio.

In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way with more advised watch,
To find the other forth; and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I see you much, and, like a wiser youth,
That which I owe is lost; but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will search the aim, or to find both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Antonio.

You know me well, and herein spend but time,
To wind about my love with circumstance;
And, out of doubt, you do me now more wrong,
In making enquiries of my utmostmost
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then, do but say to me what I should do,
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore, speak.

Bassanio.

In Belmont is a lady richly left,
And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her eyes
I did receive fair speechless messages.
Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued
To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia.
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the four winds blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors; and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchis' strand,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O, my Antonio! had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind presages me such thrift,
That I should questionless be fortunate.

Antonio.

Thou know'st, that all my fortunes are at sea;
Neither have I money, nor commodity
To raise a present sum: therefore, go forth;
Try what my credit can in Venice do:
That self shall rack'd, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.

Go presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is, and I no question make.
To have it of my trust, or for my sake.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Belmont. An Apartment in Portia's House.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Portia.

By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aweary
Of this great world.

Nerissa.

You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries
Were in the same abundance as your good fortunes.
And, yet, for aught I see, they are as sick,
That surfeit with too much, as they that starve
With nothing: it is no mean happiness,
Therefore, to be seated in the mean:
Superfluity comes sooner by white hairs,
But competency lives longer.

Portia.

Good sentences, and well pronounced.

Nerissa.

They would be better, if well followed.

Portia.

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood; but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree: such a hare is madness, the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel, the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband.—O me! the word choose! I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curbed by the will of a dead father. Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Nerissa.

Your father was ever virtuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery, that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead (whereof he chooses his meaning, chooses you), will, no doubt, have no other chosen by any right, but one whom you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Portia.

I pray thee, over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Nerissa.

First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Portia.

Ay, that's a colt, indeed. for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropiation to his own good parts, that he can shoe him himself. I am much afraid, my lady his mother play'd false with a smith.

Nerissa.

Then, is there the county Palatine.

Portia.

He doth nothing but frown, as he should say, "An you will not have me, choose." He hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's head
Act i. Sc. iii.,

MERCHANT

OF VENICE.

head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Portia.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker; but, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's; a better bad habit of frowning than the count Paleatine; he is every man in no man; if a throaty sing, he falls straight a capering: he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despie me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

What say you, then, to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Portia.

You know, I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear, that I have a poor penny-worth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; but, alas! who can converse with a dumb show?
How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Portia.

That he hath a neighbourly charity in him;
for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again, when he was able: I think, the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

How like you the young German, the duke of Saxony's nephew?

Portia.

Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober, and most vilely in the evening, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope, I shall make shift to go without him.

If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept it.

Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket; for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it.
I will do any thing, Nerissa, ere I will be mar-
rried to a spuge.

You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords: they have acquainted me with their determinations; which is indeed, to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the caskets.

If I live to be as old as Sibylta, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar, and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Yes, yes; it was Bassanio: as I think, so was he called.

True, madam: he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.—How now? what news?

Enter a Servant.

The four strangers seek for you madam, to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a firth, the prince of Morocco, who brings word, the prince, his master, will be here tonight.

If I could bid the fool welcome with so good heart, as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me. Come, Nerissa.—Sirrah, go before.
—Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door.

[Execut.

SCENE III. Venice. A public Place.

Enter Bassanio and Shylock.

Shylock.

Three thousand ducats,—well.

Bassanio.

Ay, sir, for three months.

Shylock.

For three months,—well.

Bassanio.

For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shylock.

Antonio shall become bound,—well.

May you stand me? Will you pleasure me?
Shall I know your answer?

Three thousand ducats for three months, and Antonio bound.

Your answer to that.

Antonio is a good man.

Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

Ho! no, no, no:—my meaning, in saying he is a good man, is to have you understanding, that he is sufficient; yet his means are in supposition. He hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies: I understand moreover upon the Reialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath squandered abroad; but ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats, and water-rats, water-thieves, and land-thieves;
I mean,
I mean, pirates: and then, there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks. The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient: three thousand ducats.—I think, I may take his bond.

Bassanio.

Be assured you may.

Shylock.

I will be assured, I may; and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me. May I speak with Antonio?

Bassanio.

If it please you to dine with us.

Shylock.

Yes, to smell pork: to eat of the habitation which your prophet, the Nazarite; conjured the devil into. I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto?—Who is he comes here?

Enter Antonio.

Bassanio.

This is signior Antonio. [Aside.

How like a fawning publican he looks! I hate him for he is a Christian; But more, for that, In low simplicity, He lends out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation; and he rails, Even where merchants most do congregate, On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, Which he calls interest. Cursed be my tribe, If I forgive him!

Bassanio.

Shylock, do you hear?

Shylock.

I am debating of my present store, And, by the near guess of my memory, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats. What of that? Tubat, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe, Will furnish me. But soft! how many months Do you desire?—Rest you fair, good Signior.

10 Antonio.

Your worship was the last man in our mouths.

Antonio.

Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow, By taking, nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the rife wants of my friend, I'll break a custom.—Is he yet possess'd, How much you would?

Shylock.

Ay, ay, three thousand ducats. Antonio.

And for three months.

Shylock.

I had forgot:—three months; you told me so. Well then, your bond; and let me see.—But hear you:

Methought, you said, you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage. Antonio.

I do never use it.

Shylock.

When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep, This Jacob from our holy Abraham was (As his wise mother wrought in his behalf,) The third possessor; ay, he was the third.

OF VENICE.

Antonio.

And what of him? did he take interest?

Shylock.

No, not take interest; not, as you would say, Directly interest: mark what Jacob did. When Laban and himself were compromis'd, That all the canlings which were streak'd, and pie'd, Should fall as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being rank, In end of autumn turned to the rams; And when the work of generation was Between these woolly breeders in the act, The skilful shepherd peel'd me certain wands, And, in the doing of the deed of kind, He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes, Who, then conceiving, did in eating time, Fall party-coloured lambs, and those were Jacob's.

This was a way to thrive, and he was blest: And thrift is blessing. If men steal it not.

Antonio.

This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd for; A thing not in his power to bring to pass, But say'd, and, fashion'd by the hand of heaven. What was insert't to make interest good? Or is your gold and silver, ewes and rams?

Shylock.

I cannot tell: I make it breed as fast.— But note me, signior.

Antonio.

Mark you this, Bassanio, The devil can cite scripture for his purpose. An evil soul, producing holy witness, Is like a villain with a smiling cheek, A goodly apple rotten at the heart. O, what a goodly outsie falsehood hath!

Shylock.

Three thousand ducats;—tis a good round sum.

Three months from twelve, then let me see the Antonio.

Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Shylock.

Signior Antonio, many a time and oft, In the Rialto, you have rated me About my monies, and my usances: Still have I borne it with a patient shrug; For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe. You call me—misbeliever, cut-throat dog, And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine, And all for use of that which is mine own. Well then, it now appears, you need my help: Go to then; you come to me, and you say, "Shylock, we would have monies:" you say so; You, that did void your rheaum upon my beard, And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur Over your threshold; monies is your suit. What should I say to you? Should I not say, "Hath a dog money? Is it possible, A cur can lend three thousand ducats?" or Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key, With bated breath, and whispering humbleness, Say this:—"Fair sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last; You spurn'd me such a day; another time You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies I'll lend you thus much monies?"

Antonio.

I am as like to call thee so again, To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too. If that wilt lend this money, lend it not As to thy friends; for when did friendship take A breed for barren metal of his friend? But lend it rather to thine enemy;
Who if he break, thou may'st with better face
Exact the penalty.

Shylock.

Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my monies,
And you'll not hear me. This is kind I offer.

Antonio.

This were kindness.

Shylock.

This kindness will I show.
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound.
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.

Antonio.

Content, in faith: I'll seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bassanio.

You shall not seal to such a bond for me:
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Antonio.

Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it:
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

Shylock.

O, father Abraham! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others!—Pray you, tell me this;
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour I extend this friendship;
If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;
And, for my love, I pray you, wrong me not.

Antonio.

Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shylock.

Then meet me forthwith at the notary's
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the ducats straight;
See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrift' knave, and presently
I will be with you.

[Exit.

Antonio.

Hie thee, gentle Jew.
The Hebrew will turn Christian: he grows kind.

Bassanio.

I like not fair terms, and a villain's mind.

Antonio.

Come on: in this there can be no dismay,
My ships come home a month before the day.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Belmont. An Apartment in Portia's House.

Enter the Prince of Morocco, and his Followers; Portia, Nerissa, and other of her Train. Flourish Cornets.

Morocco.

MISTLIKE me not for my complexion.
The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phoebus' fire scarce thaws the icicles,
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his, or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant: by my love, I swear,
The best regarded virgins of our clime
Have lov'd it too. I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Portia.

In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lotteries of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing;
But, if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair,
As any com'er I have look'd on yet,
For my affection.

Morocco.

Even for that I thank you:
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets,
To try my fortune. By this scimitar,—
That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince,
That won three fields of Sultan Soliman,—
I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look,
Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
To win thee, lady. But, alas the while!
If Hercules and Lichas play at dice,
Which is the better man? the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Actides beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.

Portia.

You must take your chance;
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose, if you choose wrong;
Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage: therefore be advis'd.

Morocco.

Nor will not: come, bring me unto my chance.

Portia.

First, forward to the temple: after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.

Morocco.

Good fortune then, [Cornets.
To make me blest, or cursed'st among men.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Venice. A Street.

Enter Launcelot Gobbo. Launcelot.

Certainly, my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master. The fiend is at mine elbow, elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, "Gobbo, Launcelot, Gobbo; good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away!" My conscience says,—"No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo;" or, as aforesaid, "honest Launcelot Gobbo;" do not run; soon running with thy heels." Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack: "Vie!" says the fiend; "away!" says the fiend; "for the heavens, rouse up a brave mind," says the fiend, "and run." Well, my conscience, humming about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,—"My honest friend Launcelot, being an honest man's son,—or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something else, something grow to, he had a kind of taste:—well, my conscience says, "Launcelot, budge not." "Budge," says the fiend: "budge not," says my conscience. Conscience, say I, you counsel well: fiend, say I, you counsel well; to be ruled by my conscience. I should stay with the Jew my master, (who God bless the mark is) a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly, the Jew is the devil incarnate; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a Basket.

Gobbo.

Master, young man, you; I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's? [Aside]

Launcelot.

O heavens! this is my true begotten father, who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not:—I will try conclusions with him.

Gobbo.

Master, young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Launcelot.

Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gobbo.

By God's senties, 'twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him, or no?

Launcelot.

[Aside] Talk you of young master Launcelot?—[To him.] Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gobbo.

No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man; and, God be thanked, well to live.

Launcelot.

Well, let his father be what a' will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gobbo.

Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, sir.

Launcelot.

But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gobbo.

Of Launcelot, as't please your mastership.

Launcelot.

Ergo, master Launcelot. Talk not of master

Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates, and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning,) is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say, in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gobbo.

Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very stuff of my age, my very prop.

Launcelot. [Aside] Do I look like a cudgel, or a hovel-post, a staff, or a prop?—[To him.] Do you know me, father?

Gobbo.

Alack the day! I know you not, young gentleman; but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy, (God rest his soul!) alive, or dead?

Do you not know me, father?

Gobbo.

Alack, sir, I am sand-blind: I know you not.

Launcelot.

Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you what your son says, I will give him your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long, a man's son may, but in the end truth will out.

Gobbo.

Pray you, sir, stand up. I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Launcelot.

Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gobbo.

I cannot think you are my son.

Launcelot.

I know not what I shall think of that; but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man, and, I am sure, Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gobbo.

Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord! worshipp'd might he be! what a hard heart hath a fool in him! I'll give more hair on thy chin, than Dobbin my hump-horse has on his tail.

Launcelot.

It should seem, then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward: I am sure he had more hair of his tail, than I have of my face, when I last saw him.

Gobbo.

Lord! how art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How agree you now?

Launcelot.

Well, well; but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew: give him a present! give him a halter: I am famish'd in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come; give me your present to one master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries. If I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. — O rare fortune! here comes the man:—to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with Leonardo, and Followers.

Bassanio.

You may do so; — but let it be so hasted, that
To him, father.

Gobbo.

God bless your worship.

Bassanio.

Gramercy. Would you have with me?

Gobbo. Here’s my son, sir, a poor boy,—

Lucentio. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew’s man, that would, sir,—as my father shall specify.

He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve—

Lucentio. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire,—as my father shall specify.

His master and he (saving your worship’s reverence,) are scarce cater-cousins.

Lucentio. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me,—as my father, being, I hope, an old man, shall frutily unto you.

Gobbo. I have here a dish of doves, that I would bestow upon your worship; and my suit is,— Lucentio. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your lordship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Bassanio. One speak for both.—What would you?

Lucentio. Serve you, sir.

That is the very defect of the matter, sir.

Bassanio. I know thee well: thou hast obtain’d thy suit. Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, And hath pretend’d thee; if it be preferment, To leave a rich Jew’s service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Lucentio. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bassanio. Thou speak’st it well. — Go, father, with thy son.

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire My lodging out. — Give him a livery.

[To his followers. More guarded than his fellows: see it done.

Lucentio. Father, in.—I cannot get a service, — no; I have never a tongue in my head. — Well; [Looking on his palm.] If any man in Italy have a taller table, which doth offer to swear upon a book,—I shall have good fortune. — Go to: here’s a simple line of life! here’s a small trite of wives: alas! 600en wives is nothing: eleven widows, and nine maids, is a simple coming-in for one man; and then, to scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed:—here are simple ‘scapes! Well, if fortune be a woman, she’s a good wench for this year. — Father, come; I’ll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye.

[Exeunt Lucentio and Old Gobbo.

Bassanio. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this. These things being bought, and orderly be-Return in haste, for I do feast to-night [stow’d, My best-esteem’d acquaintance: hie thee; go.

Leonardo. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter Gratiano.

Gratiano. Where is your master?

Leonardo. - Yonder, sir, he walks.

Gratiano. [Exit Leonardo.

Signior Bassanio!

Gratiano. I have a suit to you.

Bassanio. — You have obtain’d it.

Gratiano. You must not deny me. I must go with you to Belmon.

Bassanio. Why, then you must; but hear thee, Gratiano. Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice; — Parts, that become thee happily enough. And in such eyes as ours appear not faults; But where thou art not known, why, there they show Something too liberal. — Pray thee, take pain To allay with some cold drops of modesty Thy skipping spirit, lest through thy wild beha- vour, I be misconstrued in the place I go to, And lose my hopes.

Gratiano. Signior Bassanio, hear me: If I do not put on a sober habit, Talk with respect, and swear but now and then, Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look de- murely: Nay more, while grace is saying, hood mine Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say amen; Use all the observance of civility, Like one well studied in a sad ostent To please his grandam, never trust me more.

Bassanio. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gratiano. Nay, but I bar to-night: you shall not gage me By what we do to-night.

Bassanio. No, that were pity. I would entreat you rather to put on Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends That purpose merriment. Fare you well, I have some business.

Gratiano. And I must to Lorenzo, and the rest; But we will visit you at supper-time. [Exeunt.}
Will you prepare you for this masque to-night
I am provided of a torch-bearer.

Salarino.

Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.

Salanio.

And so will I.

Lorenzo.

Meet me, and Gratiano,

At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salarino.

*Tis good we do so.

[Exeunt Salarino and Salanio.]

Gratiano.

Was not that letter from fair Jessica?

Lorenzo.

I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed,
How I shall take her from her father's house;
What gold, and jewels, she is furnish'd with;
What page's suit she hath in readiness.
If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughter's sake:
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me: peruse this, as thou goest.
Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The same. Before Shylock's House.

Enter Shylock and Launcelot.

Shylock.

Well, thou shalt see; thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio. —
What, Jessica! — thou shalt not gormandize,
As thou hast done with me; — What, Jessica! —
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out. —
Why, Jessica, I say! —

Launcelot.

Why, Jessica!

Shylock.

Launcelot.

Your worship was wont to tell me, that I could do nothing without bidding.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. The same. Jessica, Shylock, Launcelot.

Call you? What is your will?

Shylock.

I am bid forth to supper, Jessica: [go? There are my keys. — But wherefore should I
I am not bid for love; they flatter me;
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian. — Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house: — I am right loath to go.
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Launcelot.

I beseech you, sir, go: my young master doth expect your approach.

Shylock.

So do I his.

Launcelot.

And they have conspired together: — I will not say, you shall see a masque; but if you do, them it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on black Monday last, at six o'clock
'the morning, falling out that year on Ash-Wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shylock.

What! are there masques? — Hear you me
Jessica: And
Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd sife,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street.
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces,
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements:
Let not the sound of shallow floppery enter
My sober house.—By Jacob's staff, I swear,
I have no mind of fasting forth to-night;
But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrah:
Say, I will come.

Lanzeleto.
I will go before, sir.—Mistress, look out at window, for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye.

Shylock.
What says that fool of Hagar's offspring? hal
Jessica.
His words were, farewell mistress; nothing else.

Shylock.
The patch is kind enough; but a huge feeder,
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day [me;]
More than the wild cat: drones hive not with Therefore I part with him, and part with him;
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in:
Perhaps I will return immediately.
Do, as I bid you; shut doors after you:
Fast bind, fast find.
A proverb never stale in thrift newcomers.

Jessica.
Farewell; and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost.

SCENE VI. The same.

Enter Gratiano and Salarino, masqued.
Gratiano.
This is the pent-house, under which Lorenzo
Desir'd us to make stand.

Salarino.
His hour is almost past.
Gratiano.
And it is marvel he be out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salarino.
O ! ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly [wont
To seal love's bonds new-made, than they are
To keep obliged faith unforfeited !

Gratiano.
That ever holds: who riseth from a feast,
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures, with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd. [are,
How like a younger, or a prodigal,
The scarred bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
How like a prodigal doth she return;
With over-weather'd ribs, and ragged sails,
Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind !

Enter Lorenzo.
Salarino.
Here comes Lorenzo:—more of this hereafter.
Lorenzo.
Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;
Not I, by my affairs have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll whate as long for you then.—Approach ;
Here dwells my father Jew:—Ho! who's within?

Enter Jessica above, in boy's clothes.
Jessica.
Who are you? Tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lorenzo.
Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jessica.
Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed,
For whom love I so much? And now who
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours? [knows,

Lorenzo.
Heaven, and thy thoughts are witness that thon art.

Jessica.
Here, catch this casket: it is worth the pains.
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange;
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit;
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lorenzo.
Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Jessica.
What! must I hold a candle to my shames?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love, [light
And I should be obscur'd.

Lorenzo.
So are you, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once:
For the close night doth play the run-away,
And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.

Jessica.
I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.

Gratiano.
Now, by my hood, a Gentle, and no Jew.

Lorenzo.
Beshrew me, but I love her heartily;
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is as she hath prov'd herself;
And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica.
What, art thou come?—On, gentlemen; away!
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit with Jessica and Salarino.

Enter Antonio.
Antonio.
Who's there?

Signior Antonio.
Antonio.
Pie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest?
'Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you.
No masque to-night: the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go abroad:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gratiano.
I am glad on't: I desire no more delight,
Than to be under sail, and gone to-night.

[Exeunt.

SCENE
SCENE VII. Belmont. An Apartment in Portia’s House.

Enter Portia, with the Prince of Morocco, and both their Trains.

Portia.

Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover The several caskets to this noble prince.— Now make your choice.

Morocco.

The first, of gold, who this inscription bears; "Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire." The second, silver, which this promise carries; "Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves." This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt; — "Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath." How shall I know if I do choose the right?

Portia.

The one of them contains my picture, prince: If you chose that, then I am yours withal.

Morocco.

Some god direct my judgment! Let me see, I will survey the inscriptions back again: What says this leaden casket? [What?]

"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he Must give — For what? for lead? hazard for lead? This casket threatens: men, that hazard all, Do it in hope of fair advantages: A golden mind stoops not to show of dross; I'll then nor give, nor hazard, aught for lead. What says the silver, with her virgin hue? "Who chooseth me shall get as much as he desires." As much as he desires? — Pause there, Morocco. And weigh thy value with an even hand. If thou best rated by thy estimation, Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough May not extend so far as to the lady; And yet to be afraid of my deserving Were but a weak disabling of myself, As much as I deserve? — Why, that's the lady: I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes, In graces, and in qualities of breeding; But more than these in love I do deserve. What if I stray'd no farther, but chose here? — Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold: "Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire." Why, that's the lady; all the world desires her: From the four corners of the earth they come, To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing saint. The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty wilds Of wide Arabia, are as thorough-fares now, For princes to come view fair Portia: The wat'ry kingdom, whose ambitious head Split in the face of heaven, is no bar To stop the foreign spirits, but they come, As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia. One of these three contains her heavenly picture. Is't like, that lead contains her? 'Twere damnation, To think so base a thought: it were too gross To rib her corecloth in the obscure grave. Or shall I think in silver she's immur'd, Being ten times undervalued to tried gold? O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem Was set in worse than gold. They have in England A coin that bears the figure of an angel Stamped in gold, but that's insculp'd upon;

But here an angel in a golden bed Lies all within. — Deliver me the key: Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may! Portia.

There, take it, prince; and if my form lie Then I am yours. [there, he unlocks the golden casket.]

Morocco.

O hell! what have we here? A carroll death, within whose empty eye There is a written scroll. I'll read the writing, "All that glister is not gold; Often have you heard that told; Many a man his life hath sold, But my outside to behold! Gilded tombs do worms infold. Had you been as wise as bold, Young in limbs, in judgment old, Your answer had not been inscriv'd: Fare you well; your suit is cold." Cold, indeed, and labour lost: Then, farewell, heat; and, welcome, frost. — Portia, adieu. I have too griev'd a heart To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.

Portia.

A gentle riddance. — Draw the curtains: go. Let all of his complexion choose me so.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. Venice. A Street.

Enter Salario and Salanio.

Salarino.

Why man, I saw Bassanio under sail: With him is Gratiano gone along: And in their ship, I'm sure Lorenzo is not.

Saliano.

The villain Jew with outwits raf'd the duke, Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.

Salarino.

He came too late, the ship was under sail. But there the duke was given to understand, That in a gondola were seen together Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica. Besides, Antonio certified the duke, They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Salarino.

I never heard a passion so confus'd, So strange, outrageous, and so variable, As the dog Jew did utter in the streets: "My daughter! — O my ducats! — O my daughter! Fled with a Christian? — O my Christian ducats! Justice! the law! my ducats, and my daughter! A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats, Of double ducats, stol'n from me by my daughter! And jewels! two stones, two rich and precious stones, Stol'n by my daughter! — Justice! find the girl! She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats!"

Saliano.

Why, all the boys in Venice follow him. Crying, his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.

Salarino.

Let good Antonio look he keep his day, Or he shall pay for this.

Salarino.

Marry, well remember'd. I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday, Who told me, in the narrow seas that part The French and English there miscarried A vessel of our country, richly fraught. I thought upon Antonio when he told me, And wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Salanio.

You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;
Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.

Salanio.

A kinder gentleman tread not the earth.
I saw Bassanio and Antonio part.
Bassanio told him, he would make some speed
Of his return: he answer'd: "Do not so;
Slumber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time:
And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love.
Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair ostents of love
As shall conveniently become you there.
And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanio's hand; and so they parted.

Salanio.

I think, he only loves the world for him.
I pray thee, let us go, and find him out,
And quickly his embraced heaviness
With some delight or other.

Salanio.

Do we so. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Belmont. An Apartment in Portia's House.

Enter Nerissa, with a Servitor.

Nerissa.

Quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight.
The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter the Prince of Arragon, Portia, and their Trains. Flourish cornets.

Portia.

Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince.
If you choose that wherein I contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Arragon.

I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose: next, if I fall
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,
If I do fall in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and me gone.

Portia.

To these injunctions every one doth swear,
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Arragon.

And so have I address'd me. Fortune now
To my heart's hope! — Gold, silver, and base lead.
(He hath: "Who choosest me must give and hazard all
You shall look fairer, ere I give, or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! I let me see: — "Who choosest me shall gain what many men desire,
What many men desire: — that many may be
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;
Which pries not to th' interior, but, like the martlet,
Builds in the weather, on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
"Who choosest me shall get as much as he deserves:"
And well said too; for who shall go about
To cozen fortune, and be honourable,
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O! that estates, degrees, and offices, [Honour
Were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear
Wert purchased by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover, that stand bare;
How many he commanded, that command;
How much low peasantry would then be glem'd
From the true seed of honour; and how much honour
Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:
"Who choosest me shall get as much as he deserves."
I will assume desert: — Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Portia.

Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Arragon.

What's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot,
Presenting me a schedule? I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia? —
How much unlike my hopes, and my deservings! —
"Who choosest me shall have as much as he deserves."
Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Portia.

To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Arragon.

"The fire seven times tried this:
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never choose amiss.
Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss.
There bo' fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So begone: you are sped."
Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two. —
Sweet, adieu; I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wrotch.

[Exeunt Arragon, and Train.]

Portia.

Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O, these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Nerissa.

The ancient saying is no heresy: —
Hanging and wlying goes by destiny.

Portia.

Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.

Where is my lady?

Portia.

Here; what would my lord?

Messenger.

Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signify the approaching of his lord,
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;
To wit, (besides commends, and courteous breath,) Gifts of rich value; yet I have not seen
So likely an ambassador of love.
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand.
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

Portia.

No more, I pray thee: I am half afeard,
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising
him.—

Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see
Quick Cupid's post, that comes so mannerly.

Nerissa.

Bassanio, lord love, if thy will it be. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Venice. A Street.

Enter Salanio and Salarino

Saliano.

Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salarino.

Why, yet it lives there uncheck'd, that Antonio hath a ship of rich laden wreck'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place:
a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip, report, be an honest woman of her word.

I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband.
But it is true, without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain high-way of talk, that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio,—O, that I had a title good enough to keep his name company I—

Salarino.

Come, the full stop.

Saliano.

Ha!—what say'st thou?—Why the end is,
he hath lost a ship.

Salarino.

I would it might prove the end of his losses.

Saliano.

Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.—

Enter Shylock.

How now, Shylock? what news among the merchants?

Shylock.

You knew, none so well, none so well as you,
of my daughter's flight.

Salarino.

That's certain: I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Saliano.

And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledg'd: and then, it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shylock.

She is damned for it.

Salarino.

That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Shylock.

My own flesh and blood to rebel! Shylock.

Salarino.

Out upon it, old carrion! rebels it at these years?

Shylock.

She, my daughter, is my flesh and blood.

Salarino.

There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods, than there is between red wine and rhenish. But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shylock.

There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto;—a beggar, that used to come so smug upon the mart. Let him look to his bond:
he was wont to call me usurer;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy;—let him look to his bond.

Salarino.

Why, am I sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh: what's that good for?

Shylock.

To bait fish withal; if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me half a million; laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same kind of food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? if you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? revenge. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? why, revenge. The villainy you teach me, I will exe-cte; and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Servant.

Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salarino.

We have been up and down to seek him.

Saliano.

Here comes another of the tribe: a third cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew. [Exeunt Salanio, Salarino, and Servant.

Enter Tubal.

Shylock.

How now, Tubal? what news from Genoa?
hast thou found my daughter?

Tubal.

I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shylock.

Why there, there, there, there! a diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfurt.

The
ACT III. SC. II.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

The curse never fell upon our nation till now; I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels. I would, my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats in her coif! No news of them?—Well; and I know not what's spent in the search: Why thou—loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief, and no satisfaction, no revenge; nor no ill luck stirring, but what lights o' my shoulders; no sights, but o' my breathing; no tears, but o' my shedding.

Tubal. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,— Shylock. What, what, what? I'll luck, ill luck?

Tubal. Hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis.

Shylock. I thank God! I thank God! Is it true? is it true?

Tubal. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck.

Shylock. I thank thee, good Tubal. — Good news, good news! ha! ha!—Where? In Genoa?

Tubal. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.

Shylock. Thou stick'st a dagger in me. I shall never see my gold again. Fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!

Tubal. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shylock. I am very glad of it. I'll plague him; I'll torture him: I am glad of it.

Tubal. One of them showed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shylock. Out upon her! Thou tortur' me, Tubal: it was my turquoise; I had it of Leah, when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tubal. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shylock. Nay, that's true, that's very true. Go, Tubal, fee me an officer; bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have the heart of him, if he forfet; for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will. Go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue: go, good Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Belmont. An Apartment in Portia's House.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, Nerissa, and their Attendants. The caskets set out.

Portia. I pray you tarry: pause a day or two, Before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong, I lose your company; therefore, forbear a while. There's something tells me, (but it is not love,) I would not lose you, and you know yourself, Hate counsels not in such a quality. But lest you should not understand me well, And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought, I would detain you here some month or two, Before you venture for me. I could teach you, How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be: so may you miss me; But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin, That I had been forsworn. Beswore your eyes, They have o'er-look'd me, and divided me; One half of me is yours, the other half yours,— Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then yours, And so all yours! O! these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights; And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so, Let fortune go to hell for it,—not I. I speak too long; but 'tis to peize the time, To eke it, and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Bassanio. Let me choose;

For, as I am, I live upon the rack.

Portia. Upon the rack, Bassanio? then confess What treasure there is mingled with your love.

Bassanio. None, but that ugly treason of mistrust, Which makes me fear th' enjoying of my love. There may as well be amity and life 'Twixt snow and fire, as, I, Bassanio, and my love.

Portia. Ay, but, I fear, you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak any thing.

Bassanio. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Portia. Well then, confess, and live.

Bassanio. Confess, and love, Had been the very sum of my confession. O, happy torment, when my torturer DOTH teach me answers for deliverance! But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Portia. Away then. I am lock'd in one of them: If you do love me, you will find me out.— Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof. Let music sound, while he doth make his choice; Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end, Fading in music: that the comparison [stream, May stand more proper, my eye shall be the And watery death-bed for him. He may win, And what is music then? then music Is even as the flourish when true subjects bow To a new-crowned monarch: such it is, As are those dulcet sounds in break of day, That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear, And summon him to marriage. Now he goes, With no less presence, but with much more love, Than young Alcides, when he did redeem The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice, The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives, With bleared visages, come forth to view The issue of th'-exploit. Go, Hercules! Live thou, I live:—with much, much more dismay

I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray.

A Song, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

Tell me, where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head?

How
Holo begot, how nourished?
Reply, reply.

It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.

Let us all ring fancy's knell;
It will begin.

Ding, dong, bell.

Bassanio.

So may the outward shows be least themselves.
The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Ocures the show of evil? in religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules, and crowning Mars,
Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk;
And these assume but valour's excrement,
To render them resolutely.
Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchase'd by the weight;
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crisp'd snaky golden locks, [wind,
Which make such wanton gambols with the Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second shore,
The scull that bred them, in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea, the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou guazy
Hard food for Midas. I will none of thee. [gold,
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Twixt man and man: but thou, thou meaner lead,
Aught, Which rather threatnest than dost promise
Thy paleness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I joy be the consequence!

Portia.

How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embra'd despair,
And shuddering fear and green-eyed jealousy.
O love I be moderate; alway thy ecstasy;
In measure rein thy joy; scant this excess:
I feel too much thy blessing; make it less,
For fear I surfeit!

Bassanio.

What find I here?

Opening the leaden casket.

Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi-god
Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes?
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine
Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips,
Parted with sugar breath: so sweet a bar
Should sunder such sweet friends. Here, in her hairs,
The painter plays the spider, and hath woven
A golden mesh t'entrap the hearts of men,
Faster than gnats in cobwebs; but her eyes I—
How could he see to do them? having made one,
[his,
Metiticks, it should have power to steal both
And leave itself unfinancial: yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow

In underprizing it, so far this shadow [scroll,
Doth limp behind the substance. Here's the continent and summary of my fortune.

"You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair, and choose as true!
Since this fortune fails to you,
Be content, and seek no new.
If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
'Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss."

A gentle scroll.—Fair lady, by your leave;
I come by note, to give, and to receive.

Kissing lur.

Like one of two containing in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause, and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so.
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratify'd by you.

Portia.

You see me, lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am: though, for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet for you
I would be resolved twenty times myself;
A thought a times more fair, ten thousand times more rich,
That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account; but the full sum of me
Is sum of nothing: which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, impractis'd:
Happy in this, she is not yet so old.
But she may learn: happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself, and what is mine, to you, and yours
Is now converted: but now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same my self.
Are yours, my lord. I give them with this ring,
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bassanio.

Madam, you have bereft me of all words:
Only my blood speaks to you in my veins;
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As after some ordination, fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing. Save of joy, Express'd, and not express'd. But when this is hence:
Parts from this finger, then parts like from O I then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead.

Nerissa.

My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes prosper
To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord, and lady

Gratiano.

My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish,
For, I am sure, you can wish none from me;
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bassanio.
Bassanio.

With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.
Gratiano.

I thank your lordship, you have got me one.
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress. I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For wounding here, until I sweat again,
And swearing, till my very roof was dry
With oats of love, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.

Portia.

Is this true, Nerissa?

Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.
Bassanio.

And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?
Gratiano.

Yes, 'faith, my lord.
Bassanio.

Our feast shall be much honoured in your marriage.
Gratiano.

We'll play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.
Nerissa.

What! and stake down?
Gratiano.

No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down. —
But who comes here? Lorenzo, and his infidel?
What! and my old Venetian friend, Salerio?
Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salerio.
Bassanio.

Lorenzo, and Salerio, welcome hither,
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome. — By your leave
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.
Portia.

So do I, my lord:
They are entirely welcome,
Lorenzo.

I thank your honour. — For my part, my
lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.
Salerio.

I did, my lord,
And I have reason for it. Siguror Antonio
Commends him to you.

[Give Bassanio a letter
Bassanio.

Ere I ope his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.
Salerio.

Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate.
Gratiano.

Nerissa, cheer you stranger; bid her welcome.

Act III. Sc. II.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Your hand, Salerio: what's the news in Venice?
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know, he will be glad of our success:
We are the Jussons, we have won the fleece.

Salerio.

I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost!

Portia.

There are some shrewd contents in your same paper.
That steal the colour from Bassanio's check:
Some dear friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse? —
With leave, Bassanio! I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.
Bassanio.

O sweet Portia!
Here are a few of the unpleasant't words
That over bilotted Prince, Julia, and
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had Ran in my veins — I was a gentleman:
And then I told you true, and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart. When I told you My state was nothing, I should then have told
you,
That I was worse than nothing: for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood. — But is it true, Salerio?
Have all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marrying rocks?

Salerio.

Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the duke at morning, and at night,
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice; twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him,
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Jessica.

When I was with him I have heard him swear
To Tubal, and to Otho, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh,
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him; and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Portia.

Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?

Bassanio.

The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies; and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears,
Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Portia.

What sum owes he the Jew?

Bassanio.
Bassanio.

For me, three thousand ducats.

Portia.

What, no more?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond: Double six thousand, and then trouble that, Before a friend of this description Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.

First, go with me to church, and call me wife, And then away to Venice to your friend; For never shall you lie by Portia's side With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold To pay the petty debt twenty times over. When it is paid, bring your true friend along. My maid Nerissa and myself, mean time, Will live as maids and widows. Come, away! For you shall hence upon your wedding-day. Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer; Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.— But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Bassanio. [Heads.

"Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since in paying it it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death. Notwithstanding, use your pleasure: if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter." Portia.

O love! despatch all business, and begone.

Bassanio.

Since I have your good leave to go away, I will make haste; but till I come again, No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay, Nor rest be interpos'd but only twixt us twain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Venice. A Street.

Enter Shylock, Salanio, Antonio, and Balthasar.

Shylock.

I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond: I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond. Thou calldst me dog before thou hadst a cause, But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs. The duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder, Thou naught jarror, that thou art so fond To come abroad with him at his request.

Antonio.

I pray thee, hear me speak.

Shylock.

I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak; I'll have my bond, and therefore speak no more. I'll not be made a soft and dull-eved fool, To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield To Christian intercessors. Follow not; I'll have no speaking: I will have my bond.

Salaio.

It is the most impenetrable cur, That ever kept with men.

Antonio.

Let him alone; I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers. He seeks my life; his reason well I know. I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures Many that have at times made moan to me: Therefore he hates me.

Salaio.

I am sure, the duke Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.

Antonio.

The duke cannot deny the course of law; For the commodity that strangers have With us in Venice, if it be denied, Will much impeach the justice of the state; Since that the trade and profit of the city Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go: These griefs and losses have so 'bated me, That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh To-morrow to my bloody creditor.— Well, j dryer, on.—Pray God, Bassanio come To see me pay his debt, and then I care not! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and Balthazar.

Lorenzo.

Madam, although I speak it in your presence You have a noble and a true conciet Of god-like amity, which appears most strong. In bearing thus the absence of your lord. But, if you knew to whom you show this honour How true a gentleman you send relief, How dear a lover of my lord, your husband, I know, you would be prouder of the work, Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Portia.

I never did repent for doing good, Nor shall not now: for in companions That do converse and waste the time together, Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love, There must be needs a like proportion Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit; Which makes me think, that this Antonio, Being the bosom lover of my lord, Must needs be like my lord. If it be so, How little is the cost! I have bestow'd, In purchasing the semblance of my soul From out the state of heilish cruelty! This comes too near the praising of myself. Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.— Lorenzo, I commit into your hands The husbandry and manage of my house, Until my lord's return: for mine own part, I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow To live in prayer and contemplation, Only attended by Nerissa here, Until her husband and my lord's return. There is a monastery two miles off, And there we will abide. I do desire you Not to deny this imposition, The which my love, and some necessity, Now lays upon you.

Lorenzo.

Madam, with all my heart I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Portia.

My people do already know my mind, And will acknowledge you and Jessica In place of lord Bassanio and myself. So fare you well, till we shall meet again. Lorenzo.

Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on you! Jessica.

I wish your ladyship all heart's content.
Portia.

I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.—

[Exit Jessica and Lorenzo.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Act III. Sc. v.

Portia.

Now, Balthasar, as I have ever found thee honest, true, And let me find thee still. Take this same letter, And use thou all the endeavours of a man, In speed to Padua: see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario; And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee, Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the Tranceto, to the common ferry Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words, But get thee gone: I shall be there before thee.

Balthasar.

Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

Portia.

Come on, Nerissa: I have work in hand, That you yet know not of. We'll see our husband before they think of us.

Nerissa.

Shall they see us?

Portia.

They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit, That they shall think we are accomplished With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager, When we are both accounted like young men, I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two, And wear my dagger with thebraver grace; And speak between the change of man and boy, With a reed voice; and turn two mining steps Into a manly stride; and speak of tray, Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lies, How honourable ladies sought my love, Which I denying, they fell sick and died; I could not do withal:—then, I'll repent. And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them. And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell, That men shall swear, I have discontinued school Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks, Which I will practise.

Nerissa.

Why, shall we turn to men?

Portia.

Fie! what a question's that, If thou wert near a lewd interpreter. But come: I'll tell thee all my whole device When I am in my coach, which stays for us At the park gate; and therefore haste away, For we must measure twenty miles to-day.

[Exit.

Enter Launcelot and Jessica.

Launcelot.

Yes, truly: for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; there- fore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter; therefore, be of good cheer; for, truly, I think, you are damned. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good, and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jessica.

And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Launcelot.

Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not; that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jessica.

That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed: so the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Launcelot.

Truly, then, I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother. Well, you are gone both ways.

Jessica.

I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Launcelot.

Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians now before; e'en as many as could well live one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: If we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Jessaic.

I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say: here he comes.

Lorenzo.

I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jessica.

Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo: Launcelot and I are out. He tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter; and he says, you are no good member of thecommonwealth, for in converting Jews to Christians you raise the price of pork.

Lorenzo.

I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Launcelot.

It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is, indeed, more than I took her for.

Lorenzo.

How every fool can play upon the word! I think, the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots.—Go in, sirrah: bid them prepare for dinner.

Launcelot. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lorenzo.

Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then, bid them prepare dinner.

Launcelot.

That is done too, sir; only, cover is the word.

Lorenzo.

Will you cover then, sir?

Launcelot.

Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lorenzo.

Yet more quarrelling with occasion? Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows, bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Launcelot.

For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern.

ACT III. SC. V.

Lorenzo.

O, dear discretion, how his words are suited! The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; and I do know A many fools, that stand in better place, Garnish'd like him, that for a truculent word Doth the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion; How dost thou like the lord Bassanio's wife? Jessica.

Past all expressing. It is very meet, The lord Bassanio live an upright life, For, having such a blessing in his lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth; And, if on earth he do not mean it, then, In reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match, And on the wager lay two earthly women. And Portia one, there must be something else Pawn'd with the other, for the poor rude world Hath not her fellow. Lorenzo.

Even such a husband Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife. Jessica.

 Nay, but ask my opinion, too, of that. Lorenzo.

I will anon; first, let us go to dinner. Jessica.

 Nay, let me praise you, while I have a stomach. Lorenzo.

 No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk; Then, howso'er thou speak'st, 'mong other I shall digest it. Jessica.

 Well, I'll set you forth. [Exeunt.

—ACT IV.

Enter the Duke; the Magnificoes: Antonio, Bassanio, Gratiano, Salarino, Saliando, and others.

Duke.

What, is Antonio here? Antonio.

Ready, so please your grace. Duke.

I am sorry for thee: thou art come to answer A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch Uncapable of pity, void and empty From any dram of mercy. Antonio.

I have heard, Your grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate, And that no lawful means can carry me Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose My patience to his fury, and am arm'd To suffer with a quietness of spirit, The very tyranny and rage of his. Duke.

Go one, and call the Jew into the court.

Saliando.

He's ready at the door. He comes, my lord. Enter Shylock.

Duke.

Make room, and let him stand before our face.— Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too, That thou hast beat'st this fashion of thy malice To the last hour of act; and then, 'tis thought, Thou'lt show thy mercy and remorse, more strange Than is thy strange apparent cruelty: And where thou now exact'st the penalty, Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh, Thou wilt not only loose the forfeiture, But, touch'd with human gentleness and love, Forgive a moiety of the principal; Glancing an eye of pity on his losses, That have of late so buff'dled on his back, Know to press a royal merchant down, And pluck commiseration of his state From brassy bosoms, and rough hearts of flint, From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never train'd To offices of tender courtesy. We all expect a gentle answer, Jew. Shylock.

I have possess'd your grace of what I purpose; And by my holy Sabbath have I sworn To have the due and forfeit of my bond: If you deny it, let the danger light Upon your charter, and your city's freedom. You'll ask me, why I rather choose to have A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive Three thousand ducats? I'll not answer that: But, say, it is my humour: is it answer'd? What if my house be troubled with a rat, And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats To have it baned? What, are you answer'd yet? Some men there are love not a gaping pig; Some, that are mad if they behold a cat; And others, when the bag-pipe sings in the nose, Cannot contain their urine; for affection, Master of passion, sways it to the mood Of what it likes, or loaths. Now, for your answer: As there is no firm reason to be render'd, Why he cannot abide a gaping pig; Why he, a harmless necessary cat; Why he, a woollen bag-pipe; but of force Must yield to such inevitable shame, As to offend, himself being offended, So cannot I give no reason, nor I will not. More than a lode'd hate, and a certain loathing, I bear Antonio, that I follow thus A losing suit against him. Are you answer'd? Bassanio.

This is no answer, thou unfeeling man, To excuse the current of thy cruelty. Shylock.

I am not bound to please thee with my answer. Bassanio.

Do all men kill the things they do not love? Shylock.

Hates any man the thing he would not kill? Bassanio.

Every offence is not a hate at first. Shylock.

What I wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice? Antonio.

I pray you, think you question with the Jew. You may as well go stand upon the beach, And bid the main flood bat his usual height.
MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Act 4 Sc 1
You may as well use question with the wolf, Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb; You may as well forbid the mountain pines To wag their high tops, and to make no noise, When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven; You may as well do any thing most hard, As to seek to soften that (than which's harder?) His Jewish heart.—Therefore, I do beseech you, Make no more offers, use no farther means, But with all brief and plain convenience, Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

Bassanio.

For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

Shylock.

If every ducat in six thousand ducats Were in six parts, and every part a ducat, I would not draw them: I would have my bond.

Duke.

How shall thou hope for mercy, rendering none?

Shylock.

What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong? You have among you many a purchaser’s slave, Which, like your asses, and your dogs, and you use in abject and in slavish parts, [mules, Because you bought them:—shall I say to you, Let them be free; marry them to your heirs? Why sweat they under burdens? let their beds Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates Be season’d with such viands? You will answer, The slaves are ours. — So do I answer you: The pound of flesh, which I demand of him, Is dearly bought, ’tis mine, and I will have it. If you deny me, fie upon your law! There is no force in the decrees of Venice. I stand for judgment: answer; shall I have it?

Duke.

Upon my power I may dismiss this court, Unless Bellario, a learned doctor, Whom I have sent for to determine this, Come here to-day.

Salarino.

My lord, here stays without A messenger with letters from the doctor, New come from Padua.

Duke.

Bring us the letters: call the messenger.

Bassanio.

Good cheer, Antonio! What man, courage yet! [all, The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and Eric thou shalt lose for one drop of blood.

Antonio.

I am a tainted weaver of the flock, Mearest for death: the weakest kind of fruit Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me. You cannot better be employ’d, Bassanio, Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa, dressed like a lawyer’s clerk.

Duke.

Came you from Padua, from Bellario? Nerissa.

From both, my lord. Bellario greets your grace. [Presents a letter.

Bassanio.

Why dost thou what thy knife so earnestly?

Shylock.

To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.
Duke.

Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.

Portia.

Is your name Shylock?

Shylock.

Shylock is my name.

Portia.

Of a strange nature is the suit you follow; Yet in such rule, that the Venetian law Cannot impugn you, as you do proceed. — You stand within his danger, do you not? [To Antonio.

Antonio.

Ay, so he says.

Portia.

Do you confess the bond?

Antonio.

I do.

Portia.

Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shylock.

On what compulsion must I? tell me that.

Portia.

The quality of mercy is not strain'd, It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd; It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes: 'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes The throne-warded monarch better than his crown: His sceptre shows the force of temporal power, The attribute to awe and majesty, Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings; But mercy is above this sceptred sway: It is enthroned in the hearts of kings, It is an attribute to God himself: And earthly power doth then show likest God's, When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew, Though Justice be thy plea, consider this, — That in the course of justice none of us Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy. And that same prayer doth teach us all to render The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much, To mitigate the justice of thy plea, Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.

Shylock.

My deeds upon my head: I crave the law; The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Portia.

Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bassanio.

Yes, here I tender it for him in the court; Yea, twice the sum: if that will not suffice, I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er, On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart. If this will not suffice, it must appear That malice bears down truth: and, I beseech You, To do a great right, do a little wrong, And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Portia.

It must not be. There is no power in Venice Can alter a decree established: 'Twill be recorded for a precedent, And many an error, by the same example, Will rush into the state. It cannot be.

Shylock.

A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel! — O, wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

Portia.

I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shylock.

Here 'tis, most reverend doctor; here it is.

Portia.

Shylock, there's thrice the money offered thee.

Shylock.

An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven; Shall I lay perjury upon my soul? No, not for Venice.

Portia.

Why, this bond is forfeit, And lawfully by this the Jew may claim A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off Nearest the merchant's heart. — Be merciful; Take thrice the money: bid me tear the bond.

Shylock.

When it is paid according to the tenor. — It doth appear you are a worthy judge; You know the law: your exposition Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law, Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar, Proceed to judgment. By my soul I swear, There is no power in the tongue of man To alter me. I stay here on my bond.

Antonio.

Most heartily I do beseech the court To give the judgment.

Portia.

Why then, thus is —

You must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Shylock.

O, noble judge! O, excellent young man!

Portia.

For the intent and purpose of the law, Hath full relation to the penalty Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Shylock.

'Tis very true. O, wise and upright judge! How much more elder art thou than thy looks!

Portia.

Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Shylock.

Ay, his breast; So says the bond: — doth it not, noble judge? — Nearest his heart: those are the very words. —

Portia.

It is so. Are there balance here to weigh The flesh?

Shylock.

I have them ready.

Portia.

Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge, To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.

Shylock.

Is it so nominated in the bond?

Portia.

It is not so express'd; but what of that?

Shylock.

'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Portia.

I cannot find it: 'tis not in the bond.

Portia.

You, merchant, have you any thing to say?

Antonio.

But little: I am arm'd, and well prepar'd. — Give me your hand, Bassanio: fare you well. Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you, For herein fortune shows herself more kind Than is her custom: it is still her use To let the wretched man out-live his wealth, To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow, An age of poverty; from which lingering penance
Of such misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife:
Tell her the process of Antonio's end;
Say, how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;
And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.
Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt.
For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bassanio.

Antonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as dear to me as life itself;
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all,
Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Portia.

Your wife would give you little thanks for
If she were by to hear you make the offer. [that,

Gratiano.

I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love:
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some power to change this currish Jew.

Nerissa.

'Tis well you offer it behind her back:
The wish would make else an unquiet house.

Shylock.

These be the Christian husbands! I have a
Would any of the stock of Barrabas [daughter:
Had been her husband, rather than a Christian!
We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence.

Portia.

A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine:
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.

Shylock.

Most rightful judge!

And you must cut this flesh from off his breast:
The law allows it, and the court awards it.

Shylock.

Most learned judge!—A sentence I come, prepare!

Portia.

Tarry a little: there is something else—
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are, a pound of flesh:
Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of
But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed flesh;
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the laws of Venice confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.

Gratiano.

O upright judge!—Mark, Jew:—O learned judge!

Shylock.

Is that the law?

Portia.

Thyself shalt see the act;
For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd,
Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desirest.

Gratiano.

O learned judge!—Mark, Jew:—a learned judge!

Shylock.

I take this offer then: pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian go.

Bassanio.

Here is the money.

Portia.

Soft! [haste:—
The Jew shall have all justice:—soft!—no
He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gratiano.

O Jew! an upright Judge, a learned judge!

Portia.

Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the flesh.
Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more,
But just a pound of flesh: if thou takst more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple; nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gratiano.

A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

Portia.

Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.

Shylock.

Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bassanio.

I have it ready for thee: here it is.

Portia.

He hath refuse'd it in the open court:
He shall have merely justice, and his bond.

Gratiano.

A Daniel, still say I: a second Daniel!—
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shylock.

Shall I not have barely my principal?

Portia.

Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

Shylock.

Why then the devil give him good of it.
I'll stay no longer question.

Portia.

Tarry, Jew:
The law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the laws of Venice,
If it be prov'd against an alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts,
He seek the life of any citizen,
The party, 'gainst the which he doth contrive,
Shall seize one half his goods: the other half
Comes to the privy coffer of the state;
And the offender's life lies in the mercy
Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.
In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st:
For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That, indirectly, and directly too,
Thou hast contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant, and thou hast incur'd
The danger formerly by me rehears'd.
Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.

Gratiano.

Beg, that thou may'st have leave to hang thyself;
And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord, [charge.
Therefore, thou must be hang'd at the state's

Duke.

That thou shalt see the difference of our
I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it. [spirit,
For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's!
The other half comes to the general state,
Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.

Portia.

Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.

Shylock.

Nay, take my life and all: pardon not that:
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life,
When you do take the means whereby I live.

Portia.
What mercy can you render him, Antonio?
Gratiano.

A halter gratis; nothing else, for God’s sake!

Antonio.

So please my lord the duke, and all the court,
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content, so he will let me have
The other half in use, to render it,
Upon his death, unto the gentleman
That lately stole his daughter;
He, and the other, that he do record a gift,
Here in the court, of all he dies possess’d,
Unto his son Lorenzo, and his daughter.

Duke.

He shall do this, or else I do recant
The pardon, that I late pronounced here.

Portia.
Art thou contented, Jew? what dost thou say?
Shylock.

I am content.

Portia.
Clerk, draw a deed of gift.
Shylock.

I pray you, give me leave to go from hence,
I am not well. Send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.

Duke.

Get thee gone, but do it.

Gratiano.

In christening thou shalt have two godfathers:
Had I been judge, thou should’st have had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallows, not the font.

Duke.

Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.

Portia.
I humbly do desire your grace of pardon:
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duke.

I am sorry, that your leisure serves you not.
Antonio, gratify this gentleman,
For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.
[Exeunt Duke, Magnificoes, and Train.

Bassano.

Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend
Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof,
Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,
We freely cope your courteous pains withal.

Antonio.

And stand indebted, over and above,
In love and service to you evermore.

Portia.
He is well paid, that is well satisfied;
And I, delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account myself well paid;
My mind was never yet more mercenary,
I pray you, know me, when we meet again:
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.

Bassano.

Dear sir, of force I must attempt you farther:
Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
Not as a fee. Grant me two things, I pray you;
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Portia.
You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
Give me your gloves, I’ll wear them for your sake;
You.

And, for your love, I’ll take this ring from
Do not draw back your hand; I’ll take no more,
And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bassano.

This ring, good sir?—alas, it is a trifle;
I will not shame myself to give you this.

Portia.
I will have nothing else but only this;
And now, methinks, I have a mind to it.

Bassano.

There’s more depends on this, than on the value.
The dearest ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation;
Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.

Portia.
I see, sir, you are liberal in offers:
You taught me first to beg, and now, methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answer’d.

Bassano.

Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;
And when she put it on she made me vow,
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.

Portia.
That ‘scuse serves many men to save their
An if your wife be not a mad woman,
Gifts, and know how well I have deserv’d this ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever,
For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you.
[Exeunt Portia and Nerissa.

Antonio.

My lord Bassano, let him have the ring:
Let his deservings, and my love withal,
Be valued ‘gainst your wife’s commandment.

Bassano.

Go, Gratiano; run and overtake him,
Give him the ring, and bring him, if thou canst,
Unto Antonio’s house.—Away I make haste.
[Exeunt Gratiano.

Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. A Street.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Portia.
Inquire the Jew’s house out, give him this deed,
And let him sign it. We’ll away to-night,
And be a day before our husbands home.
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Fair sir, you are well o’erta’en.
My lord Bassano, upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this ring, and doth entreat
Your company at dinner.

Portia.
That cannot be.
His ring I do accept most thankfully,
And so, I pray you, tell him; furthermore,
I pray you, show my youth old Shylock’s house.

Gratiano.
That will I do.

Nerissa.
Sir, I would speak with you.—

[To Portia.

I’ll see if I can get my husband’s ring;
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Portia
ACT V.

SCENE I. Belmont. The Avenue to Portia's House.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lorenzo. The moon shines bright. — In such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
And they did make no noise; in such a night,
Troylus, methinks, mounted the Trojan walls,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Creussa lay that night.

Jessica. In such a night,
Did Thibes fearfully o'ertrip the dew;
And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismay'd away.

Lorenzo. In such a night,
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and war'd her love
To come again to Carthage.

Jessica. In such a night,
Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Aeson.

Lorenzo. In such a night,
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an unthrift love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jessica. In such a night,
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.

Lorenzo. In such a night,
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slander her love, and he forgave it her.

Jessica. I would out-night you, did no body come;
But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Stephano

Lorenzo. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

Stephano. A friend.

Lorenzo. A friend? what friend? your name, I pray you, friend?

Stephano. Stephano is my name; and I bring word,
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lorenzo. Who comes with her?

Stephano. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd?

Lorenzo. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.—
But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Launcelot.

Launcelot. Sola, sola! wo ha, ho! sola, sola!

Lorenzo. Who calls?

Launcelot. Sola! did you see master Lorenzo, and mistress Lorenzo? sola, sola!

Lorenzo. Leave hallooing, man; here.

Launcelot. Sola! where? where?

Lorenzo. Here.

Launcelot. Tell him, there's a post come from my master,
With his horn full of good news: my master will be here ere morning.

Lorenzo. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.
And yet no matter; — why should we go in?
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand;
And bring your music forth into the air.

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here we will sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears: soft stillness, and the night,
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sits, Jessica: look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold;
There's not the smallest orb, which thou behold'st,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins:
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But, whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a hymn:
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music.

Jessica. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lorenzo. The reason is, your spirits are attentive: For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unwieldy colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but hear, perchance, a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of music: therefore, the poet
Did flog that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and Floos.
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spiles:
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus.
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter Portia and Nerissa, at a distance.

Portia.
That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Nerissa.
When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.

Portia.
So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! hark!

Nerissa.
It is your music, madam, of the house.

Portia.
Nothing is good, I see, without respect:
Methinks, it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Nerissa.
Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Portia.
The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
When neither is attended; and, I think,
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection!
—Peace! how the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd! [Music ceases.

Lorenzo.
That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Portia.
He knows me, as the blind man knows the
By the bad voice.

Lorenzo.
Dear lady, welcome home.

Portia.
We have been praying for our husbands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for our words.
Are they return'd?

Lorenzo.
Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Portia.
Go in, Nerissa; Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence; — Nor you, Lorenzo; — Jessica, nor you.

Lorenzo.
Your husband is at hand: I hear his trumpet.
We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.

Portia.
This night, methinks, is but the daylight sick;
It looks a little paler: 'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bassanio.
We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Portia.
Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me: [lord. But God sort all! — You are welcome home, my

Bassanio.
I thank you, madam. Give welcome to my
This is the man, this is Antonio, [friend: To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Portia.
You should In all sense be much bound to him,
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Antonio.
No more than I am well acquit of.

Portia.
Sir, you are very welcome to our house;
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy.

Gratiano. [To Nerissa.
By yonder moon, I swear, you do me wrong;
In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk:
Would he were gelt that had it, for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Portia.
A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?

Gratiano.
About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give me; whose poye was
For all the world, like cutters' poetry
Upon a knife, "Love me, and leave me not."

Nerissa.
What talk you of the poye, or the value?
You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till your hour of death,
And that it should lie with you in your grave:
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective, and have kept it.

Gave it a judge's clerk I no, God's my judge,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on his face, that had it.

Gratiano.
He will, an if he live to be a man.

Nerissa.
Ay, if a woman live to be a man.

Gratiano.
Now, by this hand. I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy: a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk;
A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee:
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Portia.
You were to blame. I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And so rivet'd with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands:
I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano.
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief:
An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.

Bassanio. [Aside.
Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the ring defending it.
Gratiano.

My lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg’d it, and, indeed,
Deserv’d it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg’d mine:
And neither man, nor master, would take aught
But the two rings.

Portia.

What ring, gave you, my lord?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv’d of me.

Bassanio.

If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see, my finger
Hath not the ring upon it: it is gone.

Portia.

Even so void is your false heart of truth.
By heaven, I will ne’er come in your bed
Until I see the ring.

Nerissa.

Nor I in yours,
Till I again see mine.

Bassanio.

Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,
When naught would be accepted but the ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.

Portia.

If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring.
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas’d to have defended it
With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony?
Nerissa teaches me what to believe:
I’ll die for’t, but some woman had the ring.

Bassanio.

No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul,
No woman had it; but a civil doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begg’d the ring, the which I did deny him,
And suffer’d him to go displeas’d away.
Even he that had held up the very life
Lady? Of my dearest friend. What should I say, sweet
I was enforc’d to send it after him:
I was beset with shame and courtesy;
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmirch it. Pardon me, good lady,
For, by these blessed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think, you would have Begg’d the ring of me to give the worthy doctor.

Portia.

I let not that doctor e’er come near my house.
Since he hath got the jewel that I lov’d,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you:
I’ll not deny him anything I have;
No, not my body, nor my husband’s bed,
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Lie not a night from home: watch me like
If you do not, if I be left alone,
[Argus; Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I’ll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Nerissa.

And I his clerk; therefore, be well advis’d
How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gratiano.

Well, do you so: let not me take him then;
For, if I do, I’ll mar the young clerk’s pen.

Antonio.

I am th’ unhappy subject of these quarrels.

Portia.

Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome not-withstanding.

Bassanio.

Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong,
And in the hearing of these many friends
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself,—

Portia.

Mark you but that I
In both my eyes he doubtfully sees himself;
In each eye, one:—swear by your double self,
And there’s an oath of credit.

Bassanio.

Nay, but hear me.
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Antonio.

I once did lend my body for his wealth,
Which, but for him that had your husband’s ring
Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

Portia.

Then, you shall be his surety. Give him this,
And bid him keep it better than the other.

Antonio.

Here, lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring.

Bassanio.

By heaven! It is the same I gave the doctor.

Portia.

I had it of him; pardon me, Bassanio,
For by this ring the doctor lay with me.

Nerissa.

And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano,
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor’s clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.

Gratiano.

Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough.
What are we cuckolds, ere we have deserv’d it?

Portia.

Speak not so grossly: You are all amaz’d;
Here is a letter, read it at your leisure;
It comes from Padua, from Bellario:
There you shall find, that Portia was the doctor:
Nerissa there, her clerk. Lorenzo, here,
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you.
And even but now return’d: I have not yet
Enter’d my house.—Antonio, you are welcome;
And I have better news in store for you,
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find, three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanc’d on this letter.

Antonio.

I am dumb.

Bassanio.

Were you the doctor, and I knew you not?

Gratiano.

Were you the clerk, that is to make me cuckold?

Nerissa.

Ay; but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.
Bassanio.
Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow:
When I am absent, then, lie with my wife.

Antonio.
Sweet lady, you have given me life, and living,
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to road.

Portia.
How now, Lorenzo?
My clerk hath some good comforts, too, for you.

Lorenzo.
Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.—
There do I give to you and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift.
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Of starved people. me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Adam.

Yonder comes my master, your brother.

Orlando.

Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Enter Oliver.

Oliver.

Now, sir! what make you here?

Orlando.

Nothing: I am not taugh to make anything.

Oliver.

What mar you then, sir?

Orlando.

Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Oliver.

Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught awhile.

Orlando.

Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that should come to such penury?

Oliver.

Know you where you are, sir?

Orlando.

O! sir, very well: here, in your orchard.

Oliver.

Know you before whom, sir?

Orlando.

Ay, better than he I am before knows me. I know, you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us. I have as much of my father in me, as you, albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oliver.

What, boy?

Orlando.

Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Oliver.

Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orlando.

I am no villain: I am the youngest son of sir Rowland de Bois; he was my father, and he is thrice a villain, that says, such a father begot villains. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so: thou hast railed on thyself.

Adam. [Coming forward.

Sweet masters, be patient: for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oliver.

Let me go, I say.

Orlando.

I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it; therefore, allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor alottery my father left me by testament: with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oliver.

And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will. I pray you, leave me.

Orlando.

I will no further offend you, than becomes me for my good.

Oliver.

Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam.

Is old dog my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service,—God be with my old master! I would not have spoke such a word.

[Exit Orlando and Adam.

Oliver.

Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Hola, Dennis! Enter Dennis.

Dennis.

Calls your worship?

Oliver.

Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here to speak with me?

Dennis.

So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oliver.

Call him in. [Exit Dennis.].—'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Charles.

Good morrow to your worship.

Oliver.

Good monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?

Charles.

There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke, and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore, he gives them good leave to wander.

Oliver.

Can you tell, if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Charles.

O! no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin so loves her, being ever from their cradles been together, that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oliver.

Where will the old duke live?

Charles.

They say, he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England. They say, many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Oliver.

What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?
Charles.

Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall. To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young, and tender; and, for your love, I would be loath to foil him, as I must for my own honour if he come in; therefore, out of my love to you I come hither to acquaint you withal, that either you might stay him from his intemperance, or brook such disgrace as well as he shall run into, that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oliver.

Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which, thou shalt find, I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles: it is the stubbonest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me his natural brother; therefore, use thy discretion. I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger; and thou wert best look to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other; for, I assure thee (and almost with tears I speak it) there is not one so young and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Charles.

I am heartily glad I came hither to you. If he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment: if ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more; and so, God keep your worship!

[Exit.

Oliver.

Farewell, good Charles.—Now will I stir this gamester. I hope, I shall see an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not what he hates more than he: yet he's a gentleman; never schooled, and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised. But it shall not be so long; this wrestler shall clear all: nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Celia.

I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Rosalind.

Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of, and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Celia.

Herein, I see, thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine: so would'st thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously tempered, as mine is to thee.

Rosalind.

Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Celia.

You know, my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father, perforce, I will render thee again in affection: by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath let me turn monster. Therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

Rosalind.

From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports. Let me see; what think you of falling in love?

Celia.

Marry, I pr'ythee, do, to make sport withal; but love no man in good earnest; nor no further in sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou may'st in honour come off again.

Rosalind.

What shall our sport then?

Celia.

Let us sit, and mock the good housewife, Fortune, from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Rosalind.

I would, we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Celia.

'Tis true, for those that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest; and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favouredly.

Rosalind.

Nay, now thou goest from fortune's office to nature's: fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of nature.

Enter Touchstone.

Celia.

No: when nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by fortune fall into the fire?—Though nature hath given us wit to flout at fortune, hath not fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Rosalind.

Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature, when fortune makes nature's natural the cutter off of nature's wit.

Celia.

Peradventure, this is not fortune's work neither, but nature's; who, perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits.—How now, wit? whither wander you?

Touchstone.

Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Celia.

Were you made the messenger?

Touchstone.

No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come for you.

Rosalind.

Where learned you that oath, fool?
Touchstone.

Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught; now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught, and the mustard was good, and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Celia.

How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Rosalind.

Ay, marry: now unmuzzle your wisdom.

Touchstone.

Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Celia.

By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

Touchstone.

By my knavery, if I had it, then I were; but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away before ever he saw those pancakes, or that mustard.

Celia.

Pr'ythee, who is't that thou mean'st?

Touchstone.

One that old Frederick, your father, loves!

Rosalind.

My father's love is enough to honour him enough. Speak no more of him: you'll be whipped for taxation, one of these days.

Touchstone.

The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.

Celia.

By my troth, thou say'st true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Rosalind.

With his mouth full of news.

Celia.

Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

Rosalind.

Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Celia.

All the better; we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau: what's the news?

Le Beau.

Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Celia.

Sport? Of what colour?

Le Beau.

What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Rosalind.

As wit and fortune will.

Touchstone.

Or as the destinies decree.

Celia.

Well said: that was laid on with a trowel.

Touchstone.

Nay, if I keep not my rank,—

Rosalind.

Thou losest thy old smell.

Le Beau.

You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Rosalind.

Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau.

I will tell you the beginning; and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to do: and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Celia.

Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau.

There comes an old man, and his three sons,—

Celia.

I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau.

Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—

Rosalind.

With bills on their necks,—"Be it known unto all men by these presents,"—

Le Beau.

The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie, the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Rosalind.

Alas!

Touchstone.

But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau.

Why, this that I speak of.

Touchstone.

Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Celia.

Or I, I promise thee.

Rosalind.

But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau.

You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Celia.

Yonder, sure, they are coming: let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke Frederick.

Come on: since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Rosalind.

Is yonder the man?

Le Beau.

Even he, madam.

Celia.

Alas! he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke Frederick.

How now, daughter, and cousin! are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Rosalind.
Rosalind.
Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.
Duke Frederick.
You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man. In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated: speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.
Celia.
Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.
Duke Frederick.
Do so: I'll not be by.
[_Duke goes apart._
Le Beau.
Monsieur the challenger, the princess calls for you.
Orlando.
I attend them, with all respect and duty.
Rosalind.
Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?
Orlando.
No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.
Celia.
Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.
Rosalind.
Do, young sir: your reputation shall not therefore be misprised. We will make it our suit to the duke, that the wrestling might not go forward.
Orlando.
I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes, go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamefaced that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.
Rosalind.
The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.
Celia.
And mine, to eke out hers.
Rosalind.
Fare you well. Pray heaven, I be deceived in you!
Celia.
Your heart's desires be with you.
Charles.
Come; where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?
Orlando.
Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.
Duke Frederick.
You shall try but one fall.
Charles.
No, I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.
Orlando.
You mean to mock me after: you should not have mocked me before; but come your ways.
Rosalind.
Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man!
Celia.
I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [Charles and Orlando wrestle.
Rosalind.
O, excellent young man!
Celia.
If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down.
[Charles is thrown. Shout.
Duke Frederick,
No more, no more.
Orlando.
Yes, I beseech your grace: I am not yet well breathed.
Duke Frederick.
How dost thou, Charles?
Le Beau.
He cannot speak, my lord.
Duke Frederick.
Bear him away. [Charles is borne out.
What is thy name, young man?
Orlando.
Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of sir Rowland de Bois.
Duke Frederick.
I would, thou hadst been son to some man else. The world esteem'd thy father honourable, but I did find him still mine enemy: [Deed. Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this Hadst thou descended from another house. But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth. I would thou hadst told me of another father. [Exeunt Duke Fredericke, Train, and Le Beau.
Celia.
Were I my father, coz, would I do this?
Orlando.
I am more proud to be sir Rowland's son, His youngest son, and would not change that To be adopted heir to Frederick. [calling,
Rosalind.
My father lov'd sir Rowland as his soul, And all the world was of my father's mind. Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreaties, Ere he should thus have ventured.
Celia.
Gentle cousin, Let us go thank him and encourage him: My father's rough and envious disposition Sticks me at heart. — Sir, you have well de- If you do keep your promises in love [serv'd: But justly, as you have exceeded all promise, Your mistress shall be happy.
Rosalind.
[Giving him a chain from her neck Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune, That could give more, but that her hand lacks Shall we go, coz?
[means. —
Celia.
Ay. — Fare you well, fair gentleman.
Orlando.
Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts Are
As are all thrown down, and that which here stands up is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

Rosalind. He calls us back. My pride fell with my fortunes; I'll ask him what he would. — Did you call, Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown more than your enemies.

Celia. Will you go, coz? Rosalind. Have with you.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Orlando. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue? I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you To leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd high commendation, true applause, and love, yet such is now the duke's condition, that he misconstrues all that you have done. The duke is humorous: what he is, indeed, more suits you to conceive, than me to speak of.

Orlando. I thank you, sir; and, pray you, tell me this: Which of the two was daughter of the duke, That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners; But yet, indeed, the smaller is his daughter: The other is daughter to the banish'd duke, And here detain'd by her usurping uncle, To keep his daughter company; whose loves Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters. But I can tell you, that of late this duke Hath taken displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece, Grounded upon no other argument, But that the people praise her for her virtues, And pity her for her good father's sake; And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady Will suddenly break forth. — Sir, fare you well: Hereafter, in a better world than this, I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orlando. I rest much bounden to you; fare you well.

[Exit Le Beau. Enter Duke Frederick with Lords. Look, here comes the duke.

Celia. With his eyes full of anger.

Duke Frederick. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste, And get you from our court.

Celia. Me, uncle?

Duke Frederick. You, cousin: Within these ten days if that thou be'st found So near our public court as twenty miles, Thou diest for it.

Rosalind. I do beseech your grace, Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me. If with myself I hold intelligence, Or have acquaintance with mine own desires, If that I do not dream, or be not frantic, (As I do trust I am not) then, dear uncle, Never so much as in a thought unborn Did I offend your highness.

Duke Frederick. Thus do all traitors: If their purgation did consist in words, They are as innocent as grace itself. Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Rosalind.
Rosalind. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor. Tell me, wherein the likelihood depends.

Duke Frederick. Thou art thy father's daughter; there's enough.

Rosalind. So was I when your highness took his dukedom; so was I when your highness banish'd him. Treason is not inherited, my lord; or if we did derive it from our friends. What's that to me? my father was no traitor. Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much, To think my poverty is treacherous.

Celia. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke Frederick. Ay, Celia: we stay'd her for your sake; Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Celia. I did not then entreat to have her stay: It was your pleasure, and your own remorse. I was too young then to value her, But now I know her: if she be a traitor, Why so am I; we still have slept together, Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together; And where so'er we went, like Juno's swans, Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke Frederick. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness, Her very silence, and her patience, [ness, Speak to the people, and they pity her. Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name; And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous, When she is gone. Then, open not thy lips: Firm and irrevocabile is my doom; Which I have pass'd upon her. She is banish'd.

Celia. Pronounce that sentence, then, on me, my I cannot live out of her company. [liege:

Duke Frederick. You are a fool. Yeu, niece, provide yourself: If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour, And in the greatness of my word, you die. [Exeunt Duke Frederick and Lords.

Celia. O, my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go? Will thou change fathers? I will give thee mine, I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Rosalind. I have more cause.

Celia. Thou hast not, cousin.

Pr'ythee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the duke Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Rosalind. That be hath not.

Celia. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks, then, the love, Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one. Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl? No: let my father seek another heir. Therefore, devise with me how we may fly, Whither to go, and what to bear with us: And do not seek to take your change upon you, To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out: For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale, Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Rosalind. Why, whither shall we go?

Celia. To seek my uncle In the forest of Arden.

Rosalind. Alas, what danger will it be to us, Maid's as we are, to travel forth so far! Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Celia. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire, And with a kind ofumber smirch my face. The like do you: so shall we pass along, And never stir assailants.

Rosalind. Were it not better, Because that I am more than common tall, That I did suit me all points like a man? A gallant curtle-ax upon my thigh, A boar-spear in my hand; and, in my heart Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will, We'll have a swashing and a martial outside; As many other mannish cowards have, That do outface it with theirsemblances.

Celia. What shall I call thee, when thou art a man?

Rosalind. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page, And therefore look you call me Ganymede. But what will you be call'd?

Celia. Something that hath a reference to my state: No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Rosalind. But, cousin, what if we essay'd to steal The clownish fool out of your father's court? Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Celia. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me; Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away, And get our jewels and our wealth together, Devise the fittest time, and safest way To hide us from pursuit that will be made After my flight. Now go we in content To liberty, and not to banishment. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke, Senior, Amiens, and other Lords, like Foresters.

Duke, Senior. Now, my co-mates, and brothers in exile, Hath not old custom made this life more sweet, Than that of painted pomp? Are not these More free from peril than the envious court? Here feel we not the penalty of Adam, The seasons' difference: as, the lazy fang, And churlish chiding of the winter's wind, Which when it bites, and blows upon my body, Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say, This is no business: these are counsellors That feelingly persuade me what I am. Sweet are the uses of adversity, Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous, Wears yet a precious jewel in his head: And this our life, exempt from public haunt, Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
Amiens.

I would not change it; Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbournness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke, Senior.

Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dupped fools,
Being native burghers of this desert city,
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads,
Have their round haunches gor'd.

1 Lord.

Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
This both your brother and you.
To-day, my lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that sprawls along this wood;
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish: and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heart'd for such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cour'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke, Senior.

But what said Jaques?

Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord.

O! yes, into a thousand similis.
First, for his weaving into the needleless stream;
"Poor deer," quoth he, "thou mak'st a testa" As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more (ment
To that which had too much." Then, being there alone, Left and abandon'd of his velvet friend;
"Tis right," quoth he; "thys misery doth part
The flux of company." Anon, a car'd astag,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him: "Ay," quoth Jaques,
"Sweep on, you fat and grasy citizens;
'Tis just the fashion: wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?"
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life, swearing, that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals, and to kill them up In their assign'd and native dwelling place.

Duke, Senior.

And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2 Lord.

We did, my lord, weeping and commenting
Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke, Senior.

Show me the place.

I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord.

I'll bring you to him straight.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke Frederick.

Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be: some villains of my court
Are of consent and suffrance in this.

1 Lord.

I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed; and in the morning early
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.

2 Lord.

My lord, the roynish clown, at whom so oft
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'er-heard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler.
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke Frederick.

Send to his brother: fetch that gallant hither;
If he be absent, bring his brother to me,
I'll make him find him. Do this suddenly,
And let not search and inquisition fail
To bring again these foolish runaways.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Before Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orlando.

Who's there?

Adam.

What! my young master?—O, my gentle master!
O, my sweet master! O, you memory
Of old sir Rowland! why, what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bony priser of the humorous duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies?
No more do yours: your virtues, gentle master,
Are sanctified and holy traits to you.
O, what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it?

Orlando.

Why, what's the matter?

Adam.

O, unhappy youth!
Come not within these doors: within this roof
The enmy of all your graces lives.
Your brother—(no, no brother; yet the son—
Yet not the son—I will not call him son—
Of him I was about to call his father.)—
Hath heard your praises, and this night he means
To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
And you within it: if he fall of that,
He will have other means to cut you off:
I overheard him, and his practices.
This is no place; the good case is but a butchery;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orlando.

Why, whither, Adam, would'st thou have me go?

Adam.

No matter whither, so you come not here.

Orlando.

What! would'st thou have me go and beg my food,
Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce
A thievish living on the common road?
This I must do, or know not what to do;

Orlando.

Besides, I have a mind to essay that task.
Yet this I will not do, do how I can.
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother.

Adam.

But do not so; I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I saw'd under your father,
Which I did store, to be my foster-nurse
When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown.
Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently cats for the sparrow.
Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold:
All this I give you. Let me be your servant:
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood;
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility:
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly. Let me go with you:
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.

Orlando.

O, good old man! how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweet for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that, do choke their service up
Even with the having: it is not so with thee.
But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.
But come thy ways: we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam.

Master, go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty.
From seventeen years, till now almost fourscore,
Here lived 1, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years many their fortunes seek;
But at fourscore it is too late a week:
Yet fortune cannot recompense me better
Than to die well, and not my master's debtor.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The Forest of Arden...
Enter Rosalind for Ganymede, Celia for Alithea, and Clown, alias Touchstone.

Rosalind.

O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!
Touchstone.

I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.
Rosalind.

I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doubtlet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, course, good Alithea.

Celia.

I pray you, bear with me: I can go no farther.
Touchstone.

For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you: yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you, for, I think, you have no money in your purse.
Rosalind.

Well, this is the forest of Arden.
Touchstone.

Ay, now am I in Arden; the more fool I:
when I was at home I was in a better place, but travellers must be content.

Rosalind.

Ay, be so, good Touchstone.—Look you: who comes here? a young man, and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Corin.

That is the way to make her scorn you still.
Silvius.

O Corin, that thou know'st how I do love her!
Corin.

I partly guess, for I have lov'd ere now.
Silvius.

No, Corin; being old, thou canst not guess,
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:
But if thy love were ever like to mine,
As sure I think did never man love so,
How must thy actions most ridiculous
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Corin.

Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Silvius.

O! thou didst then ne'er love so heartily,
If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd:
Or if thou hast not sat, as I do now,
Wearying thy hearer in thine mistress' praise,
Thou hast not lov'd:
Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lov'd.

O Phèbe, Phèbe, Phèbe!

[Exit Silvius.

Rosalind.

Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,
I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touchstone.

And I mine. I remember, when I was in love
I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to June Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batter, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chappled hands had milked: and I remember the wooling of a peascod instead of her: from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said with weeping tears, "Wear these for my sake." We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Rosalind.

Thou speakest wiser than thou art 'ware of.

Touchstone.

Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit,
Till I break my shins against it.

Rosalind.

Joe, Joe! this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Touchstone.

And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Celia.

I pray you, one of you question yond' man,
If he for gold will give us any food:
I faint almost to death.

Touchstone.

Holla, you clown!

Rosalind.

Peace, fool: he's not thy kinsman.

Corin.

Who calls?

Touchstone.
AS YOU LIKE IT.

Act 2 Sc. 4.
[Act II. Sc. VI.]

AS YOU LIKE IT.

Touchstone.
Your betters, sir.
Else are they very wretched.
Rosalind.
Peace, I say.—

Good even to you, friend.
Corin.
And to you, gentle sir; and to you all.
Rosalind.

I pr'ythee, shepherd, if that love, or gold, Can in this desert place buy entertainment, Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed. Here's a young maid, with travel much oppress'd, And faints for succour.

Corin.

Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish, for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her;
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not sheathe the fleeces in my grace:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.
Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed,
Are now on sale; and at our sheacote now,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Rosalind.

What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?
Corin.

That young swain that you saw here but ere-while,
That little cares for buying any thing.

Rosalind.

I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Corin.

And we will mend thy wages. I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Rosalind.

Assuredly, the thing is to be sold.
Go with me: if you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the Forest.

Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others.

Song:

Amiens.

Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see no enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaques.

More, more! I pr'ythee, more.

Amiens.

It will make you melancholy, monsieur Jaques.

Jaques.

I thank it. More! I pr'ythee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. More! I pr'ythee, more.

Amiens.

My voice is ragged; I know I cannot please you.
it for food to thee. 'Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end. I will here be with thee as presently, and I'll bring thee rakish not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die; but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. Well said! thou look'st cheerily; and I'll be with thee quickly. Yet thou liest in the bleak air: come, I will bear thee to some shelter, and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live any thing in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. The same.

A Table set out. Enter Duke, Senior, Attense, Lords, and others.

Duke, Senior.
I think he be transform'd into a beast, For I can no where find him like a man.

1 Lord.
My lord, he is but even now gone hence: Here was he merrily, hearing of a song.

Duke, Senior.
If he, compact of jars, grow musical, We shall have shortly discord in the spheres.— Go, seek him: tell him, I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1 Lord.
He saves my labour by his own approach.

Duke, Senior.
Why, how now, monsieur I what a life is this, That your poor friends must woo your company! What, you look merrily.

Jaques.
A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i' the forest, A motley fool; (a miserable world!)
As I do live by food, I met a fool, Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, And rail'd on lady Fortune in good terms, In good set terms, — and yet a motley fool. "Good-morrow, fool," quoth I: "No, sir," quoth he, "fortune."
"Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me Then he drew a dial from his poke, And beheld it with a motley lustre eye, Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock: wag's Thus may we see," quoth he, "how the world 'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine, And after one hour more 'twill be eleven; And so from hour to hour we ripe and ripe, And then from hour to hour we rot and rot; And thereby hangs a tale." When I did hear The motley fool thus moral on the time, My lungs began to crawl like chanticleer, That fools should be so deep contemplative; And I did laugh, sans intermission, An hour by his dial.— O, a worthy fool! A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.

Duke, Senior.
What fool is this?

Jaques.
O, worthy fool!— One that hath been a cour-
And says, if ladies be but young and fair, (titer, They have the gift to know it; and in his brain, Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit After a voyage, he hath strange places cram'm'd With observation, the which he vents In mangled forms. — O, that I were a fool! I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke, Senior.
Thou shalt have one.
Act III. Sc. 1.

As you like it.

Jaques

An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die.

Duke, Senior.

What would you have? Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orlando.

I almost die for food, and let me have it.

Duke, Senior.

Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

Orlando.

Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you:
I thought, that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But whate'er you are,
That, in this desert inaccessible.
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time,
If ever you have look'd on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church,
If ever sat at any good man's feast,
If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear,
And know what tie to pity, and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be.
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke, Senior.

True is it that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd;
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have,
That to your wanting may be minister'd.

Orlando.

Then, but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limp'd in pure love; till he be first suffic'd,
Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.

Duke, Senior.

Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orlando.

I thank ye; and be bless'd for your good comfort!

[Exit.

Duke, Senior.

Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy:
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woful pageants, than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jaques

All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then, the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then, the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woof balled
Made to his mistress' eye-brow. Then, a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Justice,
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then, the
In fair round belly, with good capon lid'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloons,

With spectacles on nose, and pock on side:
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion;
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter Orlando, with Adam.

Duke, Senior.

Welcome. Set down your venerable burden,
And let him feed.

Orlando.

I thank you most for him.
Adam.

So had you need;
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke, Senior.

Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble you
As yet to question you about your fortunes.
Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

Bong.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! unto the green holly:
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere
Then, heigh, ho! the holly!

This life is most jolly,
Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the winter's warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp,
As friend remember'd not.

Heigh, ho! sing, &c.

Duke, Senior.

If that you were the good sir Rowland's son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully, you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly lim'd, and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither. I am the duke,
That lov'd your father. The residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me—Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is;
Support him by the arm—Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand.

[Exeunt.

Act III.

Scene I. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke Frederick.

Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made merry,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it:
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is;
Living, Seek him with me, and kill him, dead or Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.
[thine,
Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,

Till
ASH YOU LIKE IT.

ACT III. Sc. 1.

Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth
Of what we think against thee.

Oliver.

O, that your highness knew my heart in this!
I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke Frederick.

More villain thou.—Well, push him out of
And let my officers of such a nature [doors; Make an extent upon his house and lands. Do this expeditiously, and turn him going.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Forest of Arden.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

Orlando.

Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love:
And thou, thrice-crowned of night, survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
'Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway.

O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
That every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.
Run, run, Orlando: carve on every tree,
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she.

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?

Touchstone.

Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Corin.

No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep, and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun; that he, that hath learned no wit by nature nor art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touchstone.

Such a one is a natural philosopher. Was ever in court, shepherd?

Corin.

No, truly.

Touchstone.

Then thou art damned.

Corin.

Nay, I hope,—

Touchstone.

Truly, thou art damned, like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Corin.

For not being at court? Your reason.

Touchstone.

Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

Corin.

Nor a whit, Touchstone: those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country is most selectable at the court. You told me, you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands: that courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers were shepherds.

Touchstone.

Instance, briefly: come, instance.

Corin.

Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touchstone.

Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Corin.

Besides, our hands are hard.

Touchstone.

Your lips will feel them the sooner; shallow again. A more sounder instance; come.

Corin.

And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touchstone.

Most shallow man! Thou worm's-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, indeed!—Learn of the wilt, and perpend: civet is of a baser birth than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Corin.

You have too courtly a wit for me: I'll rest.

Touchstone.

Wilt thou rest damned? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee! thou art raw.

Corin.

Sir, I am a true labourer: I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good content, with my heart; and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze, and my lambs suck.

Touchstone.

That is another simple sin in you; to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to he bawd to a bell-wether, and to betray a she-lamb of a twelve-month, to a crooked-paled, old, cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou best not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds: I cannot see else how thou shouldst 'scape.

Corin.

Here comes young master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter Rosalind, reading a paper.

Rosalind.

From the east to western Ind,
Joewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures, fairest lend'd,
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let me face be kept in mind,
But the fair of Rosalind.

Touchstone. of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, "Have patience, good people!"

Celia
How now? back, friends.—Shepherd, go off a little:—go with him, sirrah.

Touchstone.
Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt Corin and Touchstone.]

Celia.
Didst thou hear these verses?

Rosalind.
O! yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Celia.
That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.

Rosalind.
Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Celia.
But didst thou hear without wondering, how thy name should be hung and carved upon these trees?

Rosalind.
I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder, before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree: I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Celia.
Trow you, who hath done this?

Rosalind.
Is it a man?

Celia.
And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck? Change you colour?

Rosalind.
I pray thee, who?

Celia.
O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Rosalind.
Nay, but who is it?

Celia.
Is it possible?

Rosalind.
Nay, I pray thee, now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Celia.
O, wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping!

Rosalind.
Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery: I pr'ythee, tell me, who is it quickly; and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I pr'ythee take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may think thy tidings.

Celia.
So you may put a man in your belly.

Rosalind.
Rosalind.

Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Celia.

Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Rosalind.

Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful. Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Celia.

It is young Orlando, that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels and your heart, both in an instant.

Rosalind.

Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak sad brow, and true maid.

Celia.

I'faith, coz, 'tis he.

Rosalind.

Orlando.

Celia.

Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose? — What did he, when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee, and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Celia.

You must borrow me Garagantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say, ay, and no, to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism.

Rosalind.

But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshely as he did the day he wrestled?

Celia.

It is as easy to count atoms, as to resolve the propositions of a lover: but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped scorn.

Rosalind.

It may well be call'd Joe's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Celia.

Give me audience, good madam.

Rosalind.

Proceed.

Celia.

There lay he, stretched along like a wounded knight.

Rosalind.

Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Celia.

Cry, holla! to thy tongue, I pr'ythee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Rosalind.

O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Celia.

I would sing my song without a burden: thou bring'st me out of tune.

Rosalind.

Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Celia.

You bring me out. Soft! comes he not here?

Rosalind.

'Tis he: sink by, and note him.

[Rosalind and Celia retire.

Jaques.

I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orlando.

And so had I; but yet, for fashion sake, I thank you too for your society.

Jaques.

Good bye, you: let's meet as little as we can.

Orlando.

I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaques.

I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orlando.

I pray you mar no more of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaques.

Rosalind is your love's name?

Yes, just.

Jaques.

I do not like her name.

Orlando.

There was no thought of pleasing you, when she was christened.

Jaques.

What stature is she of?

Orlando.

Just as high as my heart.

Jaques.

You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conn'd them out of rings?

Orlando.

Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaques.

You have a nimble wit: I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orlando.

I will chide no breather in the world, but myself, against whom I know most faults.

Jaques.

The worst fault you have is to be in love.

Orlando.

'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaques.

By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orlando.

He is drown'd in the brook: look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaques.

There I shall see mine own figure.

Orlando.

Which I take to be either a fool, or a cypher.

Jaques.

I'll carry no longer with you. Farewell, good signior love.

Orlando.
Orlando.

I am glad of your departure. Adieu, good monsieur melancholy.

[Exit Jaques.—Rosalind and Celia come forward.]

Rosalind. [Aside to Celia.]

I will speak to him like a saw, and under that habit play the knife with him. [To him.] Do you hear, forester?

Rosalind.

Very well: what would you?

Orlando.

I pray you, what is't o'clock?

Rosalind.

You should ask me, what time o'day: there's no clock in the forest.

Rosalind.

Then, there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of time as well as a clock.

Rosalind.

And why not the swift foot of time? had not that been as proper?

Rosalind.

By no means, sir. Time travels in divers places with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orlando.

I pr'ythee, who doth he trot withal?

Rosalind.

Marry, he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a se'nnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Orlando.

Who ambles Time withal?

Rosalind.

With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning, the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury. These Time ambles withal.

Orlando.

Who doth he gallop withal?

Rosalind.

With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orlando.

Who stays it still withal?

Rosalind.

With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orlando.

Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Rosalind.

With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orlando.

Are you native of this place?

Rosalind.

At the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orlando.

Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Rosalind.

I have been told so of many: but, Indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man: one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God, I am not a woman to be touched with so many giddy offences, as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Orlando.

Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Rosalind.

There were none principal: they were all like one another, as half-pence are; every one fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orlando.

I pr'ythee, recount some of them.

Rosalind.

No; I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon haw-thorns, and elegies on brambles: all, forsooth, defying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quintessence of love upon him.

Orlando.

I am he that is so love-shaked. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Rosalind.

There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes, I am sure, you are not prisoner.

Orlando.

What were his marks?

Rosalind.

A lean cheek, which you have not; a blue eye, and sunken, which you have not; an unquestionable spirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not:—but I pardon you for that, for, simply, your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue.—Then, your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man: you are rather point-device in your ac-coutrements; as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orlando.

Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Rosalind.

Me believe it? you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orlando.

I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Rosalind.

But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?
AS YOU LIKE IT.

ACT III. SC. II.

Orlando.

Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Rosalind.

Love is merely a madness, and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house, and a whip, as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orlando.

Did you ever cure any so?

Rosalind.

Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress, and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking: proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles: for every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and women are, for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a loving humour of madness: which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook, merely monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orlando.

I would not be cured, youth.

Rosalind.

I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orlando.

Now, by the faith of my love, I will. Tell me where it is.

Rosalind.

Go with me to it, and I'll show it you; and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orlando.

With all my heart, good youth.

Rosalind.

Nay, you must call me Rosalind.—Come, sister, will you go?

SCENE III.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques behind, observing them.

Touchstone.

Come apace, good Audrey: I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Audrey.

Your features? Lord warrant us! what features?

Touchstone.

I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaques. [Aside.

O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jove in a thatch'd house!

Touchstone.

When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding. It strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.—Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Audrey.

I do not know what poetical is. Is it honest in deed, and word? Is it a true thing?

Touchstone.

No, truly, for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry, and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers they do feign.

Audrey.

Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touchstone.

I do, truly; for thou swearest to me, thou art honest: now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Audrey.

Would you not have me honest?

Touchstone.

No truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd; for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Audrey.

Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest!

Touchstone.

Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Audrey.

I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touchstone.

Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness; sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee; and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the vicar of the next village, who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaques. [Aside.

I would fain see this meeting.

Audrey.

Well, the gods give us joy!

Touchstone.

Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but hornbeasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—many a man knows no end of his goods; right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife: 'tis none of his own getting. Horns? Even so:—Poor men alone?—No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a wall'd town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver.—Sir Oliver Mar-text, you are well met; will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oliver.

Is there none here to give the woman?

Touchstone.
ACT III. Sc. iv. AS YOU LIKE IT.

Touchstone

I will not take her on gift of any man.
Sir Oliver.

Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.
Jaqes. [Coming forward.

Proceed, proceed: I'll give her.

Touchstone.

Good even, good Mr. What-she-callit: how do you, sir? You are very well met: God'll you for your last company. I am very glad to see you:—even a toy in hand here, sir.—Nay; pray, be cover'd.

Jaqes.

Will you be married, motley?

Touchstone.

As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pidgeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaqes.

And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot; then, one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and, like green timber, warp, warp.

Touchstone.

I am not in the mind, but I were better to be married of him than of another; for he is not like to marry me well, and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaqes.

Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

Touchstone.

Come, sweet Audrey:
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry.
Farewell, good master Oliver! Not O sweet Oliver! O brave Oliver!' Leave me not behind thee: But wind away, Begone, I say. I will not to wedding with thee.

[Exeunt Jaques, Touchstone, and Audrey.

Sir Oliver.

'Tis no matter: ne'er a fantastical knife of them all shall flout me out of my calling.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. The same. Before a Cottage.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Rosalind.

Never talk to me: I will weep.

Celia.

Do, I pr'ythee; but yet have the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Rosalind.

But have I not cause to weep?

Celia.

As good cause as one would desire: therefore weep.

Rosalind.

His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Celia.

Something browner than Judas's. Marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Rosalind.

I'faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Celia.

An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Rosalind.

And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Celia.

He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana: a nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Rosalind.

But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Celia.

Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Rosalind.

Do you think so?

Celia.

Yes: I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Rosalind.

Not true in love?

Celia.

Yes, when he is in; but, I think he is not in.

Rosalind.

You have heard him swear downright, he was.

Celia.

Was is not is: besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmer of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Rosalind.

I met the duke yesterday, and had much question with him. He asked me, of what parentage I was? I told him, of as good as he; so he laughed, and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Celia.

O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilt, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose. But all's brave, that youth mounts, and folly guides. — Who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin.

Mistress, and master, you have oft inquir'd After the shepherd that complain'd of love, Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess That was his mistress.

Celia.

Well; and what of him?

Corin.

If you will see a pageant truly play'd, Between the pale complexion of true love, And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Rosalind.

O! come, let us remove The sight of lovers feedeth those in love. — Bring us to this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play.

[Exeunt. SCENE
SCENE V. Another part of the Forest.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Silvius.
Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe: Say that you love me not; but say not so
In bitterness. The common executioner, Whose heart th' accurstum'd sight of death makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck, But first begs pardon: will you sternly be Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corn, behind Phebe.

Phebe.
I would not be thy executioner:
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee. Thou tell'st me, there is murder in mine eye:
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable, That eyes, that are the frail'st and softest things, Who shut their coward gates on omens, Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now I do frown on thee with all my heart; And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:
Now counterfeited to swoon; why, now fall down; Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame! Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee:
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush, The clarificc and capable impression [eyes, Thy palm some moment keeps, but now mine Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not, Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes That can do hurt.

Silvius.
O I dear Phebe,
If ever, (as that ever may be near,) You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy, Then shall you know the wounds invisible That love's keen arrows make.—

Phebe.
But till that time
Come not thou near me; and when that time Afflict me with thy mock's, pity me not. [comes As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Rosalind [Advancing.
And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother, That you insult, exult, and all at once, Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty. As, by my faith, I see no more in you Than without candle may go dark to bed, Must you be therefore proud and pitiless? Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you, than in the ordinary Of nature's sale-work:—Oh'd my little life! I think the means to tangle my eyes too. No, 'faith, proud mistress, hope not after it: 'Tis not your inky brows, your black-silk hair, Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream, That can entame my spirits to your worship. You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her, Like foggy south, puffed with wind and rain? You are a thousand times a properer man, Than she a woman: 'tis such fools as you, That make the world full of ill-favour'd children.
'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her;

And out of you she sees herself more proper, Than any of her lineaments can show her.— But, mistress, know yourself; down on your knees, And thank heaven fasting for a good man's love; For I must tell you friendly in your ear, Sell when you can: you are not for all markets. Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer: For is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer. So, take her to thee, shepherd.—Fare you well.

Phebe.
Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year togeth'er: I had rather hear you chide, than this man woo.

Rosalind.
He's fallen in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Phebe.
For no ill will I bear you.

Rosalind.
I pray you, do not fall in love with me, For I am failer than vows made in wine: Besides, I like you not. If you will know my name,
'Tis at the tuft of olives, here hard by. — Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard. — Come, sister. — Shepherdesse, look on him better, And be not proud: though all the world could None could be so abus'd in sight as he. [see Come, to our flock. — [Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corn. Phebe.

Dead shepherd! now I find thy saw of might;
"Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?"

Silvius.
Sweet Phebe,—

Phebe.
Ha! what say'st thou, Silvius?

Silvius.
Sweet Phebe, pley me.

Phebe.
Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius. Silvius.

Wherever sorrow is, relief would be: If you do sorrow at my grief in love, By giving love, your sorrow and my grief Were both extern'd. —

Phebe.
Thou hast my love: is not that neighbourly? Silvius.

I would have you.

Phebe.
Why, that were covetousness. Silvius.

The time was that I hated thee, And yet it is not that I bear thee love; But since that thou canst talk of love so well, Thy company, which erst was irksome to me, I will endure, and I'll employ thee too; But do not look for farther recompense, Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd. —

Silvius.
So holy, and so perfect is my love, And I in such a poverty of grace, That I shall think it a most plentiful crop To glean the broken ears after the man That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Phebe.
Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me ere while?

Silvius.
Act IV. Sc. 1. AS YOU LIKE IT.

SILVIUS.
Not very well, but I have met him oft; And he hath bought the cottage, and the bounds, That the old cariol once was master of.

PHEBE.
Think not I love him, though I ask for him. 'Tis but a peevish boy;—yet he talks well:— But what care I for words? yet words do well, When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.
It is a pretty youth:—not very pretty: [him, But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue Did make offence, his eye did heal it up. He is not very tall; yet for his years he's tall. His leg is but so so; and yet 'tis well: There was a pretty redness in his lip; A little riper, and more lusty red— [silence Than that mix'd in his cheek: "twas just the dif- Betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask. There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him In parcels, as I did, would have gone near To fall in love with him; but for my part I love him not, nor hate him not, and yet I have more cause to hate him than to love him: For what had he to do to chide at me? He said mine eyes were black, and my hair black; And, now I am remember'd, scorn'd at me; I marvel why I answer'd not again: But that's all one; omission is no quittance: I'll write to him a very taunting letter, And thou shalt bear it; wilt thou, Silvius?

SILVIUS.
Phebe, with all my heart.
Phebe.
I'll write it straight; The matter's in my head, and in my heart; I will be better with him, and passing short. Go with me, Silvius. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE 1. The Forest of Arden.
Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Jaques.

JACQUES.
I PRYTHEE, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

ROSALIND.
They say, you are a melancholy fellow.

JACQUES.
I am so: I do love it better than laughing.

ROSALIND.
Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure worse than drunkards.

JACQUES.
Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

ROSALIND.
Why then, 'tis good to be a post.

JACQUES.
I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is fallation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is all these; but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simplices, extracted from many objects, and, indeed, the sundry contemplation of my travels; which, by often rumination, wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

ROSALIND.
A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad. I fear, you have sold your own lands, to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

JACQUES.
Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter Orlando.

ROSALIND.
And your experience makes you sad. I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad. And to travel for it too!

ORLANDO.
Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind.

JACQUES.
Nay then, God be wi' you, an you talk in blank verse. [Exit.

ROSALIND.
Farewell, monsieur traveller: look you lisp, and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are, or I will scarce think you have sworn in a gondola. — Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover? — An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

ORLANDO.
My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

ROSALIND.
Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapped him o' the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-whole.

ORLANDO.
Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

ROSALIND.
Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be wo'd of a snail.

ORLANDO.
Of a snail?

ROSALIND.
Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head, a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman. Besides, he brings his destiny with him.

ORLANDO.
What's that?

ROSALIND.
Why, horns; which such as you are fail to be beholden to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

ORLANDO.
Virtue is no horn-maker, and my Rosalind is virtuous.

ROSALIND.
And I am your Rosalind.

CELIA.
It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

ROSALIND.
Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday holiday humour, and like enough to consent.—
What would you say to me now, and I were your very very Rosalind?

Orlando.
I would kiss before I spoke.

Rosalind.

Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God warn us!) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orlando.
How if the kiss be denied?

Rosalind.

Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orlando.
Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Rosalind.

Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.

Orlando.
What, of my suit?

Rosalind.

Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orlando.
I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Rosalind.

Well, in her person, I say—I will not have you.

Orlando.
Then, in mine own person, I die.

Rosalind.

No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellepsont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned, and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—

Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies: men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orlando.
I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Rosalind.

By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition, and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orlando.
Then love me, Rosalind.

Rosalind.

Yes, faith will I; Fridays, and Saturdays, and all.

Orlando.
And wilt thou have me?

Rosalind.

Ay, and twenty such.

Orlando.
What say'st thou?

Rosalind.

Are you not good?

Orlando.
I hope so.

Rosalind.

Why, then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando.—What do you say, sister?

Orlando.
Pray thee, marry us.

Celia.
I cannot say the words.

Rosalind.

You must begin,—"Will you, Orlando?"—

Celia.
Go to.—Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orlando.
I will.

Rosalind.

Ay, but when?

Orlando.

Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Rosalind.

Then you must say,—"I take thee, Rosalind, for wife."

Orlando.
I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Rosalind.

I might ask you for your commission; but—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband:—there's a girl, goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orlando.
So do all thoughts: they are winged.

Rosalind.

Now tell me, how long you would have her, after you have possessed her?

Orlando.
For ever, and a day.

Rosalind.

Say a day, without the ever. No, no, Orlando: men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orlando.
But will my Rosalind do so?

Rosalind.

By my life, she will do as I do.

Orlando.
O! but she is wise.

Rosalind.

Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orlando.
A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say,—"Wit, whither wilt?"
Rosalind.
Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orlando.
And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Rosalind.
Marry, to say,—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O! that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orlando.
For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Rosalind.
Alas, dear love! I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orlando.
I must attend the duke at dinner: by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Rosalind.
Ay, go your ways, go your ways. —I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less: — that flattering tongue of yours won me: — 'tis but one cast away, and so, — come, death! — Two o'clock is your hour?

Orlando.
Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Rosalind.
By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful. Therefore, beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orlando.
With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: so, adieu.

[Exit Orlando.]

Celia.
You have simply misused our sex in your love-prate. We must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Rosalind.
O! coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou dist know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded: my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Celia.
Or, rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Rosalind.
No; that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love. —I'll tell thee, Alison, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando, I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

And I'll sleep.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Another part of the Forest.
Enter Jaques, and Lords, like Foresters.

Jaques.
Which is he that killed the deer?

1 Lord.
Sir, it was I.

Jaques.
Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head for a branch of victory. — Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord.
Yes, sir.

Jaques.
Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.
What shall he have, that kill'd the deer?
His leather skin, and horns to wear.
Take thou no scorn to wear the horn;
It was a crest ere thou wast born.
Thy father's father wore it,
And thy father love it:
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

[Then sing him home; the rest shall bear this burden.]

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The Forest.
Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Rosalind.
How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? And here much Orlando!

Celia.
I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, Forth—He hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone To sleep. Look, who comes here.

[Enter Silvius.]

Silvius.
My errand is to you, fair youth.—My gentle Phebe did bid me give you this: (Giving a letter.) I know not the contents; but as I guess, By the stern brow, and waspish action, Which she did use as she was writing of it, It bears an angry tenour. Pardon me, I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Rosalind.
Patience herself would startle at this letter, And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all. She says, I am not fair; that I lack manners; She calls me proud, and that she could not love me. Were men as rare as Phœbus. Od's my will! Her love is not the bare that I do hunt: [well; Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd, This is a letter of your own device.]

Silvius.
No, I protest; I know not the contents: Phebe did write it.

Rosalind.
Come, come, you are a fool, And turn'd into the extremity of love. I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, A freestone-colour'd hand; I verily did think That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands: She has a housewife's hand; but that's no matter. I say, she never did invent this letter; This is a man's invention, and his hand.
Silvius.

Sure, it is hers.

Rosalind.

Why, 'tis a boisterous and a cruel style,
A style for challengers: why, she defies me,
Like Turk to Christian. Woman's gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant-rude Invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Than in their countenance. Will you hear the letter?

Silvius.

So please you; for I never heard it yet,
Yet heard too much of Phèbe's cruelty.

Rosalind.

She Phèbes me. Mark how the tyrant writes.
"Art thou god to shepherd turn'd,
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?"

Can a woman rail thus?

Silvius.

Call you this railing?

Rosalind.

"Why, thy goshead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?"

Did you ever hear such railing?—
"Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me."—

Meaning?

"If the scorn of your bright eye
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack! in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move?
He that brings this love to thee,
Little knows this love in me;
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die."

Silvius.

Call you this chiding?

Celia.

Alas, poor shepherd, know,

Rosalind.

Do you pity him? no; he deserves no pity. . .
Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee? not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tame snake,) and say this to her:—that if she love me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her. — If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word, for here comes more company.

[Exit Silvius.]

Enter Oliver.

Oliver.

Good morrow, fair ones. Pray you, if you know,
Where in the purlease of this forest stands
A sheep-cote, fenc'd about with olive-trees?

Celia.

West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:
The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream,
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place.
But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Oliver.

If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description; [fair, Such garments, and such years — "The boy is Of female favour, and bestows himself Like a ripe sister: the woman low, And browner than her brother." Are you not You the owner of the house I did inquire for? Celia.

It is no boast, being a ask'd, to say, we are.

Oliver.

Orlando doth commend him to you both;
And to that youth, he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloody napkin. Are you he?

Rosalind.

I am. What must we understand by this?

Oliver.

Some of my shame; if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkerchief was stain'd.

Celia.

I pray you, tell it.

Oliver.

When last the young Orlando parted from
He left a promise to return again
You, Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! I he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself! Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd
With age,
And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlik'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay coughing, head on ground, with catlike watch,
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead.
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Celia.

O! I have heard him speak of that same
brother;
And he did render him the most unnatural
That it 'd 'mongst men.

Oliver.

And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.

Rosalind.

But, to Orlando. — Did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oliver.

Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so;
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him: in which hurttling
From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Celia.

Are you his brother?

Rosalind.

Was it you he rescu'd?

Celia.

Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oliver.
AS YOU LIKE IT.

ACT V. SC. 1.

Oliver. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I. I do not shame To tell you what I was, since my conversion So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Rosalind. But, for the bloody napkin?

Oliver. By and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two, Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As, how I came into that desert place: — In brief, he led me to the gentle duke, Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment, Committing me unto my brother's love: Who led me instantly unto his cave, There stripp'd himself; and here, upon his The lioness had torn some flesh away, [arm, Which all this while had bled; and now he And cried in fainting upon Rosalind. [fainted, Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound; And, after some small space, being strong at He sent me hither, stranger as I am, [heart, To tell this story, that you may not excuse His broken promise; and to give this napkin, Dyed in his blood, unto the shepherd youth That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Rosalind. I would I were at home. Celia. We'll lead you thither. — I pray you, will you take him by the arm?

Oliver. Be of good cheer, youth. — You a man? You A man's heart.

Rosalind. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah! a body would think this was well counterfeited. I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeited. Heigh ho! —

Oliver. This was not counterfeit: there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest. Rosalind. Counterfeited, I assure you.

Oliver. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Rosalind. So I do; but, 'faith, I should have been a woman by right.

Celia. Come; you look paler and paler: pray you, draw homewards. — Good sir, go with us.

Oliver. That will I, for I must bear answer back, How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The Forest of Arden.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touchstone.
WE shall find a time, Audrey: patience, gentle Audrey.

Audrey. 'Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.

Touchstone.
A most wicked sir Oliver, Audrey; a most vile Mar-text. But, Audrey; there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.

Audrey. Ay, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in me in the world. Here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Touchstone. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for: we shall beouting; we cannot hold.

William. Good even, Audrey.

Audrey. God ye good even, William.

William. And good even to you, sir.

Touchstone. Good even, gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head: nay, pr’theye, be covered. How old are you, friend?

William. Five and twenty, sir.

Touchstone. A ripe age. Is thy name William?

William, sir. Touchstone. A fair name. Wast born it’ the forest here?

William. Ay, sir, I thank God.

Touchstone. Thank God; — a good answer. Art rich?

William. 'Faith, sir, so, so.

Touchstone. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good: — and yet it is not; it is but so so. Art thou wise?

William. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.

Touchstone. Why, thou say’st well. I do now remember a saying: "The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool." The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

William. I do, sir.

Touchstone.
Touchstone.
Give me your hand. Art thou learned?
William.
No, sir.
Touchstone.
Then learn this of me. To have, is to have; for it is a figure in rhetoric, that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other; for all your writers do consent, that ipsa is he: now, you are not ipsa, for I am he.
William.
Which he, sir?
Touchstone.
He, sir, that must marry this woman. Therefore, you clown, abandon,—which is in the vulgar, leave,—the society,—which in the boorish is, company,—of this female,—which in the common is,—woman; which together is, abandon the society of this female, or, clown thou perioch; or, to thy better understanding, diest; or, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away; translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage. I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel: I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways: therefore tremble, and depart.
Audrey.
Do, good William.
William.
God rest you merry, sir.
[Exit Corin.
Corin.
Our master and mistress seek you: come, away, away!
Touchstone.
Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey.—I attend, I attend.

SCENE II. The same.
Enter Orlando and Oliver.
Orlando.
Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her; and, loving, woo; and, wooing, she should grant; and will you persevere to enjoy her?
Oliver.
Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old sir Rowland's, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.
Orlando.
You have my consent.
Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers.
Enter Rosalind.
Rosalind.
Go you, and prepare Aliena; for, look you, Here comes my Rosalind.
God save you, brother.
Oliver.
And you, fair sister.
[Exit.
Rosalind.
O I my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.
Orlando.
It is my arm.
Rosalind.
I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.
Orlando.
Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.
Rosalind.
Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he showed me your handkerchief?
Orlando.
Ay, and greater wonders than that.
Rosalind.
O! I know where you are,—Nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the sight of two rams, and Cæsar's thraumalchical brag of—"I came, saw," and "overcame;" for your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they came to another; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage. They are in the very wrath of love, and they will together: clubs cannot part them.
Orlando.
They shall be married to-morrow, and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O! how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-happiness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.
Rosalind.
Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind.
Orlando.
I can live no longer by thinking.
Rosalind.
I will weary you, then, no longer with idle talking. Know of me, then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch, I say, I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things. I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set another before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.
Orlando.
Speak'st thou in sober meanings?
Rosalind.
By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends, for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall, and to Rosalind, if you will.
Enter Silvius and Phebe.
Look; here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.
Phebe.
'tis Silvius. | \[Exeunt.\]

Another. You all ing to morrow me you. — So, married what made purity, humbleness, adoration, all to-morrow. — I married you, [To Orlando.] If ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow: — I will satisfy you, [To Orlando.] If ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow: — I will content you, [To Silvius.] If what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow. — As you [To Orlando] love Rosalind, meet; — as you [To Silvius] love Phebe, meet; and as I love no woman. I'll meet. — So, fare you well: I have left you commands.

Silvius. I'll not fail, if I live.
Orlando.
I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not,
As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe.

Rosalind.
Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd——

[To the Duke.] You say, if I bring in your
You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke, Senior.
That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Rosalind. [To Orlando.
And you say, you will have her, when I bring her?

Orlando.
That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Rosalind. [To Phebe.
You say, you'll marry me, if I be willing?

Phebe.
That will I, should I die the hour after.

Rosalind.
But if you do refuse to marry me, [heark? You'll give yourself to this most faithful shep-

Phebe.
So is the bargain.

Rosalind. [To Silvius.
You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Silvius.
Though to have her and death were both one thing.

Rosalind.
I have promis'd to make all this matter even. Keep you your word, O duke! I give your daughter:—
You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter:—
Keep you your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me;
Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:—
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
If she refuse me: — and from hence I go,
To make these doubts all even.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Duke, Senior.
I do remember in this shepherd-boy
Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orlando.
My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Methought he was a brother to your daughter: But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born,
And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies by his uncle, Whom he reports to be a great magician,
Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Jaques.
There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Touchstone.
Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaques.
Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touchstone.
If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaques.
And how was that ta'en up?

Touchstone.
'Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaques.
How seventh cause? — Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke, Senior.
I like him very well.

Touchstone.
According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulce diseases.

Jaques.
But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touchstone.
Upon a lie seven times removed. — Bear your body more seeming, Audrey.— As this, sir, I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called the "retort courteous." If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is called the "quip modest." If again, it was not well cut, he had not cut; — and from hence I go,
To make these doubts all even.

Jaques.
And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touchstone.
I durst go no farther than the "lie circumstantial," nor he durst not give me the "lie direct;" and so we measured swords and parted.

Jaques.
Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie.

Touchstone.
O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book, as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the retort courteous; the second, the quip modest; the third, the reply courteous; the fourth, the reproof valiant;
the fifth, the countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the lie, with circumstance; the seventh, the lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an of. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an if, as If you said so, then I said so; and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your if is the only peace-maker; much virtue in if.
Jaques.
Is not this a rare fellow, thy lord? he's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.
He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, leading Rosalind in woman's clothes; and Celia.

Still Music.

Hymen.

Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Alone together.

Good Duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Ye, brought her hither,
That thou might'st join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Rosalind.

[To Duke, Senior.] To you I give myself, for
I am yours. [yours.

[To Orlando.] To you I give myself, for I am Duke, Senior.

If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orlando.

If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind. I'phee.

If sight and shape be true,
Why then, my love adieu!

Rosalind.

[To Duke, Senior.] I'll have no father, if you be not he:—
[To Orlando.] I'll have no husband, if you be not he:— [not she.
[To I'phee.] Nor ever wed woman, if you be not Hymen.

Peace, ho! I bar confusion.
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true content.

[To Orlando and Rosalind.] You and you a cross shall part:
[To Oliver and Celia.] You and you are in heart.
[To I'phee.] You to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord:
[To Touchstone and Audrey.] You and you are sure together,
As the winter to foul weather.
While a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning,
That reason wonder may diminish,
How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Hymen's crown;
O, blest bed of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock, then, be honoured;
Honour, high honour, and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Phebe.

[To Silvius.] I will not eat my word, now thou art mine:
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter Second Brother.

2 Brother.

Let me have audience for a word or two.

I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.—
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Address'd a mighty power, which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword.
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came,
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise, and from the world;
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again,
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke, Senior.

Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot;
And after, every of this happy number, [us,
That have endured'shrievd days and nights with Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their 'states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry.—
Play, music I and you brides and bridgrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures

Jaques.

Sir, by your patience.—If I heard you rightly
The duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court?

2 Brother.

He hath.

Jaques.

To him will I: out of these conventes
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd.—

You [To Duke, Senior] to your former honour
I bequeath; [it:
Your patience, and your virtue, well deserve
You [To Orlando] to a love, that your true faith doth merit; — [great allies:
You [To Oliver] to your land, and love,
You [To Silvius] to a long and well deserved bed thy love, and voyage
And you [To Touchstone] to wrangling: for
Is but for two months victual'd.—So, to your pleasures:
I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke, Senior.

Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaques.

To see no pastime, I:—what you would have,
I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave.

[Exit.

Duke, Senior.

Proceed, proceed; we will begin these rites,
As we do trust they'lI end in true delights.

EPILOGUE.

Rosalind.

It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue; but it is no more unseasonable, than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue; yet to good wine they do use good bushes, and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in, then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play? I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me;

my my way is, to conjure you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women! for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you: and I charge you, O men! for the love you bear to women, (as I perceive by your simpering none of you hates them,) that between you and the women, the play may please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me, and breasts that I defied not; and, I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsey, bid me farewell.

TAMING OF THE SHREW.

INDUCTION.

SCENE 1. Before an Alehouse on a Heath.

Enter Hostess and Sly.

I’LL pheese you, in faith.

Hostess.

A pair of stocks, you rogue.

Sly.

You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Sly.

No, not a denier. Go, by S. Jeronimy!

Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Hostess.

I know my remedy; I must go fetch the third-borough.

Sly. [Exit.

Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I’ll answer him by law. I’ll not budge an inch, boy: let him come, and kindly.

[Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

A Lord, Christopher Sly, a Tinker. Hostess, Page, Players, Huntsmen, and Servants.

INDUCTION.

Hostess.

Wind Horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

Lord.

Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:

Brach Merriman,—the poor cur is embossed,

And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth’d brach.

Saw’st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good

At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault?

I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1 Huntsman.

Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord;

He cried upon it at the merest loss,

And twice to-day pick’d out the dullest scent;

Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord.

Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet,

I would esteem him worth a dozen such.

But sup them well, and look unto them all;

To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Huntsman.

I will, my lord.

Lord.

What’s here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2 Huntsman.
TAMING OF THE SHREW.

2 Huntsman.
He breathes, my lord. Were he not warm'd with ale,
This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord.
O, monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies,
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.
What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1 Huntsman.
Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 Huntsman.
It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord.
Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jest.
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures;
Balm his foul head with warm distilled waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:
Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,
And, with a low submissive reverence,
Say,—what is it your honour will command?
Let one attend him with a silver bason,
Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say,—will'p please your lordship cool your some one be ready with a costly suit, hands?
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease.
Persuade him, that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is,—say, that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs:
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

1 Huntsman.
My lord, I warrant you, we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord.
Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.—
(Sigl does come out. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds:

[Exit Servant.

Belike, some noble gentleman, that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.—

Re-enter Servant.

How now? who is it?

Servant.
An it please your honour, Players that offer service to your lordship.

Lord.
Bid them come near.

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

Players.
We thank your honour.

Lord.
Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

2 Player.
So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord.
With all my heart.—This fellow I remember,
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:—
'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well.
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

1 Player.
I think, 'twas Soto that your honour means.

Lord.
'Tis very true: thou did'st it excellent.
Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord who will hear you play to-night;
But I am doubtful of your modesties,
Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,) You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile he grows impatient.

1 Player.
Fear not, my lord: we can contain ourselves,
Were he the veriest ant next in the world.

Lord.
Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing that their affairs,—

[Exeunt Servant and Players.

[To a Servant.] Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew my page,
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;
And call him madam, do him obeisance:
Tell him from me, as he will win my love,
He bear himself with honourable action,
Such as he hath observ'd in the ladies
Unto their lords by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy,
And say,—what is't your honour will command,
Wherein your lady, and your humble wife
May show her duty, and make known her love?
And then, with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seven years hath esteem'd him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar.
And if the boy have not a woman's gift,
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift,
Which, in a napkin being close convey'd,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst:
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.—

[Exit Servant.

I know, the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
I long to hear him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

[Exeunt. SCENE
SCENE II. A Bed-chamber in the Lord's House.

Sly is discovered, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with bason, ever, and appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a Servant.

Sly.

For God's sake, a pot of small ale.

1 Servant.

Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

2 Servant.

Will't please your honour taste of these conserves?

3 Servant.

What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly.

I am Christopher Sly; call not me honour, nor lordship: I never drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef. Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear, for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometimes, more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the over-leather.

Lord.

Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour! O! that a mighty man, of such descent, Of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!

Sly.

What! would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son, of Burton-heath; by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat alewife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the liegest knife in Christendom. What! I am not bestrafed. Here's—

1 Servant.

O! this it is that makes your lady mourn.

2 Servant.

O! this it is that makes your servants droop.

Lord.

Hence comes it that your kindred shun your As beaten hence by your strange lunacy. [house, O, noble lord! I bethink thee of thy birth:
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment.
And banish hence these object lowly dreams. Look how thy servants do attend on thee, Each in his office ready at thy beck:
Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays.

Music.

And twenty caged nightingales do sing:
Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk, we will bestrew the ground:
Or wilt thou ride, thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar
Above the morning lark: or wilt thou hunt?
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Servant.

Say wilt thou course, thy greyhounds are as swift
As breathed stags, ay, fleeter than the roe.

2 Servant.

Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee Adonis painted by a running brook, [straight And Cytherea all in sedges hid.
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord.

We'll show thee Jo as she was a maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,
As lively painted as the deed was done.

3 Servant.

Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her legs, that one shall swear she bleeds;
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep.
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord.

Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:
Thou hast a lady, far more beautiful
Than any woman in this waning age.

1 Servant.

And, till the tears that she hath shed for thee,
Like envious floods, o'er-ran her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world;
And yet she is inferior to none.

Sly.

Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak:
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things—
Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed,
And not a tinker, nor Christopher Sly—
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
And once again, a pot o'the smallest ale.

2 Servant.

Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?
[Servants present an ever, bason, and napkin.

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
O, that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in a dream,
Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly.

These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.
But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Servant.

O! yes, my lord, but very lile words:—
For though you lay here in this goody chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door,
And rai[n upon the hostess of the house,
And say you would present her at the feet,
Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts.

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly.

Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

2 Servant.

Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,
Nor no such men, as you have reckond' up,—
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turf, and Henry Peppernet,
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly.

Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!
Amen.

Sly.

I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter
ACT I.

SCENE I. Padua. A public Place.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Lucentio.

TRANIO, since, for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy:
And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe, and imply institute
A course of learning, and ingenious studies.

Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being; and my father, first
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincenzo's come of the Bonteschei.
Vincenzo's son, bared in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes concili'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.

Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow bash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satisly seeks to quench his thirst.

Tranio.

Mi perdonate, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as yourself,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy:
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics, nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd.
Balk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk:
Music and poesy use to quicken you:
The mathematics, and the metaphysics,
(you)
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves
Who profit grows, where is no pleasure ta'en:—
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

Lucentio.

Gramerclies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.

If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness,
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: what company is this?

Tranio.

Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, Gremio, and Hortensio. Lucentio and Tranio stand aside.

Baptista.

Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know:
That Is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder.
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well.
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gremio.

To cart her rather: she's too rough for me.—
There, there, Hortensio, will you any youth?

Katharina.
Katharina. [To Baptista.
I pray you, sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
Hortensio.

Mates, mad! how mean you that? no mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.
Katharina.
I’faith, sir, you shall never need to fear:
I wis, it’s not half way to her heart;
But, if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noodle with a three-leg’d stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.
Hortensio.
From all such devils, good Lord, deliver us!
Gremio.
And me too, good Lord!

Hush, master! here is some good pastime toward:
That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.
Lucentio.
But in the other’s silence do I see
Maid’s mild behaviour, and sobriety.
Peace, Tranio!
Tranio.
Well said, master: mum I and gaze your fill.
Baptista.

Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said.— Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne’er the less, my girl.
Katharina.
A pretty peat! it is best
Put finger in the eye,— an she knew why.
Bianca.

Sister, content you in my discontent.—
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books, and instruments, shall be my com-
On them to look, and practise by myself. [pany,
Lucentio.

Hark, Tranio! thou may’st hear Minerva speak.
Hortensio.

Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?
Sorry am I, that our good will effects
Bianca’s grief.
Gremio.

Why, will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the peneance of her tongue?
Baptista.

Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv’d;—
Go in, Bianca.

And for I know, she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth.—If you, Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio, you, know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal.
To mine own children in good bringing-up;
And so farewell. Katharina, you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca.
Katharina.

Why, and I trust, I may go too; may I not?
What! shall I be appointed hours, as though,
belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave?
Ha!
Gremio.
You may go to the devil’s dam: your gifts are so good, here’s none will hold you. Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out: our cake’s dough on both sides. Farewell,—yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hortensio.
So will I, signior Gremio: but a word, I pray.
Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brook’d parle, know now upon advice, it toucheth us both, that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca’s love, to labour and effect one thing
’specially.

Gremio.

What’s that, I pray?
Hortensio.

Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.
Gremio.

A husband! a devil.
Hortensio.

I say, a husband.
Gremio.

I say, a devil. Think’st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?
Hortensio.

Tush, Gremio! though it pass your patience;
and mine, to endure her loud alarams, why, man, there be good follows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.
Gremio.

I cannot tell, but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition,—to be whipped at the high-cross every morning.

Hortensio.

‘Faith, as you say, there’s small choice in rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till by helping Baptista’s eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to’t all of.—Sweet Bianca! — Happy man be his done! He that runs fastest get’s the ring. How say you, signior Gremio?

Gremio.

I am agreed: and ‘would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooling, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

[Exeunt Gremio and Hortensio.]

Tranio. [Advancing.
I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?
Lucentio.

O, Tranio! till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible; or likely;
But see! while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness:
And now in plainness do confess to thee,—
That art to me as secret, and as dear,
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was.—
Tranio, I burn, I pine; I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl.
Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Tranio

Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If love have touch'd you, nought remains but Redime te captum, quam quas minimis. [so—Lucentio.

Gramercies, lad! go forward: this contents; The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.
Tranio.

Master, you look'd so longly on the maid, Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all. Lucentio.

O! yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face, Such as the daughter of Aggenor had, That made great Jove to humble him to her hand, When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand. Lucentio.

Rcdime

Saw you no more? mark'd you not, how her sister Began to scold, and raise up such a storm, That mortal ears might hardly endure the din? Lucentio Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move, And with her breath she did perfume the air: Sacred, and sweet, was all I saw in her. Tranio.

Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance. — I pray, awake, sir: if you love the maid, Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands: Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd, That, till the father rid his hands of her, Master, your love must live a maid at home; And therefore has he closely mew'd her up, Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors. Lucentio.

Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he! But art thou not advis'd, he took some care To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her? Tranio.

Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 'tis plotted. Lucentio

I have it, Tranio. Tranio.

Master, for my hand, Both our inventions meet and jump in one. Lucentio.

Tell me thine first. Tranio.

You will be schoolmaster, And undertake the teaching of the maid: That's your device. Lucentio.

It is: may it be done? Tranio.

Not possible; for who shall bear your part, And be in Padua, here, Vincentio's son; Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends; Visit his countrymen, and banquet them? Lucentio.

Basta; content thee; for I have it full. We have not yet been seen in any house, Nor can we be distinguished by our faces, For man, or master; then, it follows thus: Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead, Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should. I will some other be; some Florentine, Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa. 'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so: — Tranio, at once Uncase thee; take my cloak'd hat and cloak: When Biondello comes, he waits on thee, But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tranio.

So had you need. [They exchange habits.
In brief, sir, sith it your pleasure is, And I am tied to be obedient;
(For so your father charg'd me at our parting; " Be serviceable to my son," quoth he, Although, I think, 'twas in another sense,) I am content to be Lucentio, Because so well I love Lucentio.

Lucentio.

Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves, And let me be a slave, 't achieve that maid Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue.—Sirrah, where have you been? Biondello

Where have I been? Nay, how now? where are you? Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes, Or you stol'n his, or both? pray, what's the news? Lucentio.

Sirrah, come hither: 'tis no time to jest And therefore frame your manners to the time. Your fellow Tranio, here, to save my life, Puts my apparel and my countenance on, And I for my escape have put on his; For in a quarrel, since I came ashore, I kill'd a man, and fear I was descried. Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes, While I make way from hence to save my life. You understand me?

Biondello. I, sir? ne'er a whit. Lucentio.

And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth: Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio. Biondello.

The better for him; 'would I were so too! Tranio.

So would I, 'faith, boy, to have the next wish after, daughter. That Lucentio, indeed, had Baptist's youngest But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise companies: You use your manners discreetly in all kind of When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio; But in all places else, your master, Lucentio. Tranio.

Tranio, let's go. One thing more rests, that thyself execute; To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why, Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty. [Exeunt.

1 Servant.

My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play. Sly.

Yes, by saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: comes there any more of it? Page.

My lord, 'tis but begun. Sly.

'Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady; would 'twere done.

SCENE 11. The same Before Hortensio's House.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Petruchio.

Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all,
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and, I trust, this is his house.—
Here, sirrah Grumio! knock, I say.

Grumio.
Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has refused your worship?

Petruchio.
Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Grumio.
Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I,
sir, that I should knock you here, sir?

Petruchio.
Villain, I say, knock me at this gate;
And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.

Grumio.
My master is grow'n quarrelsome.—I should knock you first,
And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Petruchio.
Will it not be?
'Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll wring it:
I'll try how you can sol fa, and sing it.

[He wrings Grumio by the ears.

Grumio.
Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Petruchio.
Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter Hortensio.

Hortensio.
How now! what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio!
How do you all at Verona?

Petruchio.
Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?
Con tutto il core ben trovato, may I say.

Hortensio.
Alla nostra casa ben venuto, molto honorato signor mio Petruchio. [quarrel.
Rise, Grumio, rise: we will compound this
Grumio.
Nay, 'tis no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin.—If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, —look you, sir,—he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly, sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps, (for aught I see) too and thirty,—a pip
out?
Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first,
Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Petruchio.
A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio,
I bade the rascal knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Grumio.
Knock at the gate?—O heavens! Spake you not these words plain,—"Sirrah, knock me here; rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly?" And come you now with knocking at the gate?

Petruchio.
Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hortensio.

Petruchio, patience: I am Grumio's pledge.
Why this? a heavy chance 'twixt him and you;
Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio,
And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale
Blows you to Padua, here, from old Verona?

Petruchio.
Such wind as scatters young men through the world,
To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience grows, but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:
Antonio, my father, is deceas'd,
And I have thrust myself into this maze,
Haply to wife, and thrive, as best I may,
Crows in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hortensio.

Petruchio, shall I then come soundly to thee,
And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favoured wife?
Thou dost thank me but a little for my counsel;
And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich:—but thou'rt too much my friend,
And I'll not wish thee to her.

Hortensio.
Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we Few words suffice; and therefore if thou know One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife,
(As wealth is burthen of my woeful dance)
Be she as foul as was Florentia's love,
As old as Sybil, and as cursed and shrewd
As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affection's edge in me. Were she as rough
As the swelling Adriatic sea,
I come to wife it wealthily in Padua,
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Grumio.
Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet, or an agit-baby; or an old trot with a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses. Why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

Hortensio.

Petruchio, since we are steep'd thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest.
I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young, and beauteous;
Brought up, as best becomes a gentlewoman:
Her only fault, and that is faults enough, is, that she is intolerable curt,
And shrewd, and froward; so beyond all measure,
That, were my state far worse than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Petruchio.

Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect:
Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough,
For I will board her, though she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Petruchio.
Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous gentleman:
Her name is Katharina Minola.
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Petruchio.
I know her father, though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well.
I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter,
Unless you will accompany me thither.

Grumio.
I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts! O my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, or so; why, that's nothing:
an he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks.
I'
I'll tell you what, sir,—an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.

Hortensio.

Tarry, Petruchio; I must go with thee. For in Baptista's keep my treasure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, his youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca, and her withholds from me, and other more suitors to her, and rivals in my love; Supposing it a thing impossible, For those defects I have before reheard, That ever Katharine will be wood'd: Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en, That none shall have access unto Bianca, Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.

Grumio.

Katharine the curst! A title for a maid of all titles the worst.

Hortensio.

Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace, And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes, To old Baptista as a school-master. Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca; That so I may by this device, at least Have leave and leisure to make love to her, And unsuspicious court her by herself.

Enter Gremio, and Lucentio disguised, with books under his arm.

Grumio.

Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: who goes there? ha!

Hortensio.

Peace, Grumio; 'tis the rival of my love.

Petruchio.

A proper stripling, and an amorous one!

[They retire.

Gremio.

O! very well! I have perus'd the note.

Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound: All books of love, see that at any hand, And see you read no other lectures to her. You understand me.—Over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality, [too, I'll mend it with a largess.—Take your papers, And let me have them very well perfum'd, For she is sweeter than perfume itself, To whom they go. What will you read to her?

Lucentio.

Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you, As for my patron, stand you so assur'd, As firmly as yourself were still in place: Yea, and perhaps with more successful words Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gremio.

O, this leaning! what a thing it is!

Grumio.

O, this woodcock! what an ass it is!

Petruchio.

Peace, sirrah!

Hortensio.

Gremio, mum!—[Coming forward]—God save you, signior Gremio!

Gremio.

And you are well met, signior Hortensio.

Trow you, whither I am going?—To Baptista I promis'd to inquire carefully [Minola. About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca.

And, by good fortune, I have lighted well On this young man; for learning, and behaviour, Fit for her turn; well read in poetry, And other books,—good ones, I warrant ye.

Hortensio.

'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman

Hath promis'd me to help me to another,

A fine musician to instruct our mistress:

So shall I no whit be behind in duty

To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gremio.

Belov'd of me, and that my deeds shall prove.

Grumio.

And that his bags shall prove.

Hortensio.

Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love. Listen to me, and if you speak me fair, I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.

Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met, Upon agreement from us to his liking, Will undertake to woo curst Katharine; Yes, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gremio.

So said, so done, is well.—

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Petruchio.

I know, she is an irksome, brawling scold: If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.

Gremio.

No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman?

Petruchio.

Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:

My father dead, my fortune lives for me; And I do hope good days, and long, to see.

Gremio.

O! sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange;

But if you have a stomach, to'r O'God's name: You shall have me assisting you in all.

But will you woo this wild cat?

Petruchio.

Grumio.

Will I live?

Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Petruchio.

Why came I hither, but to that intent?

Think you, a little din can daunt mine ears?

Have I not in my time heard lions roar?

Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds, Rage like an angry boar, chased with sweat?

Have I not heard great ordnance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?

Have I not in a pitched battle heard [clang! Loud 'larmus, neighting steeds, and trumpets'] And do you tell me of a woman's tongue, That gives not half so great a blow to hear, As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

Tush! tush! I fear boys with bugs.

Grumio.

For he fears none.

Hortensio.

Hark!

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,

My mind presumes, for his own good, and yours.

Hortensio.

I promis'd we would be contributors,

And bear his charge of wooling, whatsoever.

Gremio.

And so we will, provided that he win her.

Grumio.

I would, I were as sure of a good dinner.
Enter Tranio, bravely apparelled; and Biondello.

Tranio.

Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold, Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest To the house of signior Baptista Minola? [way Biondello.

He that has the two fair daughters:—is't he you mean?

Tranio.

Even he, Biondello.

Gremio.

Hark you, sir: you mean not her to—

Tranio.

Perhaps, him and her, sir: what have you to do?

Petruchio.

Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.

Tranio.

I love no chiders, sir.—Biondello, let's away.

Lucentio. [Aside.

Well begun, Tranio.

Hortensio.

Sir, a word ere you go. [no? Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea, or

Tranio.

An if I be, sir, is it any offence?

Gremio.

No; if without more words you will get you hence.

Tranio.

Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free For me, as for you?

Gremio.

But so is not she.

Tranio.

For what reason, I beseech you?

Gremio.

For this reason, if you'll know, That she's the choice love of signior Gremio.

Hortensio.

That she's the chosen of signior Hortensio.

Tranio.

Softly, my masters! If you be gentlemen, Do me this right; hear me with patience. Baptista is a noble gentleman, To whom my father is not all unknown, And was his daughter fairer than she is, She may more suitors have, and me for one. Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers; Then, well one more may fair Bianca have, And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one, Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.

Gremio.

What! this gentleman will out-talk us all. Lucentio.

Sir, give him head: I know, he'll prove a jade.

Petruchio.

Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

Hortensio.

Sir, let me be so bold as ask you, Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

Tranio.

No, sir; but hear I do, that he hath two, The one as famous for a scolding tongue, As is the other for beauteous modesty.

Petruchio.

Sir, sir, the first's for me; let her go by.

Gremio.

Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules, And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.
Katharina.
If that be jest, then all the rest was so.
Enter Baptista.

Baptista.
Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?—
Bianca, stand aside:—poor girl! she weeps.—
Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her.—
For shame, thou biding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Katharina.
Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd.
[Flies after Bianca.

Baptista.
What! will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see,
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day,
And for your love to her lead apes in hell,
Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge.
[Exit Katharina.

Baptista.
Was ever gentleman thus grief'd as I?
But who comes here?

Enter Gremio, with Lucentio in a mean habit:
Petruchio, with Hortensio as a Musician; and Tranio, with Biondello bearing a lute and books.

Gremio.
Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.

Baptista.
Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio. God save you, gentlemen!

Petruchio.
And you, good sir. Pray, have you not a daughter,
Call'd Katharina, fair, and virtuous?

Baptista.
I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.

Gremio.
You are too blunt: go to it orderly.

Petruchio.
You wrong me, signior Gremio: give me leave—
I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
That, hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability, and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to show myself a foreign guest Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report which I so oft have heard.
And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine,
[Presenting Hortensio.
Cunning in music, and the mathematics,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant.
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Baptista.
You're welcome, sir, and, he, for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katharine, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more my grief.

Petruchio.
I see, you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my company.

Baptista.
Mistake me not; I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?

Petruchio.
Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son;
A man well known throughout all Italy.

Baptista.
I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gremio.
Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too.
Backare: you are marvellous forward.

Petruchio.
O I pardon me, signior Gremio; I would fain be doing.

Gremio.
I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.—
Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure
Of it. To express the like kindness myself, that have been more kindly beholding to you than any,
I freely give unto you this young scholar, [Presenting Lucentio] that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics. His name is Cambio: pray accept his service.

Baptista.
A thousand thanks, signior Gremio: welcome, good Cambio. — But, gentle sir, [To Tranio.] methinks, you walk like a stranger: may I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tranio.
Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own,
That, being a stranger in this city here,
Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair, and virtuous.
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,—
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest:
And, toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple Instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latin books:
If you accept them, then their worth is great.

Baptista.
Lucentio is your name? of whence, I pray?

Tranio.
Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.

Baptista.
A mighty man of Pisa: by report
I know him well. You are very welcome, sir.—
Take you [To Hortensio] the lute, and you [To Lucentio] the set of books;
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within! [Exit

Servant.
Sirrah, lead these gentlemen
To my daughters; and tell them both,
These are their tutors: bid them use them well.
[Exit Servant, with Hortensio, Lucentio, and Biondello.
We will go walk a little in the orchard,
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Petruchio.
Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And
And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well, and in him, me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:
Then, tell me,—if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Baptista.

After my death, the one half of my lands,
And in possession, twenty thousand crowns.

Petruchio.

And, for that reasons, I'll assure her of
Her widowhood, be it that she survive me,
In all my lands and leases whatsoever.
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Baptista.

Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love; for that is all in all.

Petruchio.

Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury,
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all;
So I to her, and so she yields to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Baptista.

Well may'st thou woo, and happy be thy speed;
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Petruchio.

Aye, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Re-enter Hortensio, with his head broken.

Baptista.

How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

Hortensio.

For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Baptista.

What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hortensio.

I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier:
Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Baptista.

Why, then thou can'st not break her to the lute?

Hortensio.

Why no, for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When, with a most impatient, devilish spirit,
"Frets, call you these?" with such a heat;
And with that word she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillar looking through the lute,
While she did call me rascal fiddler,
And twanging Jack, and driving twenty such vile
As had she strung to misuse me.

Petruchio.

Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench I
Love her ten times more than e'er I did:
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Baptista.

Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:
Proceed in practice with your younger daughter:
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.—

Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Petruchio.

I pray you do; I will attend her here,
[Exeunt Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio.

And woo her with some spirit when she comes,
Say, that she rai; why, then I'll tell her plain,
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say, that she crown'd; I'll say, she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say, she be mute, and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say, she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week;
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day [riad—
When I shall ask the bans, and when be mar-
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter Katharina.

Good-morrow, Kate, for that's your name, I hear.

Katharina.

Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing;
They call me Katharine, that do talk of me.

Petruchio.

You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom;
Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all eate; and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation:
Hearing thy mildness praised in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Katharina.

Mov'd! in good time; let him that mov'd you bether.
Remove you hence. I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable?

Petruchio.

Why, what's a moveable?

Katharina.

A joint-stool.

Petruchio.

Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.

Katharina.

Asses are made to bear, and so are you.

Petruchio.

Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Katharina.

No such jade as you, if me you mean.

Petruchio.

Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light—

Katharina.

Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.

Petruchio.

Should be? should buzz.

Katharina.

Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.

Petruchio.

O, slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Katharina.

Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Petruchio.

Come, come, you wisp; if faith, you are too angry.
Katharina. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
Petruchio. My remedy is, then, to pluck it out.
Katharina. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Petruchio. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?
Katharina. In his tongue.
Petruchio. Whose tongue?
Katharina. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.
Petruchio. What shall I with my tongue in your tail? Nay, good Kate, I am a gentleman. (Come again:)
Petruchio. That I'll try. (Striking him)
I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again.
Katharina. So may you lose your arms: If you strike me you are no gentleman, And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.
Petruchio. A herald, Kate? O! put me in thy books.
Katharina. What is your crest? a coxcomb?
Petruchio. A combleess cock, so Kate will be my hen.
Katharina. No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven.
Petruchio. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.
Katharina. It is my fashion when I see a crab.
Petruchio. Why, here's no crab, and therefore look not sour.
Katharina. There is, there is.
Petruchio. Then show it me.
Katharina. Had I a glass, I would.
Petruchio. What, what, what is my face?
Katharina. Well aim'd of such a young one.
Petruchio. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.
Katharina. Yet you are wither'd.
Petruchio. 'Tis with cares.
Katharina. I care not.
Petruchio. Nay, hear you, Kate: In sooth, you 'scape not so.
Katharina. I chafe you, if I tarry: let me go.
Petruchio. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle. 'Twas told me, you were rough, and coy, and And now I find report a very liar; [ullen,

For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous, flowers. But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look as-kance, Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will: Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk: But thou with mildness euerinist thy woors, With gentle conference, soft and affable. Why does the world report that Kate doth limp? O, slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig, Is straight, and slender; and as brown in hue As hazel nuts, and sweeter than the kernels. O! let me see thee walk; thou dost not halt.

Katharina. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.
Petruchio. Did ever Dian so become a grove, As Kate this chamber with her princely gait? O! be thou Dian, and let her be Kate, And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful.

Katharina. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Petruchio. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

A witty mother! witless else her son.
Petruchio. Am I not wise?
Katharina. Yes; keep you warm.
Petruchio. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy And therefore, setting all this that awhile, [bed. Thus in plain terms:—your father hath con-
That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed And, will you, nill you, I will marry you. Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn; For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty, Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well, Thou must be married to no man but me: For I am he, am born to tame you, Kate, And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate Conformable. as other household Kates. Here comes your father: never make denial; I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio

Baptista. Now, signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?
Petruchio. How but well, Sir? how but well? It were impossible I should speed amiss.

Baptista. Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your Katharina. Call you me, daughter? now, I promise you, You have show'd a tender fatherly regard, To wish me wed to one half lunatic: A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack, That thinks with oaths 'tis face the matter out.

Petruchio. Father, 'tis thus:—yourself and all the world, That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her. If she be curst, it is for policy, For she's not froward, but modest as the dove; She is not hot, but temperate as the morn; For patience she will prove a second Grisell, And Roman Lucrece for her chastity; [father, And to conclude, we have 'greed so well to That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.
First, as you know, my house within the city
Is richly furnished with plate and gold;
Basons, and ewers, to lave her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry:
In ivory cofers I have stuff'd my crowns;
In Cypress chests my arays, counterpoints, Costly apparel, tents, and canopius.
Fine linen, Turky cushions boss'd with pearl,
Valance of Venice gold in needle-work,
Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house, or housekeeping; then, at my farm
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess;
And if I die to-morrow this is hers,
If whilst I live she will be only mine.

That “only” came well in. — Sir, list to me:
I am my father's heir, and only son:
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand ducats by the year
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.
What, have I pinch'd you, signior Gremio?

Two thousand ducats by the year of land!
My land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have; besides an argosy,
That now is lying in Marseillest road —
What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Gremio,
Gremio, 'tis known, my father hath no less
Than three great argosies, besides two galleasses,
And twelve tight galleys: these will assure her,
And twice as much, what' er thou offer's next.

Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more;
And she can have no more than I have: —
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Why, then, the maid is mine from all the world,
By your firm promise: Gremio is out-vied.

I must confess, your offer is the best;
And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own: else, you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?

That's but a cavil: he is old, I young.

And may not young men die, as well as old?

Well, gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd. — On Sunday next, you know,
My daughter Katharine is to be married:
Now, on the Sunday following shall Bianca
Be bide to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both.

Adieu, good neighbour. Now I fear thee not.
Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all, and, in his waning age,
Set foot under thy table. Tut! a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy.

A vengeance on your crafty wether'd hide!
ACT III.

SCENE I. A Room in Baptista's House.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Lucentio.

FIDDLER, forbear: you grow too forward, sir.

Have you so soon forgot the entertainment Her sister Katharine welcom'd you withal?

Hortensio

But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
Then, give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Lucentio.

Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man?
After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause serve in your harmony.

Hortensio.

Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.

Bianca.

Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breaching scholar in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours, nor pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles:
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun'd.

Hortensio.

You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune?

[Lucentio retires.

Bianca.

That will be never:—tune your instrument.

Lucentio.

Where left we last?

Bianca.

Here, madam:

[Hortensio, serving as a waiter.]

Bianca.

Construe them.

Hortensio.

[Aside.]

Bianca.

You have been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing fairly drawn.

Bianca.

Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hortensio.

Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bianca.

Gamut, I am, the ground of all accord;
A re, to pleas Hortensio's passion;
B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord;
C flat, that loves with all affection;
D sol re, one chief, two notes have I:
E la mi, show pity, or I die.

Call you this gamut? tut! I like it not:
Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice,
To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Servant.

Servant.

Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,
And help to dress your sister's chamber up:
You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bianca.

Farewell, sweet masters, both: I must be gone.

Exeunt Bianca and Servant.

Lucentio.
Lucentio.

"Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay."

[Exit.}

Hortensio.

But I have cause to pry into this pedant: Methinks, he looks as though he were in love. Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble, To cast thy wandering eyes on every state, Set e thee that list: if once I find thee ranging, Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. [Exit.

SCENE II. The same. Before Baptista's House.
Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katharine, Bianca, Lucentio, and Attendants.

Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day That Katharine and Petruchio should be married. And yet we hear not of our son-in-law. [riled, What will be said? what mockery will it be, To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage? What says Lucentio to this shame of ours? Katharine.

No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be for'd. To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart, Unto a mad-brain rude by, full of spleen; Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at I told you, i. he was a frantic fool, [leisure. Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour; And to be noted for a merry man, [ringle, He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage, Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the bands; Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd. Now must the world point at poor Katharine, And say,—'Tis too, there is mad Petruchio's wife, If it would please him come and marry her."

Tranio.

Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too. Upon my life, Petruchio means but well. Whatever fortune stays him from his word: Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise; Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

Katharine.

Would Katharine had never seen him though! [Exit, weeping, followed by Bianca, and others. Baptista.

Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep, For such an injury would vex a very saint, Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Blondello.

Blondello.

Master, master! old news, and such news as you never heard of!

Baptista.

Is it new and old too? how may that be? Blondello.

Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Baptista. Is he come?

Blondello. Why, no, sir.

Baptista. What then?

Blondello. He is coming.

Baptista. When will he be here?

Blondello. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.

Tranio.

But, say, what to thine old news?

Blondello.

Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat, and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches, thrice turned; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword t'en out of the town armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points; his horse hipped with an old moth saddle, and stirrups of no kindred: besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of wind-galls, sped with spavins, railed with the yellows, past cure of the flies, stark spoiled with the staggerers, begnawn with the bots; swayed in the back, and shoulder-shotten; 'ne'er-legged before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather; which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girth six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with patchthread.

Baptista.

Who comes with him?

Blondello.

O, sir! his lackey, for all the world caparisoned like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and "the humour of forty fancies" pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel, and not like a Christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tranio.

'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion: Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

Baptista.

I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes.

Blondello.

Why, sir, he comes not.

Baptista.

Didst thou not say, he comes?

Blondello. Who? that Petruchio came?

Baptista.

Ay, that Petruchio came.

Blondello.

No, sir; I say, his horse comes, with him on his back.

Baptista.

Why, that's all one.

Blondello.

Nay, by Saint James, I hold you a penny, A horse and a man Is more than one, And yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Petruchio. Come, where be these gallants? who is at home?

Baptista. You are welcome, sir.

Petruchio. And yet I come not well.

Baptista. And yet you hatt not.
Tranio.

Thy degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business.
We'll over-reach the grey-beard, Gremio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola,
The quaint musician, amorous Licio,
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Re-enter Gremio.

Signor Gremio, came you from the church?

Gremio.

As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tranio.

And is the bride, and bridgroom, coming home?

Gremio.

A bridgroom say you? 'tis a groom indeed;
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tranio.

Curster than she? why, 'tis impossible.

Gremio.

Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tranio.

Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gremio.

Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.
I'll tell you, sir, Lucentio: when the priest
Should ask—if Katharine should be his wife,
"Ay, by gogs-wouns," quoth he; and swore so loud,
That, all-amaz'd, the priest let fall the book,
And, as he stoop'd again to take it up. [cuff,
This mad-brain'd bridgroom took him such
That down fell priest and book, and book and priest:
"Now take them up," quoth he, "if any list."

Tranio.

What said the wench when he arose again?

Gremio.

Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd
As if the vicar meant to cozen him. [and swore,
But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine:—" A health!" quoth he; as if He had been abroad, carousing to his mates
After a storm:—quaff'd off the muscadel,
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;
Having no other reason,
But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.
This done, he took the bride about the neck,
And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack,
That, at the parting, all the church did echo:
And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;
And after me, I know, the rout is coming:
Such a mad marriage never was before.
Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play. [Music.

Enter Pettruchio, Katharina, Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and Train.

Pettruchio.

Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains.
I know, you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;
But, so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Baptista.

Is't possible you will away to-night?

Pettruchio.

I must away to-day, before night come.
Make it no wonder: if you knew my business,
You would entreat me rather go than stay.—
And, honest company, I thank you all,
TAMING OF THE SHIREW.

ACT III. Sc. 11.

TAMING OF THE SHIREW.

ACT III. Sc. 11.

That have beheld me give away myself
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife:
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence; and farewell to you all.

Tranio.
Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Petruichio.
It may not be.

Gremio.
Let me entreat you.

Petruichio.
It cannot be.

Katharina.
Are you content to stay?

Petruichio.
I am content.

Katharina.
I am content you shall entreat me stay,
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Katharina.
Now, if you love me. stay.

Petruichio.
Grumio, my horse!

Grumio.
Ay, sir, they be ready: the oats have eaten the horses.

Katharina.
Nay, then,
Do what thou canst. I will not go to-day;
No, nor to-morrow, not till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way;
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;
For me, I'll not be gone, till I please myself.—
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Petruichio.
O, Kate! content thee: pr'ythee be not angry,

Katharina.
I will be angry. What hast thou to do?
Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure

Gremio.
Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.

Katharina.
Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner.
I see, a woman may be made a fool,
If she had not a spirit to resist.

Petruichio.
They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command.

Obey the bride, you that attend on her:
Go to the feast, revel and domineer,
Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,
Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves.
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.
Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;
I will be master of what is mine own.
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household-stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything;
And here she stands; touch her whoever dare:
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua.—Grumio,
Draw forth thy weapon; we're beset with thieves:
Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.—
Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee, Kate:
I'll buckle thee against a million.

[Exeunt Petruichio, Katharina, and Grumio.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A Hall in Petruichio's Country House.

Enter Grumio.

Grumio.
Fie, fie, on all tired jades, on all mad masters,
And all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten?
Was ever man so razed? Was ever man so weary?
I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me; but, I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself, for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold Holla, hoa! Curtis!

Enter Curtis.

Curtis.
Who is that, calls so coldly?

Grumio.
A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou may'st slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

Curtis.
Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?

Grumio.
O! ay, Curtis, ay; and therefore fire, fire: cast on no water.

Curtis.
Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

Grumio.
She was, good Curtis, before this frost; but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast, for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.

Curtis.
Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

Grumio.
TAMING OF THE SHERW.

Grumio.

Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?

Curtis.

I pr'ythee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Grumio.

A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and, therefore, fire. Do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curtis.

There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news?

Grumio.

Why, "Jack boy! ho boy!" and as much news as thou wilt.

Curtis.

Come, you are so full of conycatching.—

Grumio.

Why therefore, fire: for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewn, cobwebs swept, the serving-men in their new fustian, the white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, the carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Curtis.

All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news?

Grumio.

First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

How?

Grumio.

Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Curtis.

Let's ha'nt, good Grumio.

Grumio.

Lend thine ear.

Curtis.

Here.

Grumio.

There.

Curtis.

This 'tis to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Grumio.

And therefore 'tis called, a sensible tale; and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: \textit{Imprimis}, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress.

Curtis.

Both of one horse?

Grumio.

What's that to thee?

Curtis.

Why, a horse.

Grumio.

Tell thou the tale:—but hast thou not crossed me, thou should'st have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou should'st have heard, how miry a place; how she was bemoiled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed, that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper;—with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

Curtis.

By this reckoning he is more shrew than she.

Grumio.

Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home. But what talk I of this?—Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them curtesy with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curtis.

They are.

Grumio.

Call them forth.

Curtis.

Do you hear? ho! you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.

Grumio.

Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curtis.

Who knows not that?

Grumio.

Thou, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her.

Curtis.

I call them forth to credit her.

Grumio.

Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several 	extit{Servants}.

Nathaniel.

Welcome home, Grumio.

Philip.

How now, Grumio?

Joseph.

What, Grumio?

Nicholas.

Fellow Grumio!

Nathaniel.

How now, old lad?

Grumio.

Welcome, you:—how now, you; what, you;—fellow, you; and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nathaniel.

All things is ready. How near is our master?

Grumio.

E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—Cock's passion, silence!—I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Katharina.

Petruchio.

Where be these knaves? What I no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse.

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?

All Servants.

Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Petruchio.

Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!

You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms!
TAMING OF THE SHREW.

ACT IV. Sc. 1.

What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?— Where is the foolish knife I sent before?—

Gruchio.

Here, sir; as foolish as I was before. —

Petruchio.

You peasant swain! you whoreson malt-horse drudge! Did I not bid thee meet me in the park, And bring along those rascal knaves with thee? —

Gruchio.

Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made, And Gabriel's pumps were all unpin'd at the heel; There was no link to colour Peter's hat, And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:

[Gregory ; There were none fine, but Adam, Ralph, and The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly; [you. Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet Petruchio.

Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.—

[Exeunt some of the Servants. "Where is the life that late I led".—

Where are those?—Sit down, Kate, and wel-Soud, soud, soud, soud! [comn.

Re-enter Servants, with supper. Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry, [when? Off with my boots, you rogues! you villains, "It was the friar of orders grey, As he forth walked on his way:"

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot away: Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.—

[Strikes him. Be merry, Kate;—Some water, here; what, ho!—

Enter Servant, with water. Where's my spaniel Troilus?—Sirrah, get you hence, And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither:—

[Exit Servant. One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with,— Water? Where are my slippers?—Shall I have some A bason is presented to him. Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily.—

You whoreson villain I will let it fall? —

[Strikes him. Katharina.

I'attience, I pray you; 'twas a fault unwilling.

Petruchio.

A whoreson, beetleheaded, flap-eared knave! Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach. —

[1?— Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall What's this? mutton? —

1 Servant. Ay.

Petruchio. Who brought it? I Servant. I. Petruchio. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat.
What dogs are these!—Where is the rascal cook? How dare you villains, bring it from the dresser, And serve it thus to me that love it not? There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all. — [Throws the meat, &c. at them. You heedless jolheads, and unmanner'd slaves! What do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.

Katharina.

I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet: The meat was well, if you were so contented. Petruchio.

I tell thee. Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away, And I expressly am forbid to touch it, For it engenders choleric, planteth anger; And better 'twere, that both of us did fast, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric, Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

Be patient; to-morrow 't shall be mended, And for this night we'll fast for company, Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

Peter, didst ever see the like? Peter. He kills her in her own humour. Re-enter Curtis. Grumio. Where is he? Curtis. In her chamber, Making a sermon of continency to her: [soul, And rails, and swears, and rates, that she, poor Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak, And sits as one new-risen from a dream. Away, away! for he is coming hither. —

[Exit. Re-enter Petruchio. Petruchio. Thus have I politicly begun my reign, And 'tis my hope to end successfully. My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty, And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd, For then she never looks upon her lure. Another way I have to man my haggard, To make her come, and know her keeper's call; That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites, That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient. She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat; Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not: As with the meat, some undeserved fault I'll find about the making of the bed, And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster, This way the coverlet, another way the sheet:—

Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend, That all is done in reverend care of her; And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night: And, if she chance to nod, 'twill rai, and brawl, And with the clamour keep her still awake. This is a way to kill a wife with kindness; And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour. He that knows better how to tame a shrew, Now let him speak: 'tis charity to shew. —

Blanca.
What, master, read you? first resolve me that.
Lucentio.
I read that I profess, the Art to Love.
Blanca.
And may you prove, sir, master of your art!
Lucentio.
While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.
[They retire.]
Hortensio.
[Coming forward.
Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me, I pray,
You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.
Tranio.
O, despitful love! unconstant womankind!—
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.
Hortensio.
Mistake no more: I am Sir Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be,
But one that scornt to live in this disguise,
For such a one, as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a calfion.
Know, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.
Tranio.
Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca;
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forwear Bianca and her love for ever.
Hortensio.
See, how they kiss and court!—Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more; but do forwear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.
And here I take the like unfeigned oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would entreat.
Her.
Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court
Hortensio.
Would all the world, but he, had quite forsworn!
For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd me,
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard.
And so farewell, signior Lucentio.—
Kindness in women! not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love:—and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before.
[Exit Hortensio. — Lucentio and Bianca advance.]
Tranio.
Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace,
As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you, with Hortensio.
Blanca.
Tranio, you jest. But have you both forsworn me?
Tranio.
Mistress, we have.
Lucentio.
Then we are rid of Licio.
Tranio.
I'faith, he'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.
This will I do, and this I will advise you.—
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been;
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.

Tranio.

Among them, know you one Vincentio?
Pedant.

I know him not, but I have heard of him:
A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tranio.

He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Biondello. [Aside.

As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.

Tranio.

To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do for your sake,
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes,
That you are like to sir Vincentio.

His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd.

Look, that you take upon you as you should:
You understand me, sir;—so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city.
If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.

Pedant.

O! sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tranio.

Then go with me, to make the matter good.
This, by the way, I let you understand:
My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptistita's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you.
Go with me, to clothe you as becomes you.

Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Room in Petruchio's House.

Enter Katharina and Grumio.

Grumio.

No, no, forsooth; I dare not, for my life.

Katharina.

The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty, have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But, I, who never knew how to entreat,
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed.
And that which spites me more than all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love;
As who should say, if I should sleep, or eat,
'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.
I pr'ythee go, and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Grumio.

What say you to a neat's foot?

Katharina.

'Tis passing good: I pr'ythee let me have it.

Grumio.

I fear, it is too choleric a meat.
How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?

Katharina.

I like it well; good Grumio, fetch it me.

Grumio.

I cannot tell; I fear, 'tis choleric.
What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?

Katharina.

A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Grumio.

Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Katharina.

Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.

Grumio.

Nay, then I will not: you shall have the mustard or else you get no beef of Grumio. [tard, Katharina.

Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Grumio.

Why then, the mustard without the beef.

Katharina.

Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave.

Grumio.

That feed'st me with the very name of meat
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go; get thee gone, I say.

Enter Pettruchio with a dish of meat, and Hortensio.

Petruchio.

How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amort?

Hortensio.

Mistress, what cheer?

Katharina.

'Faith, as cold as can be.

Petruchio.

Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.
Here, love; thou seest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee:
[Sets the dish on a table.

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks,
What! not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not, And all my pains is sorted to no proof.—
Here, take away this dish.

Katharina.

I pray you, let it stand.

Petruchio.

The poorest service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Katharina.

I thank you, sir.

Hortensio.

Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame.
Come, mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Petruchio.

[Aside.

Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me:
[To her.] Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!

Kate, eat apace.—And now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house,
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings.
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and:
With bravery,
With scars, and fans, and double change of
With amber bracelets, beads, and all this

Knavery,

What! hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;
TAMING OF THE SKEW.

Act 1. Sc. 3.
Enter Haberdasher.

Petruchio.

Lay forth the gown.—What news with you, sir? Haberdasher.

Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Petruchio.

Why, this was moulded on a perringer; A velvet duff:—see, see! 'tis lewd and filthy.

Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut shell, A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap; Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.

Katharina.

I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time; And gentilwomen wear such caps as these.

Petruchio.

When you are gentle, you shall have one too; And not till then.

Hortensio. [Aside]

That will not be in haste.

Katharina.

Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak, And speak I will: I am no child, no babe.

Your betters have endure'd me say my mind, And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears.

My tongue will tell the anger of my heart, Or else my heart, concealing it, will break: And, rather than it shall, I will be free, Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Petruchio.

Thy gown? why, ay:—come, tailor, let us see't.

O, mercy, God! what making stuff is here? What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon: What! up and down, carr'd like an apple-tart? Here's sup, and nip, and cut, and slish, and Like to a censer in a barber's shop.—[slash, Why, what, o devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?]

Hortensio. [Aside]

I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tailor.

You bid me make it orderly and well, According to the fashion, and the time.

Petruchio.

Marry, and do; but if you be remember'd, I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every kennel home, For you shall hop without my custom, sir.

I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.

Katharina.

I never saw a better fashion'd gown, More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable.

Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.

Petruchio.

Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tailor.

She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Petruchio.

O, monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou

Petruchio.

Thou blind, thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail; "Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou!—"--

Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread?

Away I thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant, Or I shall so be mete with thy yard, As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou livest. I tell thee, I, that thou hast mar'd her gown.

Tailor.

Your worship is deceiv'd: the gown is made Just as my master bid direction. Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Grumio.

I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.

Tailor.

But how did you desire it should be made?

Grumio.

Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tailor.

But did you not request to have it cut?

Grumio.

Thou hast faced many things.

Tailor.

I have.

Grumio.

Face not me: thou hast braved many men; brave not me: I will neither be faced nor braved. I say unto thee,—I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tailor.

Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Petruchio.

Read it.

Grumio.

The note lies in'thoat, if he say I said so.

"Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown." Grumio.

Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said, a gown.

Petruchio.

Proceed.

Tailor.

"With a small compassed cape."

Grumio.

I confess the cape.

Tailor.

"With a trunk sleeve."

Grumio.

I confess two sleeves.

Tailor.

"The sleeves curiously cut."

Petruchio.

Ay, there's the villainy.

Grumio.

Error i'the bill, sir: error i'the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tailor.

This is true, that I say: an I had thee in place where, thou should'st know it.

Grumio.

I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hortensio.

Grumio. God-a-mercy, Grumio, then he shall have no odds.

Petruchio.

Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.
Grumio.
You are 't the right, sir: 'tis for my mistress.

Petruchio.
Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

Grumio.

Villain, not for thy life! Take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!

Petruchio.

Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?

Grumio.

O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for.

Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use! O, fie, fie, fie!

Petruchio. [Aside.

Hortensio, say wilt thou see the tailor paid. —

Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more.

Hortensio.

Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow: Take no unkindness of his hasty words.

Away, I say; commend me to thy master.

[Exeunt Tailor and Haberdasher.

Petruchio.

Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's,

Even in these honest mean habiliments.

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:

For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich.

And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

So honour peareth in the meanest habit.

What, is the jury more precious than the lark,

Because his feathers are more beautiful? Or is the adder better than the eel,

Because his painted skin contents the eye?

O! no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse

For this poor furniture, and mean array.

If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me;

And therefore frolic: we will hence forthwith,

To feast and sport us at thy father's house.—

Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end.

There will we mount, and thither walk on foot—

Let's see; I think, 'tis now some seven o'clock,

And well we may come there by dinner time.

Katharina.

I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two,

And 'twill be supper time, ere you come there.

Petruchio.

It shall be seven, ere I go to horse.

Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,

You are still crossing it.—Sirs, let 't alone: I will not go to-day; and ere I do, it shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hortensio.

Why, so this gallant will command the sun.

[Exeunt.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vi cen tio.

Tranio.

Sir, this is the house: please it you, that I call?

Pedant.

Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived,
Signior Baptista may remember me,
Near twenty years ago, in Genoa.

Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus.

Tranio.

'Tis well; and hold your own, in any case,

With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter Biondello.

Pedant.

I warrant you. But, sir, here comes your 'Twere good, he were school'd. [boy;

Tranio.

Fear you not him. Sirrah, Biondello,
Now do your duty throughly, I advise you:

Imagine 'twere the right Vincenio.

Biondello.

Tut! fear not me.

Tranio.

But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?

Biondello.

I told him, that your father was at Venice,
And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tranio.

Thou'rt a tall fellow: hold thee that to drink.
Here comes Baptista.—Set your countenance, sir.—

Enter Baptista and Lucentio.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met.
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of.—

I pray you, stand good, and father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Pedant.

Soft, son!—

Sir, by your leave: having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son, Lucentio,
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And, for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he bear'st to your daughter,
And she to him, to stay him not too long,
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him match'd; and, if you please to like
No worse than I, upon some agreement,

Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent to have her so bestow'd;
For curious I cannot be with you,

Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Baptista.

Sir, pardon me in what I have to say: [well:
Your plainness, and your shortness please me
Right true it is, your son Lucentio, here;

Dost love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections;
And, therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him,
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done:
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tranio.

I thank you, sir. Where, then, do you know
We be affied, and such assurance ta'en, [best,
As shall with either part's agreement stand?

Baptista.

Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know,
Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants:
Besides, old Gremio is hearkening still,
And, happily, we might be interrupted.

Tranio.

Then at my lodging, as it like you:
There doth my father lie, and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well.

Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this,—that, at so slender warning,
You're like to have a thu and slender pittance.

Baptista.

It likes me well:—Cambio, hie you home,
And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened.
Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Lucentio.
I pray the gods she may with all my heart！

Tranio.
Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
Signor Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome: one mess is like to be your cheer.
Come, sir; we will better it in Pisa.

Baptista.

I follow you.

[Exeunt Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.

Biondello.

Cambio! —

Lucentio.

What say'st thou, Biondello?

Biondello.
You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

Lucentio.

Biondello, what of that?

Lucentio.

Facebook nothing; but he has left me here behind, to expound the meaning of moral of his signs and tokens.

Lucentio.
I pray thee, moralize them

Biondello.

Then thus. Baptist is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

Lucentio.

And what of him?

Biondello.
His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

And then? —

Biondello.
The old priest at St. Luke's church is at your command at all hours.

Lucentio.

And what of all this?

Biondello.
I cannot tell; expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance; take you assurance of her, cum privilegio ad imprimentum solam. To the church! — take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses.

If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say, but bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.

Lucentio.

Hear'st thou, Biondello?

Biondello.

I cannot marry: I knew a wenches married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and so creeke, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to St. Luke's to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. [Exit.

Lucentio.

I may, and will, if she be so contented:
She will be please d, then wherefore should I doubt?

Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her: it shall go hard, if Cambio go without her.

[Exit.

SCENE V. A public road.

Enter Petrucho, Katharina, and Hortensio.

Petrucho.

Come on, o' God's name: once more toward our father's. [moon.

Good lord! how bright and goodly shines the

Katharina.
The moon! the sun: it is not moonlight now.

Petrucho.

I say, it is the moon that shines so bright.

Katharina.

I know, it is the sun that shines so bright.

Petrucho.

Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself, it shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house. —
Go on, and fetch our horses back again.—
Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; nothing but cross'd.

Hortensio.

Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Katharina.

Forward, I pray, since we have come so far, and be it moon, or sun, or what you please.
An if you please to call it a rush candle, henceforth, I vow, it shall be so for me.

Petrucho.

I say, it is the moon.

Katharina.

I know, it is the moon.

Petrucho.

Nay, then you lie: it is the blessed sun.

Katharina.

Then, God be bless'd, it is the blessed sun; but sun it is not, when you say it is not. And the moon changes, even as your mind. What you will have it nam'd, even that it is; and so it shall be so for Katharine.

Hortensio.

Petrucho, go thy ways: the field is won.

Petrucho.

Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should and not unluckily against the bias. — [run, but soft! company is coming here.

Enter Vincentio, in a travelling dress.

[To Vincentio.] Good morrow, gentle mistress: where away? —
Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman? Such war of white and red within her cheeks! What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty, as those two eyes become that heavenly face? — Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee: — Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hortensio.

' A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Katharina.

Young budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet.
Whither away, or where is thy abode? Happy the parents of so fair a child; happier the man, whom favourable stars allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

Petrucho.

Why, how now, Kate? I hope thou art not mad:
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd, and not a maiden, as thou say'st be he.

Katharina.

Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, that have been so bedazzled with the sun, that every thing I look on seemeth green.
Now I perceive thou art a reverend father; pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.
Petruchio.
Do, good old grandsire; and, withal, make known
Which way thou travell'st: if along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vincentio.
Fair sir, and you my merry mistress, [me,
That with your strange encounter much amaz'd
My name is call'd Vincentio; my dwelling—Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Vincentio.
What is his name?

Petruchio.
Happily met; the happier for thy son.
And now by law, as well as reverence age,
I may entitle thee—my loving father:
The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not,
Nor be not grieved; she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;
Beside, so qualified as may beseen
The spouse of any noble gentleman.
Let me embrace with old Vincentio;
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Vincentio:
But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?

Hortensio.
I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Petruchio.
Come, go along, and see the truth hereof;
For our first erramient hath made thee jealous.
[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Vincentio.

Hortensio.
Well, Petruchio, this has put me in heart.
Have to my widow; and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward.
[Exit.

ACT V

Enter on one side Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; Gremio walking on the other side.

Biondello.
SOFTLY and swiftly, sir, for the priest is ready.

Lucentio.
I fly, Biondello; but they may chance to need thee at home: therefore leave us.

Biondello.
Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back;
And then come back to my master as soon as I can.

[Exeunt Lucentio, Bianca, and Biondello.

Gremio.
I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Vincentio, and Attendants.

Petruchio.
Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house:

My father's bears more toward the marketplace;
This is I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vincentio.
You shall not choose but drink before you go.
I think, I shall command your welcome here,
And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

[Knocks.

Gremio.
They're busy within; you were best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above, at a window.

Pedant.
What's he, that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vincentio.
Is signior Lucentio within, sir?

Pedant.
He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vincentio.
What, if a man bring him a hundred pound or two to make merry withal?

Pedant.
Keep your hundred pounds to yourself: he shall need none, so long as I live.

Petruchio.
Nay, I told you, your son was beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir? to leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you, tell signior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Pedant.
Thou liest: his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vincentio.
Art thou his father?

Pedant.
Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Petruchio.
Why, how now, gentleman! [To Vincentio.] why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Pedant.
Lay hands on the villain. I believe, a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter Biondello.

Biondello.
I have seen them in the church together: God send 'em good shipping!—But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vincentio.
Come hither, crack-hemp. [Seeing Biondello.

Biondello.
I hope I may choose, sir.

Vincentio.
Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Biondello.
Forgot you? no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vincentio.
What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Biondello.
What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir: see where he looks out of the window.

Vincentio.
Vincentio.

Is't so, indeed? [Beats Biondello.

Help, help, help! Here's a madman will murder me. [Exit.

Pedant.

Help, son! help, signior Baptista! [Exit, from the window.

Petrucho.

Pr'ythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.

Re-enter Pedant below; Baptista, Tranio, and Servants.

Tranio.

Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vincentio.

What am I, sir? Nay, what are you, sir?—O, immortal gods! O, fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatian hat!—O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tranio.

How now! what's the matter?

Baptista.

What is the man lunatic?

Tranio.

Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what 'cerns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vincentio.

Thy father? O, villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Baptista.

You mistake, sir: you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vincentio.

His name? as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Pedant.

Away, away, mad ass! His name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Vincentio.

Lucentio! O he hath murdered his master. — Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name. — O, my son, my son!—Tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tranio.

Call forth an officer.

Enter one with an Officer.

Carry this mad knave to the jail. — Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vincentio.

Carry me to the jail!

Gremio.

Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Baptista.

Talk not, signior Gremio. I say, he shall go to prison.

Gremio.

Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be connived in this business. I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Pedant.

Swear, if thou darest.

Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tranio.

Then thou wert best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Gremio.

Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Tranio.

Away with the dotard! to the jail with him!

Vincentio.

Thus strangers may be haled and abused.—O, monstrous villain!

Re-enter Biondello with Lucentio, and Bianca.

Biondello.

O, we are spoiled! and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Lucentio.

Pardon, sweet father. [Kneeling.

Vincentio.

Bianca.

Pardon, dear father. [Kneeling.

Baptista.

How hast thou offended?

Where is Lucentio?

Lucentio.

Here's Lucentio, Right son to the right Vincentio; That have by marriage made thy daughter mine While counterfeit supposes bear'd thine eye.

Gremio.

Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vincentio.

Where is that damned villain, Tranio, That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Baptista.

Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?

Bianca.

Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Lucentio.

Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love Made me exchange my state with Tranio, While he did bear my countenance in the town; And happily I have arrived at the last Unto the wished haven of my bliss. What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to, Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

Vincentio.

I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the jail.

Baptista. [To Lucentio.

But do you hear, sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my good-will?

Vincentio.

Fear not. Baptista; we will content you: go to; but I will in, to be revenged for this villainy.

[Exit.

Baptista.

And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. [Exit.

Lucentio.

Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca.

Gremio.

My cake is dough; but I'll in among the rest, Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast. [Exit.

Petruchio
Petruchio and Katharina advance.
Katharina.

Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.
Petruchio.

First kiss me, Kate, and we will.
Katharina.

What, in the midst of the street?
Petruchio.

What! art thou ashamed of me?
Katharina.

No, sir, God forbid; but ashamed to kiss.
Petruchio.

Why, then let's home again.—Come, sirrah, let's away.
Katharina.

Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee, love, stay.
Petruchio.

Is not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate: Better once than never, for never too late.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A Room in Lucentio's House.

A Banquet set out; Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedani, Lucentio, Bianca, Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio, and Widow. Tranio, Blindilio, Grunto, and others, attending.

Lucentio.

At last, though long, our jarring notes agree: And time it is, when raging war is done, To smile at 'scapes and perils overblown.— My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome, While I with self-same kindness welcome thee. — Brother Petruchio,—sister Katharina.— And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow, Feast with the best, and welcome to my house: My banquet is to close our stomachs up, After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down;

[They sit at table.]
Petruchio.

Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat! Baptista.

Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.
Petruchio.

Padua affords nothing but what is kind.
Hortensio.

For both our sakes I would that word were true.
Petruchio.

Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.
Widow.

Then, never trust me, if I be afraid.
Petruchio.

You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense: I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.
Widow.

He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.
Petruchio.

Roundly replied.
Katharina.

Mistress, how mean you that?
Widow.

Thus I conceive by him.
Petruchio.

Conceives by me!—How likes Hortensio that?

Hortensio.

My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.
Petruchio.

Very well mended. Kiss him for that, good widow.
Katharina.

He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:— I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.
Widow.

Your husband, being troubled with a shrew, Measures my husband’s sorrow by his woe. And now you know my meaning.
Katharina.

A very mean meaning.
Widow. Right, I mean you.
Katharina.

And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.
Petruchio.

To her, Kate! Hortensio.

To her, widow! Petruchio.

A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.
Hortensio.

That's my office.
Petruchio.

Spoke like an officer:—Ha! to thee, lad. [Drinks to Hortensio. Baptista.

How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks? Gremio.

Believe me, sir, they butt together well.
Bianca.

Head and butt? an hasty-witted body [horn. Would say, your head and butt were head and Vincenzo.

Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd you?
Bianca.

Ay, but not frighted me; therefore, I'll sleep again.
Petruchio.

Nay, that you shall not; since you have Have at you for a better jest or two. [begun,
Bianca.

Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush, And then pursue me as you draw your bow.— You are welcome all.
[Exeunt Bianca, Katharina, and Widow. Petruchio. She hath prevented me.—Here, signior Tranio; This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not: Therefore, a health to all that shot and miss'd.
Tranio.

O sir! Lucentio slip'd me, like his greyhound, Which runs himself, and catches for his master.
Petruchio.

A good swift simile, but something curriish.
Tranio.

'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself: 'Tis thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.
Baptista.

O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.
Lucentio.

I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.
Hortensio.

Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?
Petruchio.
Petruchio.

'Tis in my young mistress' power to make a man a fool.

[Exit Gymio.]

Hortensio.

I know her answer.

Petrucho.

What?

Petrucho.

She will not.

Petrucho.

The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katharina.

Baptista.

Now, by my holdaine, here comes Katharina!

Katharina.

What is your will, sir, that you send for me?

Petrucho.

Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Katharina.

They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Petrucho.

Go, fetch them hither; if they deny to come, swing me them soundly forth unto their husbands.

Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit Katharina.

Lucentio.

Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Petrucho.

Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life;

An awful rule, and right supremacy; [happy.

And, to be short, what not that sweet and

Baptista.

Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio! The wager thou hast won; and I will add Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns; Another dowry to another daughter, For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Petrucho.

Nay, I will win my wager better yet, And show more sign of her obedience, Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter Katharina, with Bianca and Widow.

See, where she comes and brings your froward wives As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.—

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not; Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[Katharina pulls off her cap, and throws it down.

Widow.

Lord! let me never have a cause to sigh, Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bianca.

Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?

Lucentio.

I would, your duty were as foolish too: The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, [time Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper—

Bianca.

The more fool you for laying on my duty.

Petrucho.

Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

Widow.

Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.

Petrucho.
TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Act v. Sc. ii.

Petruchio.

Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

She shall not.

Petruchio.

I say, she shall:—and first begin with her.

Katharina.

Fie, fie! unknit that threatening unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor.
It blots thy beauty, as frosts do bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet, or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance; commits his body
To painful labour, both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thoulest warm at home, secure and safe;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience,
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband;
And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?
I am ashamed, that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey,
Weak, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world.

But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you froward and unable worms,
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason, haply, more
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;
But now I see our lances are but straws,
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husband's foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Petruchio.

Why, there's a wench!—Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

Lucentio.

Well, go thy ways, old lad, for thou shalt ha't.

Vincenzo.

'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.

Lucentio.

But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Petruchio.

Come, Kate, we'll to bed.—We three are married, but you two are spred.
'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white:
And, being a winner, God give you good night.

[Exeunt Petruhio and Katharina.

Hortensio.

Now go thy ways, thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Lucentio.

'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

[Exeunt.
ACT I.

SCENE I. Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Roussillon, Helena, and Lafieu, all in black.

Countess. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Bertram. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death once; but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Lafieu. You shall find of the king a husband, madam;—you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good, most of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Countess. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Lafieu. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Countess. This young gentlewoman had a father,—O, that had I how sad a passage 'tis!—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Lafieu. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

Countess. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so—Gerard de Narbon.

Lafieu. He was excellent, indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him, admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Bertram. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Lafieu. A fistula, my lord.

Bertram. I heard not of it before.

Lafieu. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Countess. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises; her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too; in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

Lafieu. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Countess. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrow...
sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. —
No more of this, Helena; go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have.

I do affect a sorrow, indeed; but I have it too.

Lafeu.

Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Countess.

If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Bertram.

Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Lafeu.

How understand we that?

Countess.

Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father
In manners, as in shape: thy blood, and virtue,
Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness
Share with thy birth-right! Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none; be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend
Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will,
[down,
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck Pleas from thy head! Farewell, my lord;
'Tis an unseason'd courtier: good my lord,
Advise him.

Lafeu.

Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

Helena.

O, were that all! — I think not on my father;
And these great tears grace his remembrance
more [like? Than those I shed for him. What was he
I have forgot him: — my imagination.
Carries no favour in't but Bertram's.
I am undone: there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. It were all one,
That I should love a bright particular star,
And think to wed it, he is so above me:
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
Th' ambition in my love thus plagues itself:
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a
To see him every hour; to sit and draw [plague,
His arched brows, his hawk-like eye, his curls,
In our heart's table; heart, too capable
Of every line and turn of his sweet favour:
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his
And yet I know him a notorious liar, [sake,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fixed evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Look bleak in the cold wind: withal, full oft we Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Parolles.

Save you, fair queen.

Helena.

And you, monarch.

Parolles.

No.

Helena.

And no.

Parolles.

Are you meditating on virginity?

Helena.

Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you, Love: and it is a question: man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Parolles.

Keep him out.

Helena.

But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Parolles.

There is none: man, sitting down before you,
will undermine you, and blow you up.

Helena.

Bless our poor virginity from underminders, and blowers up! — Is there no military policy,
how virgins might blow up men?

Parolles.

Virginy being blown down, man will quicklicher be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase; and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost.
That you were made of is metal to make virgins.
Virginy, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'Tis too cold a companion: away with't.

I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Parolles.

There's little can be said in't: 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offends against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese; consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not: you cannot choose but lose by't. Out with't: within ten years it will make itself ten, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with't.

Helena.

How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Parolles.

Let me see: marry, ill; to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with't, while 'tis vendible: answer
the
the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unseemly: just like the brooch and the tooth-pick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge, than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears: it looks ill; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet, 'tis a withered pear. Will you any thing with it?

Helena.

Not my virginity yet. There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear; His humble ambition, proud humility, His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptive christendoms, That blinking Cupid goossip. Now shall he— I know not what he shall:—God send him well!— The court's a learning-place;—and he is one—

Parolles.

What one, sir?—

Helena.

That I wish well.—'Tis pity—

Parolles.

What's pity?—

Helena.

That wishing well had not a body in't, Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born, Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone must think; which Returns us thanks. [never Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. [Exit Page.

Parolles.

Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Helena.

Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Parolles.

Under Mars, I.

Helena.

I especially think, under Mars.

Parolles.

Why under Mars?—

Helena.

The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Parolles.

When he was predominant.

Helena.

When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

Parolles.

Why think you so?

Helena.

You go so much backward, when you fight.

Parolles.

That's for advantage.

Helena.

So is running away, when fear proposes the safety; but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Parolles.

I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect courtier; in the which my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends. Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee:—so farewell. [Exit.

Helena.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie, Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky Gives us free scope; only, doth backward pull Our slow designs, when we ourselves are dull. What power is it which mounts my love so high; That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye? The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things. Impossible be strange attempts to those That weigh their pains in sense; and do suppose, What hath been cannot be. Who ever strove To show her merit, that did miss her love? The king's disease—my project may deceive me. But my intents are fix'd, and will not leave me. [Exit.

SCENE II. Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters; Lords and others attending.

King.

The Florentines and Senoys are by th' ears; Have fought with equal fortune, and continue A braving war.

First Lord.

So 'tis reported, sir.

King.

Nay, 'tis most credible: we here receive it A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria. With caution, that the Florentine will move us For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend Prejudicates the business, and would seem To have us make denial.

First Lord.

His love and wisdom, Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead For amplest credence.

King.

He hath arm'd our answer, And Florence is denied before he comes: Yet, for our gentlemen, that mean to see The Tuscan service, freely have they leave To stand on either part.

Second Lord.

It may well serve A nursery to our gentry, who are sick For breathing and exploit.

King.

What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafau, and Parolles.

First Lord.

It is the count Rousillon, my good lord, Young Bertram.

King.

Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face; Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, Hath Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts May'st thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Bertram.
My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King.
I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father, and myself, in friendship
First tried our soldiership. He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Disciplin'd of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unmot'd,
Ere they can hide their levity in hon'r:
So like a courtier, contemp't nor bitterness
Were in his pride, or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awoke'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue ob'ed his hand: who were below
He us'd as creatures of another place, [him
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility.
In their poor praise he humbled. Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times, [now
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them
But goers backward.

Bertram.
His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb:
So in approv'd lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King.
Would I were with him! He would always say,
(Methinks, I hear him now; his plausive words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear,) — "Let me not live,"
This his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out, "let me not live," quoth he,
"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments
Are of stancies
Mere fathers of their garments; whose con-
Expire before their fashions." — This he wish'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax, nor honey, can bring home,
I quickly were dissolv'd from my live,
To give some labourers room.

Second Lord.
You are lov'd, sir;
They, that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

King.
I fill a place, I know't. — How long is't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?
He was much fam'd.

Bertram.
Some six months since, my lord.

King.
If he were living, I would try him yet:
Lend me an arm: — the rest have worn me out
With several applications: nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son's no dearer.

Bertram.
Thank your majesty. (Exeunt.)

SCENE III. Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Countess.
I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Steward.
Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty, and make soul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Countess.
What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you, I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness, that I do not;
for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clown.
'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Countess.
Well, sir.

Clown.
No, madam; 'tis not so well, that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good-will to go to the world, Isbel, the woman, and I will do as we may.

Countess.
Will thou needs be a beggar?

Clown.
I do beg your good-will in this case.

Countess.
In what case?

Clown.
In Isbel's case, and mine own. Service is no heritage; and, I think, I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body, for they say, barns are blessings.

Countess.
Tell me thy reason, why thou wilt marry.

Clown.
My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh, and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Countess.
Is this all your worship's reason?

Clown.
Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Countess.
May the world know them?

Clown.
I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Countess.
Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clown.
I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Countess.
Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clown.
You are shallow, madam; 'tis great friends;
for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am a- weary of. He, that cares my land, spares my team, and gives me leave to inn the crop: if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge. He that comforts
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Act I Sc 3.
comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charmian the puritan, and old Pogson the papist, howsoever their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may joll horns together, like any deer in the herd.

Countess.

Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calum- nious knave?

Clown.

A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:—

For I the blind shall repeat,
Which men full true shall find;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

Countess.

Get you gone, sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Steward.

May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Countess.

Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman, I would speak with her; Helen I mean.

Clown.

Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this king Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among mine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good.
There's yet one good in ten.

Countess.

What! one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clown.

One good woman in ten, madam, which is a purifying o' the song. Would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tythe-woman, if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth a! an we might have a good woman born but for every blazing star, or at an earthquake, twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Countess.

You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you?

Clown.

That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt: it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart. — I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither. [Exit.]

Countess.

Well, now.

Steward.

I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Countess.

Faith, I do; her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Steward.

Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son; fortune, she said, was no goddes, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight to be surprised, without rescue, in the first assault, or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal, since thou in the loss that may happen it concerns you something to know it.

Countess.

You have discharged this honestly: keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt. Fray you, I leave me: till this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you farther anon.

[Exit Steward.]

Enter Helena.

Countess.

What is your pleasure, madam?

Countess.

You know, Helen, I am a mother to you.

Helena.

Mine honourable mistress.

Countess.

Nay, a mother.

Helena.

Why not a mother? When I said, a mother, Methought you saw a serpent: what's in mother, That you start at? I say, I am your mother, And put you in the catalogue of Those that were enwombed mine. 'Tis often seen, Adoption strives with nature; and choice breeds A native slip to us from foreign seeds: You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan, Yet I express to you a mother's care.— God's mercy, maiden! does it curb thy blood, To say, I am thy mother? What's the matter, That this distemper'd messenger of wet, The many-colour'd tri's, rounds thine eye?— Why, that you are my daughter?

Helena.

That I am not.

Countess.

I say, I am your mother.

Helena.

Pardon, madam; The count Rousillon cannot be my brother, I am from humble, he from honour'd name; No note upon my parents, his all noble: My master, my dear lord he is; and I His servant live, and will his vassal die. He must not be my brother.
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.  ACT I. Sc. III.

Countess.  Nor I your mother?

Helena.  You are my mother, madam; would you were
For so that my lord, your son, were not my brother)
Indeed, my mother! — or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister.  Can't no other,
But, your daughter, he must be my brother?

Countess.  Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law.
God shield, you mean it not! daughter, and mother,
So strive upon your pulse. What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness; Now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find
Your salt tears' head. Now to all sense 'tis
You love my son; invention is asham'd, [gross,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say, thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, 'tis so: — for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, th' one to the other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it; only sin,
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue.
That truth should be suspected. Speak, ia't so?
If it be so, you have won a goodly clue;
If it be not, forswear't! how'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Helena.  Good madam, pardon me.

Countess.  Do you love my son?

Helena.  Your pardon, noble mistress,

Love you my son?

Helena.  Do not you love him, madam?

Countess.  Go not about: my love hath in't a bond,
Whereof the world takes note. Come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appreh'd.

Helena. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That here you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son.—
My friends were poor, but honest; so's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him,
That he is lov'd of me. I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit;
Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him,
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this capious and intemible sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still. Thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love.
For loving where you do: but, if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chasetly, and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and love, O! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Countess.  Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Helena.  Madam, I had.

Countess.  Wherefore? tell true.

Helena.  I will tell truth; by grace itself, I swear.
You know, my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me
In heedful's reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy approv'd, set down
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is render'd lost.

Countess.  This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.

Helena.  My lord, your son, made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,
Haply been absent then.

Countess.  But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him, They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?

Helena.  There's something in't,
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified [honour
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would you
But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,
By such a day, and hour.

Countess.  Dost thou believe it?

Helena.  Ay, madam, knowingly.

Countess.  Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave, and love,
Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home,
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt.
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Paris. A Room In the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, with young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; Bertram, Par-roles, and Attendants.

King.  Farewell, young lords: these warlike principles

Do
Do not throw from you:—and you, my lords, farewell.—
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

First Lord.
'Tis our hope, sir, after well-enter'd soldiers, to return
And find your grace in health.

King.
No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady [lords;]
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those 'bated, that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy,) see, that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it: when
The bravest questants shrinks, find what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud. I say, farewell.

Second Lord.
Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King.
Those girls of Italy, take heed of them.
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.

Both.
Our hearts receive your warnings.

King.
Farewell. Come hither to me.

[The King retires to a couch.

First Lord.
O, my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Parolles.
'Tis not his fault, the spark.

Second Lord.
O, 'tis brave wars!

Parolles.
Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Bertram.
I am commanded here, and kept a coil with;
'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and 'tis too early.'

Parolles.
An thy mind stand to't, boy, steal away bravely.

Bertram.
I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn,
But one to dance with. By heaven! I'll steal away.

First Lord.
There's honour in the theft.

Parolles.
Commit it, count.

Second Lord.
I am your accessory; and so farewell.

Bertram.
I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

First Lord.
Farewell, captain.

Second Lord.
Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Parolles.
Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin.
Good sparks, and lustrous, a word, good metals:
you shall find in the regiment of the spirit:
one captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek: it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.

Second Lord.
We shall, noble captain. [Exeunt Lords.

Parolles.
Mars dote on you for his novices!—What will you do?

Bertram.
Stay; the king—

Parolles.
Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords: you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time: there do mustard true gait; eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Bertram.
And I will do so.

Parolles.
Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewy swordmen. [Exeunt Bertram and Parolles.

Enter Lafeu.

Lafeu.
Pardon, my Lord, [Kneeling.] for me and for my tidings.

King.
I'll see thee to stand up.

Lafeu.
Then here's a man stands, that has brought his pardon. [mercy.
I would, you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me
And that, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King.
I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,
And ask'd thee mercy for't.

Lafeu.
Goodfaith, across. But, my good lord, 'tis
Will you be out'd of your infirmity? [thus;

King.
No.

Lafeu.
O! will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?
Yes, but you will, my noble grapes, an if My royal fox could teach them. I have seen
A medicine that's able to breath life into a stone,
Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary
With spritely fire and motion; whose simple
Is powerful to raise king Pepsis, say, [touch
To give great Charlemaine a pan'd in's hand,
And write to her a love-line.

King.
What her is this?

Lafeu.
Why, doctor she! My lord, there's one ar-riv'd, [honour.
If you will see her:—now, by my faith and
If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
With one, that in her sex, her years, profession, wisdom,
And constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness. Will you see her? [ness?
(For that is her demand) and know her busi-
That done, laugh well at me.

King.
Now, good Lafeu,
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee

May
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine,
By wond'ring how thou took'st it.
Lafeu. Nay, I'll fit you, [Exit Lafeu.
King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.
Re-enter Lafeu, with Helena.
Lafeu. Nay, come your ways.
King. This haste hath wings, indeed.
Lafeu. Nay, come your ways.
This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
A traitor you do look like; but such traitors
His majesty seldom fears. I am Orestes' uncle,
That dare leave two together. Fare you well.
[Exit.
King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?
Helena. Ay, my good lord. Gerard de Narbon was In what he did profess well found. [my father;]
King. I knew him.
Helena. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;
Knowing him, is enough. On's bed of death
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience th' only darling,
He bade me store up as a triple eye;
Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have
And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.
King. We thank you, maiden;
But may not be so credulous of care:
When our most learned doctors leave us, and
The conjured college haves concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her inanimate estate, I say, we must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics; or to disiever so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.
Helena. My duty, then, shall pay me for my pains;
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
Humblly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again.
King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful.
Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give,
As one near death to those that wish him live;
But what at full I know thou know'st no part,
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.
Helena. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy.
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
When judges have been babes. Great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation falls, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits
Where hope is coldest, and despair most fits.
King. I must not hear thee: fare thee well, kind maid.
Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
Proffers, not took, reap thanks for their reward.
Helena. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd.
It is not so with him that all things knows,
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows;
But mort it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.
King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?
Helena. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring
Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Molt Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp;
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass,
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.
King. Upon thy certainty and confidence
What dar'st thou venture?
Helena. Tax of impudence,
A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,
Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Sear'd otherwise; ne worse of worst extended,
With vilest torture let my life be ended.
King. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth speak,
His powerful sound within an organ weak;
And what impossibility would slay
In common sense, sense saves another way.
Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happiness and prime can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try.
That ministers thine own death, if I die.
Helena. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die: [see;
And well deserv'd. Not helping, death's my
But, if I help, what do you promise me?
King. Make thy demand.
Helena. But will you make it even?
King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.
Helena. Then shalt thou give me with thy kindly hand
What husband in thy power I will command; Exempted...
SCENE II. Rosaline. A Room in the Countess’s Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Countess. Come on, sir: I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clown. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. I know my business is but to the court.

Countess. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court!

Clown. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off’s cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court. But, for me, I have an answer will serve all me.

Countess. Marry, that’s a bountiful answer, that fits all questions.

Clown. It is like a barber’s chair, that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quach-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.

Countess. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clown. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffata punk, as Tib’s rush for Tom’s fore-finger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding queen to a wrangling knave, as the nun’s lip to the friar’s mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Countess. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clown. From below your duke, to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Countess. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clown. But a tribe neither, in good faith. If the learned should speak truth of it. Here it is, and all that belongs to’t: ask me, if I am a courtier; it shall do you no harm to learn.

Countess. To be young again, if we could. I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clown. O Lord, sir!—there’s a simple putting off. More, more, a hundred of them.

Countess. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clown. O Lord, sir!—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Countess. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clown. O Lord, sir!—Nay, put me to’t, I warrant you.

Countess. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

Clown. O Lord, sir!—Spare not me.

Countess. Do you cry, “O Lord, sir!” at your whipping, and “spare not me?” Indeed, your “O Lord, sir,” is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to’t.

Clown. I ne’er had worse luck in my life, in my—“O Lord, sir.” I see, things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Countess. I play the noble housewife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clown. O Lord, sir!—why, there’t serves well again.

Countess. An end, sir: to your business. Give Helen this, And urge her to a present answer back:

Commend me to my kinemen, and my son. This is not much.

Clown. Not much commendation to them.

Countess. Not much employment for you: you understand me?

Clown. Most fruitfully: I am there before my legs.

Countess. Haste you again.

[Exeunt severally.

SCENE III. Paris. A Room in the King’s Palace.

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

Lafeu. They say, miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it, that we make tribes of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Parolles. Why, ’tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Bertram. And so ’tis.
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.  ACT II.  SC. III.

Lafeu.  To be relinquished of the artists,—
Parolles.
So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.
Lafeu.  Of all the learned and authentic follows,—
Parolles.
Right; so I say.
Lafeu.  That gave him out incurable,—
Parolles.
Why, there 'tis; so say I too.
Lafeu.  Not to be helped,—
Parolles.
Right; as 'twere a man assured of an—
Lafeu.
Uncertain life, and sure death.
Parolles.
Just, you say well; so would I have said.
Lafeu.  I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.
Parolles.
It is, indeed: if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in,—what do you call there?—
Lafeu.  A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.
Parolles.
That's it I would have said; the very same.
Lafeu.  Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'tis of me, I speak in respect—
Parolles.
Nay, 'tis strange; 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he is of a most facinorous spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the—
Lafeu.  Very hand of heaven.
Parolles.
Ay, so I say.
Lafeu.  In a most weak—
Parolles.
And debile minister, great power, great transscendence; which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made, than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—Lafeu.  Generally thankful.

Enter King, Helena, and Attendants.
Parolles.
I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the king.
Lafeu.  Lustick, as the Dutchman says: I'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head. Why, he's able to lead her a coranto.
Parolles.
Mort du vinaigre! Is not this Helen?
Lafeu.  'Fore God, I think so.

King.
Go, call before me all the lords in court.—
[Exit an Attendant.
SIT, my preserver, by thy patient's side;
And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd

Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive
The confirmation of my promises'd gift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.
Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful
Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
O'er whom both sovereign power and father's
I have to use; thy frank election make. [voice Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.
Helena.
To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress Falli, when love pleaseth—marry, to each, but one.
Lafeu.  I'd give bay curtal, and his furniture, [boys,
My mouth no more were broken than these
And writ as little beard.
King.
Peruse them well:
Not one of those but had a noble father.
Helena.
Gentlemen, [health.
Heaven hath through me restor'd the king to
All.
We understand it, and thank heaven for you.
Helena.
I am a simple maid: and therein wealthiest,
That, I protest, I simply am a maid.—
Please it your majesty, I have done already;
The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,
"We blush, that thou should'st choose; but, be refus'd;
Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever:
We'll ne'er come there again."

King.
Make choice: and, see,
Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.
Helena.
Now Dian, from thy altar do I fly,
And to imperial Love, that god most high, [suits?
Do my sighs stream.—Sir, will you hear my
First Lord.
And grant it.
Helena.
Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.
Lafeu.
I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life.
Helena.
The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I speak, too threateningly replies:
Love make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that so wishes, and her humble love!
Second Lord.
No better, if you please.
Helena.  My wish receive,
Which great Love grant it and so I take my leave.
Lafeu.
Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipped, or I would send them to the Turk to make eunuchs of.
Helena.  [To Third Lord.
Be not afraid that I your hand should take;
I'll never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!
Lafeu.
These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her:
her: sure, they are bastards to the English; the French ne'er got them.

Helena.
You are too young, too happy, and too good,
To make yourself a son out of my blood.

Fourth Lord.
Fair one, I think not so.

Lafeu.
There's one grape yet,—I am sure, thy father drank wine.—But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Helena. [To Bertram.
I dare not say, I take you; but I give Me, and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power.—This is the man.

King.
Why then, young Bertram, take her; she's thy wife.

Bertram.
My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your highness,
In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

King.
Know'st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?

Bertram.
Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King.
Thou know'st, she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Bertram.
But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter my wife?—Disdain Rather corrupt me over ever!

'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which I can build up. Strange is it, that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty. If she be
All that is virtuous, (save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter) thou dislik'st
Of virtue for the name; but do not so:
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by the door's deed:
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,
It is a droptied honour: good alone
Is good, without a name; vileness is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she's immediate heir,
And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn,
Which challenges itself as honour's born,
And is not like the sire: honour's thrive.
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave,
Debauch'd on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb,
Where dust, and damn'd oblivion, is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue, and she
Is her own dower; honour, and wealth from me.

Bertram.
I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

国王:
但你不必这样反对我，如果我应该挑选

海伦娜.
你太年轻，太快乐，太好了， 你不应使自己成为我的儿子。

第四幕．
好孩子，我想不是这样。

拉费．
你，我的陛下？我会请求你的恩典， 在这样的事情中让我使用我的眼睛。

国王．
你知道吗，伯特兰， 她为我做了什么？

伯特兰．
是的，我的好主人， 但不要希望知道我为什么要娶她。

国王．
你知道她，她使我不健康。

伯特兰．
但随着它，我的主人，把我带下去 必须为你的抚养而回答吗？我知道她。 她得到了她父亲的抚育。
一个贫穷的医生的女儿我的妻子？—蔑视
同样是美德，（除去你不喜欢的，
一个贫穷医生的女儿）你不喜欢
对名称的美德；但不要这样做：
从最低的地方美德事情继续， 位置被门口的行为所提升：
伟大的增加膨胀了，美德没有，
它是一种跌落的荣誉：好本身
是好的，没有名称；没有美德是这样：
财产由什么它应该去，
而不是标题。她是年轻的，聪明的，美丽的；
在这些向自然她是直接的继承者，
和这些产生荣誉：这是荣誉的耻辱，
这挑战自己作为荣誉的诞生，
而且不像父亲：荣誉繁荣。当
而不是从我们的行动我们使它们产生
而不是我们的前辈。这个词是奴隶，
放荡在每一座墓上；在每一座坟墓，
一个谎言的奖杯，而且是常常是哑巴，
在灰尘，和可鄙的遗忘，是墓
荣誉的骨头的确。应该说什么？
如果你能像这样对待她像对待女仆，
我可以被创造的其余：美德，和她
是她自己的财宝；荣誉，和财富是我。

伯特兰．
我不能爱她，也不会努力去做。
Lafeu.

To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

Parolles.

You are too old, sir: let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Lafeu.

I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Parolles.

What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Lafeu.

I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow: thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel: it might pass; yet the scarfs, and the bannerets about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of so great a burden. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou'rt scarce worth.

Parolles.

Hast thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

Lafeu.

Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hell! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well: thy casement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Parolles.

My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Lafeu.

Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Parolles.

I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Lafeu.

Yes, good faith, every drachm of it; and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Parolles.

Well, I shall be wiser.

Lafeu.

E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarfs and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default he is a man I know.

Parolles.

My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Lafeu.

I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave.

Parolles.

Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me, scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord! — Well, I must be patient; there is no lettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age, than I would have of — I'll beat him: an if I could but meet him again!

Re-enter Lafeu.

Lafeu.

Sirrah, your lord and master's married: there's news for you; you have a new mistress.

Parolles.

I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: he is my good lord; whom I serve above is my master.

Lafeu.

Who? God?

Parolles.

Ay, sir.

Lafeu.

The devil it is, that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou Wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger I'd beat thee; methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think, thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

Parolles.

This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Lafeu.

Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate: you are a vagabond, and no true traveller. You are more sucy with lords and honourable personages, than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you.

[Exit.]

Enter Bertram.

Parolles.

Good, very good; it is so then: — good, very good. Let it be concealed awhile.

Bertram.

Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Parolles.

What is the matter, sweet heart？

Bertram.

Although before the solemn priest I have I will not bed her.

Parolles.

What! what, sweet heart?

Bertram.

O, my Parolles, they have married me! —

I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Parolles.

France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits The tread of a man's foot. To the wars!

Bertram.

There's letters from my mother: what the I know not yet.

Parolles.

[Import is,

Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy ! to the wars! He wears his honour in a box, unseen.

That hogs his kicky-wicky here at home, Spending his manly marble in his arms.

Which should sustain the bound and high curvet Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions! France is a stable; we, that dwell in't, jades; Therefore, to the war!

Bertram.

It shall be so: I'll send her to my house, Acquaint my mother with my hate to her, And wherefore I am fled; write to the king That which I durst not speak. His present gift Shall furnish me to those Italian fields, Where noble fellows strike. War is no strife To the dark house, and the detested wife.

Parolles.

Will this capriccio hold in thee, art sure?

Bertram.
ACT II. SC. V.  ALL’S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.  303

Bertram.
Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.
I'll send her straight away: to-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Parolles.
Why, these balls bound; there’s noise in it;
’tis hard.
A young man married is a man that’s marr’d:
Therefore away, and leave her: bravely go;
The king has done you wrong; but, hush! ’tis so.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.  The same.  Another Room in the same.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Helena.
My mother greets me kindly: is she well?

Clown.
She is not well; but yet she has her health:
she’s very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she’s very well, and wants nothing I’ the world; but yet she is not well.

Helena.
If she be very well, what does she all, that she’s not very well?

Clown.
Truly, she’s very well indeed, but for two things.

Helena.
What two things?

Clown.
One, that she’s not in heaven, whither God send her quickly! the other, that she’s in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Parolles.
Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Helena.
I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

Parolles.
You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still.—O, my knife! How does my old lady?

Clown.
So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money,
I would she did as you say.

Parolles.
Why, I say nothing.

Clown.
Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man’s tongue shaves out his master’s undoing.
To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a very little of nothing.

Parolles.
Away I thou’rt a knave.

Clown.
You should have said, sir, before a knave thou’rt a knave; that is, before me thou’rt a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Parolles.
Go to, thou art a witty fool: I have found thee.

Clown.
Did you find me in yourself, sir, or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world’s pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Parolles.
A good knave, I’ faith, and well fed.—
Madam, my lord will go away to-night;
A very serious business calls on him.
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claims, he does acknowledge,
But puts it off to a compell’d restraint;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strewed with sweets,
Which they distil now in the curbed time
To make the coming hour o’erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Helena.
What’s his will else?

Parolles.
That you will take your instant leave o’ the king,
[Ing.
And make this haste as your own good proceed-
Strengthened with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

Helena.
What more commands he?

Parolles.
That having this obtain’d, you presently
Attend his further pleasure.

Helena.
In every thing I wait upon his will.

Parolles.
I shall report it so.

Helena.
I pray you.—Come, sirrah.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.  Another Room in the same.

Enter Lafeu and Bertram.

Lafeu.
But, I hope, your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Bertram.
Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approof.

Lafeu.
You have it from his own deliverance.

Bertram.
And by other warranted testimony.

Lafeu.
Then my dial goes not true.  I took this lark for a bunting.

Bertram.
I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Lafeu.
I have then sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent.  Here he comes.  I pray you, make us friends: I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Parolles.  [To Bertram.
These things shall be done, sir.

Lafeu.
Pray you, sir, who’s his tailor?

Parolles.
SIR?

Lafeu.
O! I know him well.  Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Bertram. [Aside to Parolles.
Is she gone to the king?

Parolles.
She is.

Bertram.
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

ACT II. Sc. v

Bertram.
Will she away to-night?
Parolles.
As you'll have her.
Bertram.
I have writ my letters, casked my treasure,
Given order for our horses; and to-night,
When I should take possession of the bride,
End, ere I do begin.

Lafau.
A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three-thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothingst with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten.—God save you, captain.

Bertram.
Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?
Parolles.
I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Lafau.
You have made shift to run into't, boots and spurs all, like him that leaped into the custard: and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Bertram.
It may be, you have mistaken him, my lord.

Lafau.
And shall so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes; trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil.

Parolles.
An idle lord, I swear.
Bertram.
I think so.
Parolles.
Why, do you not know him?
Bertram.
Yes, I do know him well; and common speech
Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Helena.
I have, sir, as I was commanded from you,
Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave
For present parting; only he desires
Some private speech with you.

Bertram.
I shall obey his will.
You must not marvel, Helen, at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration and required office
On my particular: prepar'd I was not
For such a business; therefore am I found
So much unsettled. This drives me to entreat you,
That presently you take your way for home;
And rather muse than ask why I entreat you,
For my respects are better than they seem;
And my appointments have in them a need,
Greater than shows itself, at the first view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother.

[Giving a letter.

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you; so,
I leave you to your wisdom.

Helena.
Sir, I can nothing say
But that I am your most obedient servant.

Bertram.
Come, come, no more of that.

Helena.
And ever shall
With true observance seek to eke out that,
Wherein toward me my homely stars have fall'd
To equal my great fortune.

Bertram.
My haste is very great. Farewell: he home.

Helena.
Pray, sir, your pardon.

Bertram.
Well, what would you say?

Helena.
I am not worthy of the wealth I owe;
Nor dare I say, 'tis mine, and yet it is,
But, like a timorous thief, most fall would steal
What law does vouch mine own.

Bertram.
What would you have?

Helena.
Something, and scarce so much:—nothing, indeed.

[ Faith, yes:— ]

I would not tell you what I would, my lord—
Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.

Bertram.
I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Helena.
I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.
Where are my other men? monsieur, farewell.

[EXEUCT.

Parolles.
Bravely, coraggio!

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence attended by two Frenchmen and Soldiers.

Duke.
So that, from point to point, now have you heard
The fundamental reasons of this war,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.

First Lord.
Holy seems the quarrel
Upon your grace's part; black and fearful
On the opposer.

Duke.
Therefore we marvel much our cousin France
Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom
Against our borrowing prayers.

French Envoy.
Good my lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a council frames
By self-unable motion: therefore, dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fall
As often as I guess'd.

Duke,
Be it his pleasure.

French Gentleman.

But I am sure, the younger of our nature,
That surfeits on their ease, will day by day
Come here for physic.

Duke.
Welcome shall they be.
And all the honours that can fly from us [well;
Shall on them settle. You know your places
When better fall, for your avails they fail].
To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exit.

SCENE II. Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Countess.
It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clown.
By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Countess.
By what observance, I pray you?

Clown.
Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing;
Mend the ruff, and sing; ask questions, and Sing; pick his teeth, and sing. I know a man,
That had this trick of melancholy, sold a goodly manor for a song.

Countess.
Let me see what he writes, and when he Means to come. [Opening a letter.

Clown.
I have no mind to Isbel, since I was at court.
Our old ling and our Isbels o'the country are Nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o'the
Court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked out,
And I begin to love, as an old man loves money,
With no stomach.

Countess.
What have we here?

Clown.
E'en that you have there. [Exit. Countess.

[Reads.]  "I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath Recovered the king, and undone me. I have Wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make
The not eternal. You shall hear, I am run away:
Know it before the report come. If there be Breath enough in the world, I will hold a long Distance. My duty to you.

"Your unfortunate son,
"Bertram."

This is not well: rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a king!
To please his indignation on thy head,
By the misprizing of a mald, too virtuous
For the contempt of empire!

Re-enter Clown.

Clown.
O madam! yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Countess.
What is the matter?

Clown.
Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort: your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Countess.
Why should he be kill'd?

Clown.
So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to 't; that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children.
Here they come will tell you more; for my part,
I only hear your son was run away.

[Exit Clown.

Enter Helena and two French Gentlemen.

French Envoy.
Save you, good madam.

Helena.
Madam, my lord is gone; for ever gone.

French Gentleman.
Do not say so.

Countess.
Think upon patience. — 'Pray you, gentlemen,— I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unt' to: — where is my son, I Pray you?

French Gentleman.
Madam, he's gone to serve the duke of Florence:
We met him thitherward; for thence we came,
And, after some despact in hand at court,
Thither we bend again.

Helena.
Look on his letter, madam: here's my passport.

[Reads.]  "When thou canst get the ring
Upon my finger, which never shall come off,
And show me a child begotten of thy Body, that I am father to, then call me Husband; but in such a then I write a never."

This is a dreadful sentence.

Countess.
Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

French Envoy.
Ay, madam;
And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our Pains.

Countess.
I pr'ythee, lady, have a better cheer;
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moiety. He was my son,
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my child.— Towards Florence
Is he?

French Gentleman.
Ay, madam.

Countess.
And to be a soldier?

French Gentleman.
Such is his noble purpose; and, believe't,
The Duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.

Countess.
Return you thither?

French Envoy.
Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Helena. [Reads.]
"Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

'Tis bitter.

Countess.
COUNTESS.

Find you that there?

Helena.

Ay, madam.

FRENCH ENVOY.

'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, Which his heart was not consenting to.

COUNTESS.

Nothing in France, until he have no wife! There's nothing here that is too good for him, But only she; and she deserves a lord, That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, And call her hourly mistress. Who was with him?

FRENCH ENVOY.

A servant only, and a gentleman Which I have some time known.

COUNTESS.

Parolles, was it not?

FRENCH ENVOY.

Ay, my good lally, he.

COUNTESS.

A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness. My son corrupts a well-derived nature With his inducement.

FRENCH ENVOY.

Indeed, good lady, The fellow has a deal of that too much, Which holds him much to have.

COUNTESS.

Y'are welcome, gentlemen. I will entreat you, when you see my son, To tell him, that his sword can never win The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you Written to bear along.

FRENCH GENTLEMAN.

We serve you, madam, In that and all your worshipful affairs.

COUNTESS.

Not so, but as we change our courtesies. Will you draw near? [Exeunt Countess and French Gentlemen.

HELENA.

"Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France." Nothing in France, until he has no wife! Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France; Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is't I That chase thee from thy country, and expose Those tender limbs of thine to the event Of the none-sparing war? and is it I That drive thee from the sportive court, where Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark Of smoky muskets? O, you leaden messengers, That ride upon the violent speed of fire, Fly with false aim; move the still-peering air, That rings with piercing, do not touch my lord! Whoever shoots at him, I set him there; Whoever charges on his forward breast, I am the caffiff that do hold him to it; And, though I kill him not, I am the cause His death was so effect'd. Better twere, I met the ravin lion when he roar'd With sharp constraint of hunger; better twere That all the miseries which nature owes Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rousillon, Whence honour but of danger wins a scar, As oft it loses all: I will be gone. My being here it is that holds the hence. Shall I say here to do't? no, no, although The air of paradise did fan the house, And angels of't all: I will be gone,

That pitiful rumour may report my flight, To consolate thine ear. Come, night; end, day; For with the dark poor thief, I'll steal away. [Exit.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Bertram, Parolles, Lords, Officers, Soldiers; and others.

Duke.

The general of our horse thou art; and we, Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence Upon thy promising fortune.

Bertram.

Sir, it is A charge too hardy for my strength; but yet We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake, To th' extreme edge of hazard.

Duke.

Then go thou forth, And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm, As thy auspicious mistress!

Bertram.

This very day, Great Mars, I put myself into thy file: Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove A lover of thy drum, hater of love. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and her Steward.

Countess.

Alas! and would you take the letter of her? Might you not know, she would do as she has By sending me a letter? Read it again. [Done.

Steward. [Reads.

"I am Salut Jaque's pilgrim, thither gone. Ambitious love hath so in me offended, That bare-foot trod I the cold ground upon, With sainted vow my faults to have amended. Write, write, that, from the bloody course of war, My dearest master, your dear son, may live; Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far His name with zealous fervour sanctify. His taken labours bid him me forgive: I, his despoiled Juno, sent him forth From courtly friends, with camping foes to live, Where death and danger dog the heels of worth; He is too good and fair for death and me, Whom I myself embrace, to set him free."

Countess.

Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!—Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much, As letting her pass so: had I spoke with her, I could have well diverted her intents, Which thus she hath prevented.

Steward.

Pardon me, madam: If I had given you this at over-night, She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes Pursuit would be but vain.

Countess.

What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive, Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear, And loves to grant, reprove him from the wrath Of greatest justice. — Write, write, Rinaldo, To
To this unworthy husband of his wife:
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Despatch the most convenient messenger.—
When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may, that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love. Which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skil in sense
To make distinction.—Provide this messenger.—
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.

SCENE V. Without the Walls of Florence.
A bucket afar off. Enter an old Widow of Florence, Diana, Violenta, Mariana, and other Citizens.

Widow.
Nay, come; for if they do approach the city,
we shall lose all the sight.

Diana.
They say, the French count has done most honourable service.

Widow.
It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mariana.
Come; let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Widow.
I have told my neighbour, how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mariana.
I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl:—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, cathes, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that disamiss succession, but that they are lined with the twigs that threaten them. I hope, I need not to advise you further; but, I hope, your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Diana.
You shall not need to fear me.

Enter Helena, in the dress of a pilgrim.

Widow.
I hope so.—Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house; thither they send one another.
I'll question her.—God save you, pilgrim! Whither are you bound?

Helena.
I am the Saint Jacques le grand. Where do the palmer's lodge, I do beseech you?

Widow.
At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Helena.
Is this the way?

Widow.
Ay, marry, is't.—Hark you!

They come this way.—
If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
The rather, for I think I know your hostess
As ample as myself.

Helena.
Is it yourself?

Widow.
If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Helena.
I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Widow.
You came, I think, from France?

Helena.
I did so.

Widow.
Here you shall see a countryman of yours,
That has done worthy service.

Helena.
His name, I pray you.

Diana.
The count Rousillon: know you such a one?

Helena.
But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him:
His face I know not.

Diana.
Whatso'er he is, he's bravely taken here. He stole from France, as 'tis reported, for the king had married him Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Helena.
Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady.

Diana.
There is a gentleman, that serves the count;
Reports but coarsely of her.

Helena.
What's his name?

Diana.
Monsieur Parolles.

Helena.
O! I believe with him, in argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated: all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Diana.
Alas, poor lady!

'Tis a hard bondage, to become the wife
Of a detecting lord.

Widow.
I write good creature: wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd. [Do her
Helena.
How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Widow.
He does, indeed;
And breaks with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Enter with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, Bertram, and Parolles.

Mariana.
The gods forbid else!

Widow.
Widow.
So, now they come.—
That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;
That, Escalus.
Helena.
Which is the Frenchman?
Diana.
He:
That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;
I would he lov'd his wife. If he were honest,
He were much goodlier: is't not a handsome gentleman?
Helena.
I like him well.
Diana.
'Tis pity, he is not honest. Yond's that same
That leads him to these places: were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.
Helena.
Which is he?
Diana.
That jackanapes with scarfs. Why is he me-
Helena.
Perchance he's hurt! the battle.
Parolles.
Lose our drum! well.
Mariana.
He's shrewdly vexed at something. Look, he has spied us.
Widow.
Marry, hang you!
Marina.
And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!
[Exit Bertram, Parolles, Officers, and Soldiers.
Widow.
The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you
Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents
There's four or five, to great Saint Jacques bound,
Already at my house.
Helena.
I humbly thank you.
Please it this matron, and this gentle maid,
To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me; and, to requite you farther,
I will bestow some precepts of this virgin
Worthy the note.
Both.
We'll take your offer kindly.
[Exit.

SCENE VI. Camp before Florence.
Enter Bertram, and the two Frenchmen.
French Envoy.
Nay, good my lord, put him to't: let him have his way.
French Gentleman.
If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.
French Envoy.
On my life, my lord, a bubble.
Bertram.
Do you think I am so far deceived in him?
French Envoy.
Believe it, my lord: in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker the owner of no one good quali-worthy your lordship's entertainment.
French Gentleman.
It were fit you knew him, lest reposing too far in his virtue which he hath not, he might, at some great and trusty business in a main danger, fall you.
Bertram.
I would I knew in what particular action to try him.
French Gentleman.
None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.
French Envoy.
I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him: such I will have, whom, I am sure, he knows not from the enemy. We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the league of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at his examination, if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, ever trust my judgment in any thing.
French Gentleman.
O I for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum: he says he has a stratagem for't. When your lordship makes the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.
French Envoy.
O I for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.
Bertram.
How now, monsieur? this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.
French Gentleman.
A pox on't! let it go: 'tis but a drum.
Parolles.
But a drum! Is't but a drum? A drum so lost!—There was an excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers.
French Gentleman.
That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.
Bertram.
Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success:
some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum;
but it is not to be recovered.
Parolles.
It might have been recovered.
Bertram.
It might; but it is not now.
Parolles.
It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer. I would have that drum or another, or his jacket.
Bertram.
Why, if you have a stomach to't, monsieur, if you
you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnaminous in the enterprize, and so on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what farther becomes his greatness, even to the utmost sy-table of your worthiness.

Paroles.
By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Bertram.

But you must not now slumber in it.

Paroles.
I'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and by midnight look to hear farther from me.

Bertram.
May I be bold to acquaint his grace are you gone about it?

Paroles.
I know not what the success will be, my lord;
but the attempt I vow.

Bertram.
I know thou art valiant, and to the possibility thy soldiership will subscribe for thee. Farewell.

Paroles.
I love not many words. [Exit.

French Envoy.
No more than a fish loves water—is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done, dams himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do't?

French Gentleman.
You do not know him, my lord, as we do:
certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveres; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Bertram.
Why, do you think, he will make no deed at all of this, that so seriously he does address himself unto?

French Envoy.
None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three pro-hable lies. But we have almost embossed him, you shall see his fall to-night; for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect.

French Gentleman.
We'll make you some sport with the fox, ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old lord Lafeu; when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him, which you shall see this very night.

French Envoy.
I must go look my twigs: he shall be caught.

Bertram.
Your brother, he shall go along with me.

French Gentleman.
As't please your lordship.

French Envoy.
I'll leave you. [Exit.

Bertram.
Now will I lead you to the house, and show
The less I spoke of.

French Gentleman.
But, you say, she's honest.

Bertram.
'Tis all the fault. I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to her,
By this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind,
Tokens and letters which she did re-send;
And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature;
Will you go see her?

French Gentleman.
With all my heart, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena and Widow.

Helena.
If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you farther,
But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.

Widow.
Though my estate be fall'n, I was well born,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Helena.
Nor would I wish you.
First, give me trust, the count he is my husband,
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken, is so, from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
Err in bestowing it.

Widow.
I should believe you;
For you have show'd me that, which well ap-
You are great in fortune. [proves

Helena.
Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will ever-pay, and pay again,
When I have found it. The count he woos your daughter,
Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolved to carry her: let her, in fine, consent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it.
Now, his important blood will nought deny
That she'll demand: a ring the county wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house
From son to son, some four or five descents
Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
In most rich choice; yet, in his idle fire
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
How'er repented after.

Widow.
Now I see
The bottom of your purpose.

Helena.
You see it lawful then. It is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent. After this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

Widow.
I have yielded.
Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere,
That time and place, with this deceipt so lawful,
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musics of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us,
To chide him from our ears, for he persists,
As if his life lay on't.

Helena.
Helena.

Why, then, to-night
Let us assay our plot: which, if it speed, is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act:
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact.
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Without the Florentine Camp.

Enter French Envoy, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

French Envoy.

He can come no other way but by this hedge corner.
When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will: though you understand it not yourselves, no matter; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

First Soldier.

Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

French Envoy.

Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

First Soldier.

No, sir, I warrant you.

French Envoy.

But what linsy-woolsy hast thou to speak to us again?

First Soldier.

Even such as you speak to me.

French Envoy.

He must think us some band of strangers: the adversary’s entertainment. Now, he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages: therefore, we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another; so we seem to know is to know straight our purpose: chough’s language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Parolles.

Ten o'clock: within these three hours ’twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible Invention that carries it. They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find, my tongue is too foothard; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not dreading the reports of my tongue.

French Envoy. [Aside.

This is the first truth that e’er thine own tongue was guilty of.

Parolles.

What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say, I got them in exploit. Yet slight ones will not carry it; they will say, “Come you off with so little?” and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore? what’s the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman’s mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet’s mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

French Envoy. [Aside.

Is it possible, he should know what he is, and be that he is?

Parolles.

I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn; or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

French Envoy. [Aside.

We cannot afford you ro.

Parolles.

Or the baring of my beard; and to say, it was in stratagem.

French Envoy. [Aside.

"Twould not do.

Parolles.

Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

French Envoy. [Aside.

Hardly serve.

Parolles.

Though I swore I leaped from the window o. the citadel—

French Envoy. [Aside.

How deep?

Parolles.

Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed.

Parolles.

I would I had any drum of the enemy’s: I would swear I recovered it.

French Envoy. [Aside.

You shall hear one anon.

Parolles.

A drum, now, of the enemy’s!

[Alarum within.

French Envoy.

Throca movensus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All.

Cargo, cargo, withanda par corbo, cargo.

Parolles.

O! ransom, ransom!—Do not hide mine eyes.

[They seize and blindfold him.

First Soldier.

Boskos thoriumdo boskos.

Parolles.

I know you are the Muskos’ regiment; And I shall lose my life for want of language. If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me: I will discover that which shall undo The Florentine.

First Soldier.

Boskos vauvado:—

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:—

Kerelyponto:—Sir, Beflake thee to thy thith, for seventeen poniards Are at thy bosom.

Parolles.

O! First Soldier.

O! pray, pray, pray. —

Manka revania duuche.

French Envoy.

Oscorbidulscho vavilorco.

First Soldier.

The general is content to spare thee yet, And, hoodwink’d as thou art, will lead thee on To
To gather from thee; haply, thou may'st inform Something to save thy life.

Parolles. O! let me live,
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,
Their force, their purposes; nay, I'll speak
Which you will wonder at. [Exit.

First Soldier. But wilt thou faithfully?

Parolles. If I do not, damn me.

First Soldier. A' will betray us all unto ourselves:
Inform on that.

Second Soldier. So I will sir.

French Envoy. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Bertram and Diana.

Bertram. They told me, that your name was Fontibell.

Diana. No, my good lord, Diana.

Bertram. Titled goddess, and worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, In your fine frame hath love no quality? If the quick fire of youth light not your mind, You are no maiden, but a monument: When you are dead, you should be such a one As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was, When your sweet self was got.

Diana. She then was honest.

Bertram. So should you be.

Diana. No;

My mother did but duty; such, my lord, As you owe to your wife.

Bertram. No more o' that: I pr'ythee, do not strive against my vows.
I was compell'd to her; but I love thee By love's own sweet constraint, and will for Do thee all rights of service. [ever

Diana. Ay, so you serve us,
Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,
You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves,
And mock us with our bareness.

Bertram. How have I sworn?

Diana. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth,
But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true.
What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the Highest to witness: then, pray you, tell me,
If I should swear by Love's great attributes,
I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
When I did love you ill? this has no holding,
To swear by him, whom I protest to love,
That I will work against him. Therefore, you oaths Are words, and poor conditions, but unsay'd,
At least, in my opinion.

Bertram. Change it, change it.
Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy,
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts,
That you do charge men with. Stand no more
But give thyself unto my sick desires, [off

Who then recover: say, thou art mine, and
My love, as it begins, shall so perserver. [ever

Diana. I see, that men make ropes in such a scarre,
That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.

Bertram. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power
To give it from me.

Diana. Will you not, my lord?

Bertram. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
In me to lose.

Diana. Mine honour's such a ring:
My chastity's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
In me to lose. Thus, your own proper wisdom Brings in an unpitying, honour, on my part
Against your vain assault.

Bertram. Here, take my ring:
My house, mine honour, yea, my life be thine,
And I'll be bid by thee.

Diana. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window:
I'll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me.
My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them.
When back again this ring shall be deliver'd:
And on your finger, in the night, I'll put Another ring; that what in time proceeds
May token to the future our past deeds.
Adieu, till then; then, fail not. You have won
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.

Bertram. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee.
[Exit.

Diana. For which live long to thank both heaven and
You may so in the end,—[me!
My mother told me just how he would woo,
As if she sat in's heart: she says, all men
Have the like oaths. He had sworn to marry
[him,
When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with When
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so baid:
Marry that will, I live and die a maled:
Only, in this disguise, I think't no sin
To cozen him, that would unjustly win. [Exit.

SCENE III. The Florentine Camp.
Enter the two Frenchmen, and two or three Soldiers.

French Gentleman.
You have not given him his mother's letter.
French Envoy.
I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature, for on the reading it he changed almost into another man.

French Gentleman.
He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and to sweet a lady.

French Envoy.
Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly within you.

French Gentleman.
When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

French Envoy.
He hath perverted a young gentlewoman, here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he flockes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

French Gentleman.
Now, God delay our rebellion: as we are ourselves, what things are we!

French Envoy.
Merely our own traitors: and as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream overflows himself.

French Gentleman.
Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night.

French Envoy.
Not till after midnight, for he is dictated to his hour.

French Gentleman.
That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

French Envoy.
We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip of the other.

French Gentleman.
In the mean time, what hear you of these wars?

French Envoy.
I hear there is an overture of peace.

French Gentleman.
Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

French Envoy.
What will count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

French Gentleman.
I perceive by this demand you are not altogether of his council.

French Envoy.
Let it be forb'd, sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.

French Gentleman.
Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jacques le grand, which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

French Envoy.
How is this justified?

French Gentleman.
The stronger part of it by her own letters; which make her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say, is come,—was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

French Envoy.
Hath the count all this intelligence?

French Gentleman.
Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

French Envoy.
I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

French Gentleman.
How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses.

French Envoy.
And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears. The great dignity, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

French Gentleman.
The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Servant.
How now? where's your master?

Servant.
He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendation to the king.

French Envoy.
They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter Bertram.
French Gentleman.
They cannot be too sweet for the king's tarness. Here's his lordship now.—How, now, my lord! is't not after midnight?

Bertram.
I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have cong'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy; and between these main parcels of dispatch effected many nicer heed: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

French Envoy.
If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Bertram.

I mean the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit model: he has deceived me, like a double-meaning pro-phesyer.

French Envoy.

Bring him forth. [Exeunt Soldiers.] He has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Bertram.

No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

French Envoy.

I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps, like a wench that had shed her milk. He hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the stocks, and what think you he hath confessed?

Bertram.

Nothing of me, has he?

French Envoy.

His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with Parolles.

Bertram.

A plague upon him! muffled? he can say nothing of me: hush! hush!

French Gentleman.

Hoodman comes!—Portotartarossa.

First Soldier.

He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Parolles.

I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

First Soldier.

Bosko chimurcho.

French Gentleman.

Boblbindo chicurumrusco.

First Soldier.

You are a merciful general. — Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Parolles.

And truly, as I hope to live.

First Soldier.

"First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong." What say you to that?

Parolles.

Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

First Soldier.

Shall I set down your answer so?

Parolles.

Do: I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

Bertram.

All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

French Gentleman.

'Y' are deceived, my lord: this is monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist (that was his own phrase), that had the whole theorick of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

French Envoy.

I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

First Soldier.

Well, that's set down.

Parolles.

Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truly.

French Gentleman.

He's very near the truth in this.

Bertram.

But I con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

Parolles.

Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

First Soldier.

Well, that's set down.

Parolles.

I humbly thank you, sir. A truth's a truth: the rogues are marvellous poor.

First Soldier.

"Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot." What say you to that?

Parolles.

By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambe so many, Jacques so many; Guillian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chiolphere, Fawnord, Beniti, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Bertram.

What shall be done to him?

French Gentleman.

Nothing, but let him have thanks.—Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

First Soldier.

Well, that's set down. "You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumaine be i' the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertise in wars; or whether he think'd, it were not possible with well-weighing sums of gold to corrupt him to a revol." What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Parolles.

I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the intergatories: demand them singly.

First Soldier.

Do you know this Captain Dumaine?

Parolles.

I know him: he was a butcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the sheriff's foil with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

[Dumaine lifts up his hand in anger.

Bertram.

Nay, by your leave, hold your hands: though, I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.
First Soldier.

Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Parolles.

Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

French Gentleman.

Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

First Soldier.

What is his reputation with the duke?

Parolles.

The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think, I have his letter in my pocket.

First Soldier.

Marry, we'll search.

Parolles.

In good sadness, I do not know: either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

First Soldier.

Here 'tis: here's a paper; shall I read it to you?

Parolles.

I do not know if it be it, or no.

Bertram.

Our interpreter does it well.

French Gentleman.

Excellently.

First Soldier. [Reads.]

"Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold," — Parolles.

That is not the duke's letter, sir: that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one count Rosillon, a foolish idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again.

First Soldier.

Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Parolles.

My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Bertram.

Dammable, both-sides rogue!

First Soldier. [Reads.]

"When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score:

Half won is match well made; match, and well make it:

He ne'er pays after debts; take it before,

And say, a soldier, Diana, told thee this.

Men are to melt with, boys are not to kiss:

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

"Thine, as he vow'd thee in thine ear,

"Parolles.""

Bertram.

He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in his forehead.

French Envoy.

This is your devoted friend, sir; the manifold linguist, and the armipotent soldier.

Bertram.

I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

First Soldier.

I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Parolles.

My life, sir, in any case! not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, 't the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

First Soldier.

We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore, once more to this captain Dumaine. You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: what is his honesty?

Parolles.

He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

French Gentlemen.

I begin to love him for this.

Bertram.

For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me he is more and more a cat.

First Soldier.

What say you to hisexpertness in war?

Parolles.

Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians. — to belle him, I will not, — and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instreet for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

French Gentleman.

He hath out-villained villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Bertram.

A pox on him! he's a cat still.

First Soldier.

His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Parolles.

Sir, for a quart d'ecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

First Soldier.

What's his brother, the other captain Dumaine?

French Envoy.

Why does he ask him of me?

First Soldier.

What's he?

Parolles.

E'en a crow of the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he out-runs any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.
First Soldier.
If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Parolles.
Ay, and the captain of his horse, count Rousillon.

First Soldier.
I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Parolles.
I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush, where I was taken?

First Soldier.
There is no remedy, sir, but you must die. The general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

Parolles.
O Lord, sir; let me live, or let me see my death.

First Soldier.
That shall you; and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.] So, look about you: know you any here?

Bertram.
Good morrow, noble captain.

French Envoy.
God bless you, captain Parolles.

French Gentleman.
God save you, noble captain.

French Envoy.
Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafew? I am for France.

French Gentleman.
Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you write to Diana in behalf of the count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you; but fare you well. [Exeunt Bertram, Frenchmen, &c.

First Soldier.
You are undone, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on't yet.

Parolles.
Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

First Soldier.
If you could find out a country where but women were, that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there. [Exit.

Parolles.
Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great, 'twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more; But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass, That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive! There's place, and means for every man alive. I'll after them. [Exit.

SCENE IV. Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.
Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana.

Helena.
That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd One of the greatest in the Christian world [you, Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne, 'tis needful Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel. Time was I did him a desired office, Dear almost as his life; which gratitude [forth, Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep And answer, thanks. I duly am informed, His grace is at Marseilles, to which place We have convenient convoy. You must know, I am supposed dead: the army breaking, My husband hies him home; where, heaven aiding, And by the leave of my good lord the king, We'll be before our welcome.

Widow.
Gentle madam, You never had a servant, to whose trust Your business was more welcome.

Helena.
Nor you, mistress, Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour To recompense your love: doubt not, but heaven Hath brought me up to be your daughter's As it hath fated her to be my motive, And helper to a husband. But O, strange men! That can such sweet use make of what they hate, When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts Defiles the pious might! so lust doth play With what it loathes, for that which is away. But more of this hereafter. — You, Diana, Under my poor instructions, yet must suffer Something in my behalf.

Diana.
Let death and honesty Go with your impositions, I am yours Upon your will to suffer.

Helena.
Yet, I pray you: But with the word, the time will bring on summer. When briers shall have leaves as well as thorns, And be as sweet as sharp. We must away; Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us: "All's well that ends well:" still the fine's the crown; What'er the course, the end is the renown. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Roussillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.
Enter Countess, Lafew, and Clown.

Lafew.
No, no, no; your son was mistook with a snip-taffata fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Countess.
I would I had not known him. It was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman, that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken taken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Lafeu. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady; we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clown. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or, rather the herb of grace.

Lafeu. They are not salad-herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs.

Clown. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir, I have not much skill in grass.

Lafeu. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave, or a fool?

Clown. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Lafeu. Your distinction?

Clown. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

Lafeu. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clown. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Lafeu. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

At your service.

Lafeu. No, no, no.

Clown. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Lafeu. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Clown. Faith, sir, a' has an English name; but his phonism is more hotter in France, than there.

Lafeu. What prince is that?

Clown. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Lafeu. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of: serve him still.

Clown. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world, let his nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for p Pompe to enter: some, that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Lafeu. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clown. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature.

[Exit.

Lafeu. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Clown. So 'a' is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Lafeu. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord, your son, was upon his return home, I moved the king, my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do it; and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Countess. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Lafeu. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: 'a' will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Countess. It replaces me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here tonight: I shall beseech your lordship, to remain with me till they meet together.

Lafeu. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Countess. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Lafeu. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clown. O, madam! yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on't face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a cheek of woerie and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Lafeu. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so, belike, is that.

Clown. But it is its carbonadoed face.

Lafeu. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clown. 'Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man.

[Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I. Marseilles. A Street.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Helena.

BUT this exceeding posting, day and night, Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it; (as one, But, since you have made the days and nights To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold, you do so grow in my requital, As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may help me to his majesty's ear, If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Gentle Astringer.

And you.

Helena.

SIR, I have seen you in the court of France.

Gentle Astringer.

I have been sometimes there.

Helena.

I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen From the report that goes upon your goodness; And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions Which lay nice manners by, I put you to The use of your own virtues, for which I shall continue thankful.

Gentle Astringer.

What's your will?

Helena.

That it will please you To give this poor petition to the king, And aid me with that store of power you have, To come into his presence.

Gentle Astringer.

The king's not here.

Helena.

Not here, sir?

Gentle Astringer.

Not, indeed: He hence remov'd last night, and with more Than is his use. [haste Widow.

Lord, how we lose our pains! [Helena.

All's well that ends well yet, Though time seem to adverse, and means unfit.— I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gentle Astringer.

Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon; Whither I am going:

Helena.

I do beseech you, sir, Since you are like to see the king before me Commend the paper to his gracious hand; Which, I presume, shall render you no blame, But rather make you thank your pains for it. I will come after you, with what good speed Our means will make us means.

Gentle Astringer.

This I'll do for you.

Helena.

And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd, What'er falls more.—We must to horse again:— Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Rousillon. The Inner Court of the Countess's Palace.

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Parolles.

Good monsieur Lawatch, give my lord Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clown.

Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering. Pr'ythee, allow the wind.

Parolles.

Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir: I speak but by a metaphor.

Clown.

Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Pr'ythee, get thee farther.

Parolles.

Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clown.

Foh! pr'ythee, stand away: a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeu.

Here is a pur of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat, (but not a musk-cat) that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddled withal. Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may, for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. [Exit Clown.

Parolles.

My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Lafeu.

And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quart d'ecu for you. Let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Parolles.

I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Lafeu.

You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha' ; save your words.

Parolles.

My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Lafeu.

You beg more than a word, then — Cox' my passion! give me your hand.— How does your drum?

Parolles.

O, my good lord! you were the first that found me.

Lafeu.

Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Parolles.

It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out. [Lafeu,
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

ACT V. SC. II.

Lafue.
Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets. — Sirrah, inquire farther after me: I had talk of you last night. Though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat: go to, follow.

Farolles.
I praise God for you. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lafue, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King.
We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it; but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home.

Countess.
'Tis past, my liege; And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done 'tis the blade of youth; When oile and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erthea't it, and burns on.

King.
My honour'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenge were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Lafue.
This I must say,— But first I beg my pardon, — the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note, but to himself The greatest wrong of all; he lost a wife, Whose beauty did astonish the survey [tive; Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took cap- Whose dear perfection, hearts that scorn'd to Humbly call'd mistress. [serve

King.
Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear. — Well, call him hither. We are reconcile'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition. — Let him not ask our pardon: The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper than oblivion we do bury The incensing relics of it: let him approach, A stranger, no offender; and inform him, So 'tis our will he should.

Gentleman.
I shall, my liege. [Exit Gentleman.

King.
What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Lafue.
All that he is hath reference to your highness.

King.
Then shall we have a match. I have letters That set him high in fame. [sent me,

Enter Bertram.

Lafue.
He looks well on't.

King.
I am not a day of season, For thou may'st see a sunshine and a hall In me at once; but to the brightest beams Distracted clouds give way: so stand thou forth; The time is fair again.

Bertram.
My high repented, blame,

Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King.
All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top, For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of time Steals, ere we can effect them. You remember The daughter of this lord?

Bertram.
Admiringly.

My liege, at first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour,
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen,
Extended or contracted all proportions,
To a most hideous object. Thence it came,
That she, whom all men praise'd, and whom myself,
Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King.
Well excus'd:
That thou didst love her strikes some scores away, [too late, From the great compt. But love, that comes Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone. Our rash faults Make trivial price of serious things we have, Not knowing them, until we know their grave: Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust: Our own love, waking, cries to see what's done,
While shamefull hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maidin:
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Countess.
Which better than the first, O, dear heaven, bless!
Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cease!

Lafue.
Come on, my son, in whom my house's name Must be digested, give a favour from you, To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter, That she may quickly come.—By my old beard, And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead, Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this, The last that, ere I took her leave at court, I saw upon her finger.

Bertram.
Hers it was not.

King.
Now, pray you, let me see it: for mine eye, While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to't.— The token: and, when I gave it Helen, I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood Necessitated to help, that by this token I would relieve her. Had you that craft to Of what should stead her most? [reave her

Bertram.
My gracious sovereign, Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Countess.
Countess.

Son, on my life, I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it At her life's rate.

Lafeu.

I am sure I saw her wear it.

Bertram.

You are deceiv'd: my lord, she never saw it. In Florence was it from a casement thrown me, Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thought I stood engag'd; but when I had subscribe'd To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully I could not answer in that course of honour. As she had made the overture, she ceas'd, In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King.

Plutus himself, That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine, Hath not in nature's mystery more science, Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's, Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know That you are well acquainted with yourself, Confess 'twas here, and by what rough enforcement [surely, You got it from her. She call'd the saints to That she would never put it from her finger, Unless she gave it to yourself in bed, Where you have never come, or sent it us Upon her great disaster.

Bertram.

She never saw it.

King.

Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour, And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me, Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman,-'twill not prove So;—[deadly And yet I know not:—thou didst hate her And she is dead; which nothing, but to close Her eyes myself, could win me to believe, More than to see this ring.—Take him away. —[Guards seize Bertram. My forepast proofs, how'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity, [him! Having vainly fear'd too little. —Away with We'll sift this matter farther.

Bertram.

If you shall prove This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy Prove that I husband'd her bed in Florence, Where yet she never was. —[Exit Bertram, guarded.

Enter a Gentleman.

King.

I am wrapp'd in dismal thoughts.

Gentleman.

Gracious sovereign, Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know Here's a petition from a Florentine, [not: Who hath, for four or five removes, come short 'Tender it herself. I undertook it, Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know, Is here attending: her business looks in her With an importing visage; and she told me, In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern Your highness with herself.

King.

[Heads. "Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Plutos a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone."—Diana Caplet."

Lafeu.

I will buy me a soul-in-law in a fair, and toll: for this, I'll none of him.

King.

The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu, To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these sultors:— Go speedily, and bring again the count. [Exeunt Gentleman, and some Attendants. I am afraid, the life of Helen, lady Was foully snatch'd.

Countess.

Now, justice on the doers! —Re-enter Bertram, guarded.

King.

I wonder, sir, for wives are monsters to you, And that you fly them as you swear them lordship, Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that? —Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow, and Diana.

Diana.

I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine, Derived from the ancient Caplet: My suit, as I do understand, you know, And therefore know how far I may be pitied. Widow.

I am her mother sir, whose age and honour Both suffer under this complaint we bring, And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King.

Come hither, count. Do you know these women? —Bertram.

My lord, I neither can, nor will deny But that I know them. Do they charge me further? —Diana.

Why do you look so strange upon your wife? —Bertram.

She's none of mine, my lord. —Diana.

If you shall marry, You give away this hand, and that is mine; You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine; You give away myself, which is known mine; For I by vow am so embodied yours, That she which marries you must marry me; Either both, or none. —Lafeu. [To Bertram.

Your reputation comes too short for my daughter: you are no husband for her. —Bertram.

My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, Whom sometime I have laugh'd with. Let your highness Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour, Than for to think that I would sink it here. —Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour, Than in my thought it lies.

Diana. Good my lord, Ask him upon his oath, if he does think He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Bertram. She's impudent, my lord; And was a common gamester to the camp.

Diana. He does me wrong, my lord: if I were so, He might have bought me at a common price: Do not believe him. Of! behold this ring, Whose high respect, and rich validity, Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that, He gave it to a commoner o' the camp, If I be one.

Countess. He blushes, and 'tis his: Of six preceding ancestors, that gem Confer'd by testament to the sequest issue, Hath it been o'wd and worn. This is his wife: That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought, you said, You saw one here in court could witness it.

Diana. I did, my lord, but loth am to produce So bad an instrument: his name's Parolles. Lafeu. I saw the man to-day, if man he be. King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Bertram. What of him? He's quoted for a most pernicious slave, With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debauch'd, Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth. Am I or that, or this, for what he'll utter, That will speak any thing?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Bertram. I think, she has: certain it is, I lik'd her, And boarded her: I the wanton way of youth. She knew her distance, and did angle for me, Madding my eagerness with her restraint, As all impediments in fancy's course Are more of more fancy scold, in fine, Her insult coming with her modern grace, Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring, And I had that, which any inferior might At market-price have bought.

Diana. I must be patient: You, that have turn'd off a first so noble wife, May justly diet me. I pray you yet, (Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,) Send for your ring; I will return it home, And give me mine again.

Bertram. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Diana. Sir, much like

The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Diana. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false, you threw it him Out of a casement.

Diana. I have spoke the truth. Enter Parolles. Bertram. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers. King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts Is this the man you speak of? you—

Diana. Ay, my lord. King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you, Not fearing the displeasure of your master, (Which, on your just proceeding, I'll keep off,) By him, and by this woman here, what know you?

Parolles. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman: tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come; to the purpose. Did he love this woman?

Parolles. 'Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you?

Parolles. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?

Parolles. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave. — What an equivocal companion is this!

Parolles. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Lafeu. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Diana. Do you know, he promised me marriage?

Parolles. 'Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Parolles. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what; yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of: therefore, I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken already, unless thou canst Say they are married. But thou art too fine
In thy evidence; therefore, stand aside.—
This ring, you say, was yours?

Diana. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Diana. It was not given me, nor did I not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Diana. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then?

Diana. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways, How could you give it him?

Diana. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy, my lord: she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine: I gave it his first wife.

Diana. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away: I do not like her now.

To prison with her; and away with him.—
Unless thou tell'st me where thou had'st this Thou diest within this hour. [ring,

Diana. I'll never tell you.

Take her away.

Diana. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Diana. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accused him all this while?

Diana. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty.

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't:
I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.

Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life!

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Poling to Lafau.

King. She does abuse our ears. To prison with her!

Diana. Good mother, fetch my ball.—[Exit Widow.] Stay, royal sir:

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this lord,

Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him.

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he has his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick;
And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with Helena

King. Is there no exorcist
Beguilis the truer office of mine eyes?
Is't real, that I see?

Helena. No, my good lord:
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see;
The name, and not the thing.

Bertram. Both, both! O, pardon!

Helena. O! my good lord, when I was like this maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring;

And, look you, here's your letter: this it says:
"When from my finger you can get this ring,
And at that time with guilt," &c.—This is done:
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Bertram. If she, my liege, can make me know this I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly. [clearly,

Helena. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon.—

Good Tom Drum, 'To Parolles, I lend me a handkerchief: so, I think thee. Wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy courteous alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,

To make the even truth in pleasure flow.—

[To Diana.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower,

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower;

For I can guess, that by thy honest aid

Thou keest a wife herself, thyself a maid.

Of that, and all the progress, more and less,

Resolvedly more leisure shall express:

All yet seems well; and if it end to meet,

The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

[Flourish.

The king's a beggar, now the play is done.

All is well ended, if this suit be won,

That you express content; which we will pay,

With stile to please you, day exceeding day:

Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

[Exeunt omnes.}
TWELFTH-NIGHT:

OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

ORSINO, Duke of Illyria.
Sebastian, Brother to Viola.
Antonio, a Sea Captain, Friend to Sebastian.
A Sea Captain, Friend to Viola.
Valentino, Curio, Gentlemen attending on the Duke.
Sir Toby Belch, Uncle to Olivia.
Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.
Malvolio, Steward to Olivia.
Fabian, Servants to Olivia.
Clown.
Olivia, a rich Countess.
Viola, in love with the Duke.
Maria, Olivia's Woman.
Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE, a city in Illyria; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

Enter Duke, Curio, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke.

If music be the food of love, play on:
Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain again;—it had a dying fall:
O! it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odour.—Enough! no more:
'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.
O, spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Received as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute I so full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is high-fantastical.

Curio.

Will you go hunt, my lord?

Duke.

What, Curio?

Curio. The hart.

Duke.

Why, so I do, the noblest that I have.
O! when mine eyes did see Olivia first,

Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence;
That instant was I turn'd into a hart,
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E'er since pursue me.—How now! what news from her?

Enter Valentine.

Valentine.

So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do return this answer:—
The element itself, till seven years' heat,
Shall not behold her face at amble view;
But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
And lasting in her sad remembrance.

Duke.

O! she that hath a heart of that fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flocks of all affections else?
That live in her: when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd,
(her sweet perfections) with one self-same
king.—
Away, before me to sweet beds of flowers:
Love-thoughts lie rich, when canonical with borders.
Scene II. The Sea-coast.

Enter Viola, Captain, and Sailors.

Viola.

What country, friends, is this?

Captain.

This is Illyria, lady.

Viola.

And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Illyria. [sailors?]

Perchance, he is not drown'd:—what think you,

Captain.

It is perchance that you yourself were sav'd,

Viola.

O, my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be.

Captain.

True, madam: and, to comfort you with chance,

Assure yourself, after our ship did split, [you,

When you, and those poor number saved with Hung on our driving boat. I saw your brother.

Most provident in peril, blind himself [tice]

(Courage and hope both teaching him the prac-

To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea;

Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,

I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves

So long as I could see.

Viola.

For saying so there's gold.

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,

Whereeto thy speech serves for authority,

The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Captain.

Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,

Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Viola.

Who governs here?

Captain.

A noble duke, in nature as in name.

Viola.

What is his name?

Captain.

Osnio.

Osnio! I have heard my father name him:

He was a bachelor then.

Captain.

And so is now, or was so very late;

For but a month ago I went from hence.

And then 'twas fresh in murmur, (as, you know,

What great ones do the less will prattle of)

That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Viola.

What's she?

Captain.

A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count

That died some twelvemonth since: then leaving

In the protection of his son, her brother, [her

Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,

They say, she hath abjur'd the company,

And sight of men.

Viola.

O! that I serv'd that lady,

And might not delivered to the world,

Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,

What my estate is.

Captain.

That were hard to compass,

Because she will admit no kind of suit,

No, not the duke's.

Scene III. A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir Toby.

What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Maria.

By my troth, sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir Toby.

Why, let her except before excepted.

Maria.

Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir Toby.

Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Maria.

That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday, and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here to be her woore.

Sir Toby.

Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Maria.

Ay, he.

Sir Toby.

He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Maria.

What's that to the purpose?

Sir Toby.

Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Maria.

Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats: be's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir Toby.

Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol, de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Maria.

He hath, indeed—almost natural: for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller;

and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to alay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought

among among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir Toby.
By this hand, they are scoundrels, and sub-tricators that say so of him. Who are they?

María.
They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Sir Toby.
With drinking hathels to my niece. I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria. He's a coward, and a cosystril, that will not drink to my niece, fill his brains turn o' the toe like a parish-top. What, wench! Castiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir
Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.
Sir Andrew.
Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir Toby Belch?

Sir Toby.
Sweet sir Andrew.

Sir Andrew.
Bless you, fair shrew.

María.
And you too, sir.

Sir Toby.
Accost, sir Andrew, accost.

Sir Andrew.
What's that?

Sir Toby.
My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir Andrew.
Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

María.
My name is Mary, sir.

Sir Andrew.
Good Mistress Mary Accost,—

Sir Toby.
You mistake, knight: accost is front her,
board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir Andrew.
By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

María.
Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir Toby.
An thou let part so, sir Andrew, would thou might'st never draw sword again!

Sir Andrew.
An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

María.
Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir Andrew.
Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

María.
Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink.

Sir Andrew.
Wherefore, sweet-heart? what's your metaphor?

María.
It's dry, sir.

Sir Andrew.
Why, I think so: I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Sir Toby.
A dry jest, sir.

Sir Andrew.
Are you full of them?

María.
Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' ends:
marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

[Exit María.

Sir Toby.
O knight! thou lack'st a cup of canary.
When did I see thee so put down?

Sir Andrew.
Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks, sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of beef, and, I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir Toby.
No question.

Sir Andrew.
An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, sir Toby.

Sir Toby.
Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Sir Andrew.
What is pourquoi? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting. O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir Toby.
Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

Sir Andrew.
Why, would that have mended my hair?

Sir Toby.
Past question; for, thou seest, it will not curl by nature.

Sir Andrew.
But it becomes me well enough, doesn't not?

Sir Toby.
Excellent: it hangs like flax on a distaff, and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir Andrew.
'Faith, I'll home to-morrow, sir Toby; your niece will not be seen; or, if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me. The count himself, here hard by, wos her.

Sir Toby.
She'll none o' the count: she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Tut, there's life in't, man.

Sir Andrew.
I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir Toby.
Art thou good at these kick-shaws, knight?

Sir Andrew.
As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters: and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Sir Toby.
What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Sir Andrew.
'Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir Toby.
And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir Andrew.
And, I think, I have the back-trick, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir Toby.
Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galiard, and come home in a coranto? my very walk should be a jig: I would not so much as make water, but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galiard.

Sir Andrew.

Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set about some revells?

Sir Toby.

What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir Andrew.

Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir Toby.

No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper. Ha! higher: ha, ha!—excellent!

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Maria.

Nay; either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thine excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clown.

Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.

Maria.

Make that good.

Clown.

He shall see none to fear.

Maria.

A good lenient answer. I can tell thee where that saying was born, of, I fear no colours.

Clown.

Where, good mistress Mary?

Maria.

In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clown.

Well, God give them wisdom, that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Maria.

Yet you will be hanged for being so long absent; or, to be turned away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clown.

Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Maria.

You are resolute, then?

Clown.

Not so neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Maria.

That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clown.

Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way: if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Maria.

Peace, you rogue, no more o'that. Here comes my lady; make your excuse wisely; you were best.

[Exit.

Enter Olivia and Malvolio.

Clown.

Wit, an't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits, that think they have thee, do very I'll, Maria.

Olivia.

Take the fool away.

Clown.

Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Olivia.

Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Clown.

Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink; then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest: if he cannot, let the butcher mend him. Any thing that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamy, so beauty's a flower. The lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Olivia.

Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clown.

Misprison in the highest degree!—Lady, cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much as to say, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Olivia.

Can you do it?

Clown.

Dexterously, good madonna.

Olivia.

Make your proof.

Clown.

I must catechize you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Olivia.

Well, sir, for want of other idleless I'll 'bide your proof.

Clown.

Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Olivia.

Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clown.

I think, his soul is in hell, madonna.

Olivia.

I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clown.

The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Olivia.

What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Malvolio.

Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Clown.

God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for two-pence that you are no fool.

Olivia.

How say you to that, Malvolio?
Olivia.
What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clown.
Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman:
one draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Olivia.
Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit
'ot' my coz, for he's in the third degree of drink;
he's drown'd: go look after him.

Clown.
He is but mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit Clown

Re-enter Malvolio.

Malvolio.
Madam, yond' young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick: he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Olivia.
Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Malvolio.
He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Olivia.
What kind of man is he?

Malvolio.
Why, of man kind.

Olivia.
What manner of man?

Malvolio.
Of very ill manner: he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Olivia.
Of what personage, and years is he?

Malvolio.
Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peacoc, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple;
tis with him o'en standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks very shrivishly: one would think, his mother's milk was scarce out of him.

Olivia.
Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Malvolio.
Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.

Re-enter Maria.

Olivia.
Give me my veil; come, throw it o'er my We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy. [face.

Enter Viola.

Viola.
The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Olivia.
Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will?

Viola.
Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty.—I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loath to cast away my speech: for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comitible even to the least sinister usage.

Olivia.
Whence came you, sir?

Viola.
I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Olivia.
Are you a comedian?

Viola.
No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play.
Are you the lady of the house?

Olivia.
If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Viola.
Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my com-mision. I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Olivia.
Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Viola.
Alas! I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Olivia.
It is the more like to be feigned: I pray you, keep it in. I heard, you were saucy at my gates, and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Maria.
Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Viola.
No, good swabber: I am to hull here a little longer. — Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady. Tell me your mind: I am a messenger.

Olivia.
Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful.
Speak your office.

Viola.
It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage. I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Olivia.
Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Viola.
The rudeness that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Olivia.
Give us the place alone. We will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir; what is your text?

Viola.
Most sweet lady,—

Olivia.
A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?
TWELFTH-NIGHT:

ACT I. Sc. v.

Viola.

In Orsino's bosom.

Olivia.

In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Viola.

To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Olivia.

O! I have read it: it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Viola.

Good madam, let me see your face.

Olivia.

Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. Look you, sir; such a one I was this present: 'is't not well done?

Unveiling.

Viola.

Excellent done, if God did all.

Olivia.

'Tis in grain, sir: 'twill endure wind and weather.

Viola.

'Tis beauty truly blunt, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on. Lady, you are the cruellest she alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Olivia.

O! sir, I will not be so hard-hearted. I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle, and utoeal, labelled to my will; as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey eyes with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Viola.

I see you what you are: you are too proud; But, if you were the devil, you are fair. My lord and master loves you: O! such love Could be but recompens'd, though you were The nonpareil of beauty!

Olivia.

How does he love me?

Viola.

With adorations, fertile tears,

With groans that thunder love, with sighs of

Olivia.

Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant, And in dimension, and the shape of nature, A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him. He might have took his answer long ago.

Viola.

If I did love you in my master's flame With such a suffering, such a deadly life, In your denial I would find no sense: I would not understand it.

Olivia.

Why, what would you?

Viola.

Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house; Write loyal cantons of contemned love, And sing them loud even in the dead of night; Halloa your name to the reverberate hills, And make the babbling gossip of the air.

Cry out, Olivia! O! you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth, But you should pity me.

Olivia.

You might do much. What is your parentage?

Viola.

Above my fortunes, yet my state is well; I am a gentleman.

Olivia.

Get you to your lord: I cannot love him. Let him send no more, Unless, perchance, you come to me again, To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well: I thank you for your pains. Spend this for me.

Viola.

I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse: My master, not myself, lacks recompense. Love make his heart of flint that you shall love, And let your fervour, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty.

[Exit.

Olivia.

What is your parentage?

"Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a gentleman."—I'll be sworn thou art: Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and [soft]: soft! Do give thee five-fold blazon.—Not too fast: — Unless the master were the man. — How now? Even so quickly may one catch the plague. Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections, With an invisible and subtle stealth. To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be. What, ho! Malvolio.—

Re-enter Malvolio.

Malvolio.

Here, madam, at your service.

Olivia.

Run after that same peevish messenger, The country's man: he left this ring behind him, Would I, or not: tell him, I'll none of it. Desire him not to flatter with his lord. Nor hold him up with hopes: I am not for him. If that the youth will come this way to-morrow, I'll give him reasons for't. Hee thee, Malvolio.

Malvolio.

Madam, I will.

Olivia.

I do know not what, and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind. Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe; What is decreed must be, and be this so! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. The Sea-coast.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Antonio.

WILL you stay no longer? nor will you not, that I go with you?

Sebastian.

By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me: the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, dis temper yours; therefore, I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Antonio.
Act II. Sc. III.

OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

329

Antonio.

Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Sebastian.

No, 'sooth, sir. My determinate voyage la more extravagancy; but I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me. And one thing to keep in therefore, it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me then Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Roderigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom, I know, you have heard of; he left behind him, myself, and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleased, would we had so ended 1 but, you, sir, altered that; for some hour before you took me from the break of the sea was my sister drowned.

Alas, the day!

Sebastian.

A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but, though I could not with such estimable wonder or far belief that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Antonio.

Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Sebastian.

O, good Antonio! forgive me your trouble.

Antonio.

If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Sebastian.

If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the count Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.

Antonio.

The gentleness of all the gods go with thee! I have many enemies in Orsino's court. Else would I very shortly see thee there; But, come what may, I do adore thee so, That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.

SCENE II. A Street.

Enter Viola; Malvolio following.

Malvolio.

Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

Viola.

Even now, sir: on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Malvolio.

She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him. And one thing more: that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this: receive it so.

Viola.

She took the ring of me— I'll none of it.

Malvolio.

Come, sir; you peevishly threw it to her, and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.

Viola.

I left no ring with her: what means this lady? Fortune forbid my outside have not charm'd her! She made good view of me; indeed, so much, That, methought, her eyes had lost her tongue, For she did speak so distractedly.

She loves me, sure: the cunning of her passion Invites me in this churlish messenger.

None of my lord's ring? why, he sent her none. I am the man: — if it be so, as 'tis. Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness, Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy it, for the proper false

In women's waken hearts to set their forms! Alas! our frailty is the cause, not we,

For such as we are made, if such we be.

How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him;

And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me.

What will become of this? As I am man,

My state is desperate for my master's love;

As I am woman, now alas the day!

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe.

O time! thou art untangl'd this, not I;

It is too hard a knot for me t'untie. [Exit.

SCENE III. A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, and Sir Andrew: Aque-cheek.

Sir Toby.

Approach, sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou know'st.

Sir Andrew.

Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir Toby.

A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, 's early; so that, to go to bed after mid-night, is to go to bed at last times. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Sir Andrew.

'Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir Toby.

Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink. — Marrian, I say! — a stop of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir Andrew.

Here comes the fool, 1 faith.

Clown.

How now, my heart! Did you never see the picture of we three?

Sir Toby.

Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir Andrew.

By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast.

I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pigropermithus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Quevibus: 'twas very good, 1 faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy lemon; hast thou it?

Clown.

I did impeculc thty gratitelly; for Malvolio's nose
Enter Maria.

Maria.

What a catterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir Toby.

My lady's a Catalan; we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and "Three merry men be we." Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!"

[Singing.]

Clown.

Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir Andrew.

Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir Toby.

"O 't he twelfth day of December,"—

Maria.

For the love o' God, peace!

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio.

Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir Toby.

"Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone."

Maria.

Nay, good sir Toby.

"His eyes do show his days are almost done."

Malvolio.

Is't even so?

Sir Toby.

"But I will never die."

Clown.

Sir Toby, there you lie.

Malvolio.

This is much credit to you.

Sir Toby.

"Shall I bid him go?"

Clown.

"What an if you do?"

Sir Toby.

"Shall I bid him go, and spare not?"

Clown.

"O I no, no, no, you dare not."

Sir Toby.

Out o' tune!—Sir, ye lie. Art any more than a stew-a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clown.
Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot l' the mouth too.

Sir Toby.
Thou'rt l' the right.—Go, sir: rub your chain with crumbs.—A stoop of wine, Maria!

Malvolio.
Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this unciivil rule: she shall know of it, by this hand. [Exit.

Maria.
Go shake your ears.

Sir Andrew.
'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him,

Sir Toby.
Do't, knight: I'll write thee a challenge, or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of him.

Maria.
Sweet sir Toby, be patient for to-night. Since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monstrous Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a newword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know, I can do it.

Sir Toby.
Possess us, possess us: tell us something of him.

Maria.
Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan.

Sir Andrew.
O I if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir Toby.
What, for being a Puritan I thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir Andrew.
I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Maria.
The devil a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly, but a time pleaser; an affectioned ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swaths: the best persuaded of himself; so crammed, as he thinks, with excellences, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir Toby.
What wilt thou do?

Maria.
I will drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him.

María.
My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir Andrew.
And your horse, now, would make him an ass.

Maria.
Ass I doubt not.

Sir Andrew.
O! 'twill be admirable.

Maria.
Sport royal, I warrant you: I know, my physic will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell. [Exit.

Sir Toby.
Good night, Penthesilea.

Sir Andrew.
Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir Toby.
She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me: what o' that?

Sir Andrew.
I was adored once too.

Sir Toby.
Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir Andrew.
If I cannot recover your niece, I am a fool way out.

Sir Toby.
Send for money, knight: if thou hast her not t' the end, call me cut.

Sir Andrew.
If I do not, never trust me; take it how you will.

Sir Toby.
Come, come: I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now. Come, knight; come, knight. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Duke.
Give me some music.—Now, good morrow, friends.

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song,
That old and antique song, we heard last night;
Methought, it did relieve my passion much,
More than light airs, and recollected terms,
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times:
Come; but one verse.

Curio.
He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke.
Who was it?

Curio.
Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Duke.
Seek him out, and play the tune while he is [Exit Curio.—Music.

Come bither, boy: If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pang of it remember me;
For such as I am all true lovers are:
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belov'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

Viola.

It gives a very echo to the seat
Where Love is thron'd.

Duke.

Thou dost speak masterly.

My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves;
Hath it not, boy?

Viola.

A little, by your favour.

Duke.

What kind of woman is't?

Viola.

Of your complexion,

Duke.

She is not worth thee, then. What years, I' faith?

Viola.

About your years, my lord.

Duke.

Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm.
More longings, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are.

Viola.

I think it well, my lord.

Duke.

Then, let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent;
For women are as roses, whose fair flower,
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Viola.

And so they are: alas! that they are so;
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter Curio, and Clown.

Duke.

O, fellow! come, the song we had last night.—
Mark it, Cesario; it is old, and plain:
The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maidas, that weave their thread with bones,
Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,
And dally's with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clown.

Are you ready, sir?

Duke.

Ay; pr'ythee, sing. [Music]

THE SONG.

Clown.

Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, death;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O! prepare it:
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:

A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O! where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke.

There's for thy pain.

Clown.

No pains, sir: I take pleasure in singing, sir.

Duke.

I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clown.

Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.

Duke.

Give me now leave to leave thee.

Clown.

Now, the melancholy god protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffata, for thy mind is a very opal—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. [Exit Clown.

Duke.

Let all the rest give place.—

[Exeunt Curio and Attendants.

Once more, Cesario.

Get thee to yond' same sovereign cruelty:
Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands:
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her
Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;
But 'tis that miracle, and queen of gems,
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.

But if she cannot love you, sir?

Duke.

It cannot be so answered.

Viola.

Sooth, but you must Say, that some lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; must she not then be answer'd?

Duke.

There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big to hold so much: they lack retention.
Alas! their love may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the liver, but the palate,
That suffers surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much. Make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Viola.

Ay, but I know, —

Duke.

What dost thou know?

Viola.

Too well what love Women to men may owe:
In faith, they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter lov'd a man,
As it might be; perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

Duke.

And what's her history?

Viola.

A blank, my lord. She never told her love,—
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought:
And,
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will, for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke.

But did thy sister of her love, my boy?

Viola.

I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too; and yet I know not.—
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke:—

Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste: give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denial.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-check, and Fabian.

Sir Toby.

Come thy ways, signior Fabian.

Fabian.

Nay, I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir Toby.

Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly, rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fabian.

I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

Sir Toby.

To anger him we'll have the bear again, and we will foul him black and blue;—shall we not, sir Andrew?

Sir Andrew.

An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter Maria.

Sir Toby.

Here comes the little villain. — How now, my metal of India?

Maria.

Get you all three into the box-tree. Malvolio's coming down this walk: he has been yonder 1 the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow, this half hour. Observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [throws down a letter] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling.

[Exit Maria.

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio.

'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on?

Sir Toby.

Here's an over-weening rogue!

Fabian.

O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him: how he jects under his advanced plumes!

Sir Andrew.

'Slight, I could so beat the rogue.—

Sir Toby.

Peace! I say.

Malvolio.

To be count Malvolio.—

Sir Toby.

Ah, rogue!

Sir Andrew.

Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir Toby.

Peace! peace!

Malvolio.

There is example for't: the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir Andrew.

Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fabian.

O, peace! now he's deeply in: look, how imagination blows him.

Malvolio.

Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,—

Sir Toby.

O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Malvolio.

Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown, having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping:—

Sir Toby.

Fire and brimstone!

Fabian.

O, peace! peace!

Malvolio.

And then to have the humour of state; and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,—to ask for my kinsman Toby—

Sir Toby.

Bolts and shackles!

Fabian.

O, peace, peace, peace I now, now.

Malvolio.

Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him. I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with my—some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me.

Sir Toby.

Shall this fellow live?

Fabian.

Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace!

Malvolio.

I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control.

Sir Toby.

And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then?

Malvolio.

Saying, "Cousin Toby, my fortunes, having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech."—

Sir Toby.

What, what?

Malvolio.

"You must amend your drunkenness."

Sir Toby.

Out, scab!

Fabian.

Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Malvolio.
Malvolio. "Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight."

Sir Andrew. That’s me, I warrant you.

Malvolio. "One Sir Andrew."

Sir Andrew. I knew ’twas I; for many do call me fool.

Malvolio. [Seeing the letter.]

What employment have we here?

Fabian. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir Toby. O, peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Malvolio. [Taking up the letter.]

By my life, this is my lady’s hand! these be her very C’s, her U’s, and her T’s; and thus makes she her great P’s. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir Andrew. Her C’s, her U’s, and her T’s: Why that?

Malvolio. [Reads.]

"Joce knows, I love; But who? Lips do not move: No man must know."

"No man must know":—What follows? the number’s altered.—"No man must know:" — if this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir Toby. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Malvolio. [Reads.]

"I may command, where I adore: But silence, like a Lucrece knife, With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore: M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."

Fabian. A fustian riddle.

Sir Toby. Excellent wench, say I.

Malvolio. "M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."—Nay, but first, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fabian. What a dish of poison has she dressed him?

Sir Toby. And with what wing the stannely checks at it!

Malvolio. "I may command where I adore." Why, she may command me: I serve her: she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this.—And the end,—what should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—M, O, A, I.—

Sir Toby. O! ay, make up that. He is now at a cold scent.

Fabian. Sower will cry upon’t, for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Malvolio. M,—Malvolio:—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fabian. Did not I say, he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

Malvolio. M.—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel, that suffers under probation: A should follow, but O does.

Fabian. And O! shall end, I hope.

Sir Toby. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry, O!

Malvolio. And then I comes behind.

Fabian. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might see more distraction at your heels, than fortunes before you.

Malvolio. M, O, A, I.—this simulation is not as the former;—and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Softly! here follows prose.—[Reads.] “If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: let thy tongue tang arguments of state: put thyself into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who commendeth thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desirdest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servitude, not worthy to touch fortune’s fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee, "The fortunate-unhappy."

Day-light and champain discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors. I will battle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me, for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late; she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Josce, and my stars be praised!—Here is yet another manuscript. [Reads.] “Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling: thy smiles become thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pray thee.”

"Josce, I thank thee.—I will smile: I will do every thing that thou wilt have me."

[Exit Fabian.]
Fabian.
I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy: Sir Toby.
I could marry this wench for this device.
Sir Andrew.
So could I too.
Sir Toby.
And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.
Sir Andrew.
Nor I neither.
Enter Maria.
Fabian.
Here comes my noble gull-catcher.
Sir Toby.
Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck? Sir Andrew.
Or o' mine either?
Sir Toby.
Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and become thy bond-servant? Sir Andrew.
I'faith, or I either.
Sir Toby.
Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that then the image of it leaves him he must run mad.
Maria.
Nay, but say true: does it work upon him?
Sir Toby.
Like aquavitae with a midwife.
Maria.
If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me.
Sir Toby.
To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!
Sir Andrew.
I'll make one too.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Olivia's Garden.
Enter Viola, and Clown.

Viola. Save thee, friend, and thy music. Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clown.

No, sir; I live by the church.

Viola.

Art thou a churchman?

Clown.

No such matter, sir: I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Viola.

So thou may'st say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clown.

You have said, sir.—To see this age!—A sentence is but a cheverell glove to a good wit: how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Viola.

Nay, that's certain: they, that daily nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clown.

I would therefore, my sister had had no name, sir.

Viola.

Why, man?

Clown.

Why, sir, her name's a word; and to daily with that word, might make my sister wanton. But, indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.

Viola.

Thy reason, man?

Clown.

Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Viola.

I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clown.

Not so, sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you: if that he to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Viola.

Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Clown.

No, indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands, as plichards are to herrings, the husband's the bigger. I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Viola.

I saw thee late at the count Orsino's.

Clown.

Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun: it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Viola.

Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold; there's expenses for thee.

Clown.

Now Joe-, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard.

Viola.

By my troth, I'll tell thee: I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clown.

Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Viola.

Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clown.

I would play lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Viola.

I understand you, sir: 'tis well begg'd.

Clown.

The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come; who you are, and what you would, are out of my welkin: I might say element, but the word is over-worn. [Exit.

Viola.

This fellow's wise enough to play the fool, And to do that well craves a kind of wit: He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time, And, like the haggard, check at every feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice As full of labour as a wise man's art; For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit, But wise men's folly fall'n quite taints their wit.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-catch.

Sir Toby.

Save you, gentleman.

Viola.

And you, sir.

Sir Andrew.

Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Viola.

Et vous aussi: votre serviteur.

Sir Andrew.

I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir Toby.

Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Viola.

I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Sir Toby.

Taste your legs, sir: put them to motion.

Viola.

My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir Toby.

I mean, to go, sir, to enter.

Viola.

I will answer you with gait and entrance. But we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!

Sir Andrew.

That youth's a rare courtier. "Rain odours!"

Well.

Viola.

My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir Andrew.

"Odours," "pregnant," and "vouchsafed!"

—I'll get 'em all three ready.

Olivia.

Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing. [Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.

Give me your hand, sir.

Viola.

My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Olivia.

What is your name?

Viola.

Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Olivia.

My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment. You're servant to the count Orsino, youth.

Viola.

And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Olivia.

For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts, 'Would they were blanks, rather than ill'd with me!'

Viola.

Madam, I come to what your gentle thoughts On his behalf.—

Olivia.

O! I by your leave, I pray you: I bade you never speak again of him; But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that, Than music from the spheres.

Olivia.

Dear lady,—

Olivia.

Give me leave, 'beseech you. I did send, After the last enchantment you did here, A ring in chase of you: so did I abuse Myself, my servant, and I fear me, you. Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you, in a shameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours: what might you think? Have you not set mine honour at the stake, And baited it with all th' unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving Enough is shown: a cypris, not a bosom, Hides my heart. So, let me hear you speak.

Viola.

I pity you.

Olivia.

That's a degree to love.

Viola.

No, not a grise; for 'tis a vulgar proof, That very oft we pity enemies.

Olivia.

Why then, methinks, 'tis time to smile again. O world, how apt the poor are to be proud; If one should be a prey, how much the better To fall before the lion, than the wolf? [Clock strikes.

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.— Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you; And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest, Your wife is like to reap a proper man. There lies your way, due west.

Olivia.

Then westward ho! Grace, and good disposition 'tend your ladyship. You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?

Olivia.

Stay:

I pr'ythee, tell me, what thou think'st of me.

Viola.

That you do think you are not what you are.

Olivia.

If I think so, I think the same of you.

Viola.

Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Olivia.

I would, you were as I would have you be!

Viola.

Would it be better, madam, than I am? I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

Olivia.

O! what a deal of scorn looks beautiful In the contempt and anger of his lip! A mur-
A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is Censorio, by the roses of the spring.
[Noon.]
By malice, honour, truth, and every thing,
I love thee so, that, maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For, that I wou, thou therefore hast no cause;
But rather, reason thus with reason better:
Love sought is good, but given unsought is Valiant.

By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,
And that no woman has; nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.
And so adieu, good madam: never more
Will I my master's tears to you deplore.

Yet come again; for thou, perhaps, may'st
Move that heart, which now abhors, to like his love.

SCENE II. A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-Cheek, and Fabian.

Sir Andrew.
No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir Toby.
Thy reason, dear Thoman: give thy reason.

Fabian.
You must needs yield your reason, sir Andrew.

Sir Andrew.
Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to
The count's serving man, than ever she bestowed
Upon me: I saw 't in the orchard.

Sir Toby.
Did she see thee the while, old boy? tell me that.

Sir Andrew.
As plain as I see you now.

Fabian.
This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir Andrew.
'Slight! will you make an ass of me?

Fabian.
I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir Toby.
And they have been grand jury-men since before Noah was a sailor.

Fabian.
She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and Brutonstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dullness. This was look'd for at your hand, and this was baulked: the double gift of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion; where you will hang like an icle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do reem' it by some laudable attempt, either of valour, or policy.

Sir Andrew.
An't be any way, it must be with valour, for policy I hate: I had as ill be a Brownist as a politician.

Sir Toby.
Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour: challenge me the count's youth to fight with him; but him in eleven places:
my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman, than report of valour.

Fabian.
There is no way but this, sir Andrew.

Sir Andrew.
Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir Toby.
Go, write it in a martial hand; be curt and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the licence of link: if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down. Go, about it. Let there be gall enough in thy link; though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it.

Sir Andrew.
Where shall I find you?

Sir Toby.
We'll call thee at the cubiculo. Go.

[Exit Sir Andrew.

Fabian.
This is a dear manakin to you, sir Toby.

Sir Toby.
I have been dear to him, lad; some two thousand strong, or so.

Fabian.
We shall have a rare letter from him; but you'll not deliver it.

Sir Toby.
Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think, oxen and walruses cannot hate them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea,
I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fabian.
And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Sir Toby.
Look, where the youngest wren of nine comes

Maria.
If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Young gull Malolo is turned heathen, a very renegade;
f there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

Sir Toby.
And cross-gartered?

Maria.
Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school 'i the church. I have dogged him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines, than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indis-
You have not seen such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know, my lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile,
and take't for a great favour.

Sir
I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

To the Elephant. —

I do remember.

SCENE IV. Olivia's Garden.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Maria. I have sent after him: he says, he'll come.

How shall I feast him? what bestow of him? For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or I speak too loud. —

Where is Malvolio? —

Maria. He's coming, madam: but in very strange manner. He is sure possess'd, madam.

Olivia. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Maria. No, madam: he does nothing but smile: your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

Olivia. Go call him hither. — I am as mad as he, if sad and merry madness equal be. —

Enter Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio? Malvolio.

Sweet lady, ho, ho. [Smiles ridiculously.]

Smil'st thou? I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Malvolio. Sad, lady? I could be sad. This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is, "Please one, and please all."

Olivia. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Malvolio. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed: I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Olivia. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Malvolio. To bed? ay, sweet-heart, and I'll come to thee.

Olivia. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?

Maria. How do you, Malvolio?

Malvolio. At your request! Yes; nightingales answer daws.

Maria. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Malvolio. " Be not afraid of greatness:" — 'Twas well writ.
Olivia.
What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Malvolio.
"Some are born great,"

Olivia.

Ha?

Malvolio.
"Some achieve greatness,"

Olivia.

What say'st thou?

Malvolio.
"And some have greatness thrust upon them."

Olivia.
Heaven restore thee!

Malvolio.
"Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings?"

Olivia.
Thy yellow stockings?

Malvolio.
"And wished to see thee cross-gartered."

Olivia.
Cross-gartered?

Malvolio.
"Go to: thou art made, if thou desierest to be so:" —

Olivia.
Am I made?

Malvolio.
"If not, let me see thee a servant still."

Olivia.
Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Servant.
Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orsino's is returned. I could hardly entreat him back; he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Olivia.
I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.]

Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him. I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

[Exeunt Olivia and Maria.

Malvolio.
Oh, ho! do you come near me now? no worse man than sir Toby to look to me? This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble slough," says she; — "be opposite with a kinman, surly with servants, — let thy tongue tang with arguments of state, — put thyself into the trick of singularity;" — and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her: but it is Joe's doing, and Joe make me thankful! And when she went away now, "Let this fellow be looked to," fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, every thing adheres together, that, no drachm of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance — What can be said? Nothing that can be can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Joe, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter Maria, with Sir Toby Belch, and Fabian.

Sir Toby.
Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? Is all the devils in hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fabian.
Here he is, here he is. — How is't with you, sir? how is't with you, man?

Malvolio.
Go off; I discard you: let me enjoy my private: go off.

Maria.
Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you? — Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Malvolio.
Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir Toby.
Go to, go to: peace! peace! we must deal gently with him; let me alone. — How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Malvolio.
Do you know what you say?

Maria.
La you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart. Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fabian.
Carry his water to the wise woman.

Maria.
Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Malvolio.
How now, mistress?

Maria.
O lord!

Sir Toby.
Pr'ythee, hold thy peace: this is not the way. Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fabian.
No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir Toby.
Why, how now, my bawcock! how dost thou chuck?

Malvolio.
Sir!

Sir Toby.
Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul collier!

Maria.
Get him to say his prayers: good sir Toby, get him to pray.

Malvolio.
My prayers, minx!

Maria.
No, I warrant you; he will not hear of godliness.

Malvolio.
Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element. You shall know more hereafter.

Sir Toby.
Is't possible?
Now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir Toby.

Go, sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-baillie. So soon as ever thou see'st him, draw, and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for if it comes to pass off, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent, sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away I!

Sir Andrew.

Nay, let me alone for swearing.

Sir Toby.

Now, will not I deliver his letter; for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding: his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-check a notable report of valour, and drive the gentleman, (as, I know, his youth will aptly receive it,) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Fabian.

Here he comes with your niece. Give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir Toby.

I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge. [Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.]

Re-enter Olivia, with Viola.

Olivia.

I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid my honour too unchary on't. There's something in me that reproves my fault, But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Viola.

With the same ha'pworth that your passion Go on my master's grief. [Bear's,]

Olivia.

Here; wear this jewel for me: 'tis my picture. Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you; And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me, that I'll deny, That, honour sav'd, may upon asking give?

Viola.

Nothing but this; your true love for my master.

Olivia.

How with mine honour may I give him that, Which I have given to you?

Viola.

I will acquit you.

Olivia.

Well, come again to-morrow. Fare thee well. A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir Toby Relch, and Fabian.

Sir Toby.

Gentleman, God save thee.

Viola.

And you, sir.

Sir Toby.

That defence thou hast, betake thee to't: of what what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interjuter, full of de-sight, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end. Present thy tuck; be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Viola.

You mistake, sir: I am sure, no man hath any quarrel to me. My remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir Toby.

You'll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man with.

Viola.

I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir Toby.

He is knight, dubbed with unhatch'd rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divored three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre. Hob, nob, is his word; give't, or take't.

Viola.

I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady: I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others to taste their valour; belike, this is a man of that quirk.

Sir Toby.

Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury: therefore, get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him; therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Viola.

This is as uncivill, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my pur-purpose.

Sir Toby.

I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir Toby.

Viola.

Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fabian.

I know, the knight is incensed against you, ven to a mortal arbitration, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Viola.

I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fabian.

Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria.
Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Viola.

I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one,
that would rather go with sir priest than sir knighth: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exit.

[Re-enter Sir Toby, with Sir Andrew.]

Sir Toby.

Why, man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a frago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck in,
with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on. They say, he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir Andrew.

Fox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir Toby.

Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir Andrew.

Plague on't; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him made ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capulet.

Sir Toby.

I'll make the motion. Stand here: make a good show on't. This shall end without the perdition of souls. [Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

[Re-enter Fabian and Viola.]

I have his horse [To Fabian] to take up the quarrel. I have persuaded him, the youth's a devil.

Fabian.

He is as horribly conceited of him; [To Sir Toby] and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir Toby.

There's no remedy, sir: [To Viola] he will fight with you for oath's sake. Marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: there fore, draw for the supportance of his vow: he protests, he will not hurt you.

Viola. [Aside.

Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fabian.

Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir Toby.

Come, sir Andrew, there's no remedy: the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bount with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentle-manship and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to't.

Sir Andrew.

Pray God, he keep his oath!

[Draws.

Viola.

I do assure you, 'tis against my will.

Enter Antonio.

[Draws.

Antonio. Put up your sword.—If this young gentleman
Have done offence, I take the fault on me: If you offend him, I for him defy you.

Sir Toby.

You, sir? why, what are you?

Antonio.

One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more.
Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir Toby.

Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.

[Draws.

Enter
Enter Officers.

Fabian.

O, good sir Toby, hold! here come the officers.

Sir Toby.

I'll be with you anon.

Viola.

Pray, sir; put your sword up, if you please.

Sir Andrew.

Marry, will I, sir: and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and reaps well.

First Officer.

This is the man: do thy office.

Second Officer.

Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit

Of count Orsino.

Antonio.

You do mistake me, sir.

First Officer.

No, sir, no jot: I know your favour well, Though now you have no sea-cap on your head. — Take him away: be knows, I know him well, Antonio.

I must obey. — [To Viola.] This comes with seeking you; But there's no remedy: I shall answer it. What will you do? Now my necessity [me Makes me to ask you for my purse. It grieves Much more for what I cannot do for you, Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd, But be of comfort.

Second Officer.

Come, sir, away.

Antonio.

I must entreat of you some of that money.

Viola.

What money, sir? For the fair kindness you have show'd me here, And part, being prompted by your present trouble, Out of my lean and low ability [much: I'll lend you something. My having is not I'll make division of my present with you. Hold, there's half my coffers.

Antonio.

Will you deny me now? Is't possible, that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery, Lest that it make me so unsound a man, As to upbraid you with those kindnesses That I have done for you.

Viola.

I know of none; Nor know I you by voice, or any feature. I hate ingratitude more in a man, Than lying valness, babbling drunkenness, Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption Inhabits our frail blood.

Antonio.

O, heavens themselves! Second Officer.

Come, sir: I pray you, go.

Antonio.

Let me speak a little. This youth, that you see here, I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death; Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love, And to his image, which,methought, did promise Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

First Officer.

What's that to us? The time goes by: away!

Antonio.

But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!— Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame. In nature there's no blemish, but the mind; None can be call'd deform'd, but the unkind: Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous evil Are empty trunks, o'ftrifflour'd by the devil.

First Officer.

The man grows mad: away with him! Come, come, sir.

Antonio.

Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers, with Antonio. Viola.

Methinks, his words do from such passion fly, That he believes himself; so do not I. Prove true, imagination, O! prove true, That I, dear brother, he now ta'en for you! Sir Toby.

Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian: we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Viola.

He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know Yet living in my glass; even such, and so, In favour was my brother; and he went Still in this fashion, colour, ornament, For him I imitate. O! if it prove, Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love! [Exit. Sir Toby.

A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears, in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fabian.

A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir Andrew.

'Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.

Sir Toby.

Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir Andrew.

An I do not,—[Exit. Fabian.

Come, let's see the event.

Sir Toby.

I dare lay any money 'twill be nothing yet. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The Street before Olivia's House. Enter Sebastian and Clown.

Clown.

WILL you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Sebastian.

Go to, go to; thou art a foolish fellow: Let me be clear of thee.

Clown.

Well held out, I' faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither. — Nothing that is so, is so.
Sebastian.
I pr'ythee, vent thy folly somewhere else: Thou know'st not me.

Clown.
Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney. I pr'ythee now, ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Sebastian.
I pr'ythee, foolish Greek, depart from me. There's money for thee: if you tarry longer, I shall give worse payment.

Clown.
By my troth, thou hast an open hand.—These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir Andrew, Sir Toby, and Fabian.

Sir Andrew.
Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. [Striking Sebastian.

Sebastian.
Why, there's for thee, and there, and there. Are all the people mad? [Beating Sir Andrew.

Sir Toby.
Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clown.
This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your costs for two-pence. [Exit Clown.

Sir Toby.
Come on, sir: hold! [Holding Sebastian.

Sir Andrew.
Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria. Though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Sebastian.
Let go thy hand.

Sir Toby.
Come, come, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed. Come on.

Sebastian.
I will be free from thee. What would'st thou now? If thou dar'st tempt me farther, draw thy sword.

Sir Toby.
What, what! Nay then, I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. [Draws.

Enter Olivia.

Olivia.
Hold, Toby! on thy life, I charge thee, hold! [Sir Toby.

Madam —

Olivia.
Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch! Fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves, Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my sight! —

Be not offended, dear Cesario.—

Rudesby, be gone!—I pr'ythee, gentle friend, [Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway In this uncivil, and unjust extent. Against thy peace. Go with me to my house; And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby May'st smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go:

Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me, He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Sebastian.
What relish is in this? how runs the stream? Or I am mad, or else this is a dream. Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep; If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep.

Olivia.
Nay, come, I pr'ythee. Would thou'dst be rul'd by me!

Sebastian.
Madam, I will.

Olivia.
O! say so, and so be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Maria.
Nay, I pr'ythee, put on this gown, and this bodice: make him believe thou art Sir Topas, the curate; do it quickly, I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. [Exit Maria.

Clown.
Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man, and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say a careful man, and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir Toby.
Jove bless thee, master parson.

Clown.
Bonos dies, sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That, that is, is," so I, being master parson, am master parson, for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

Sir Toby.
To him, sir Topas.

Clown.
What, ho! I say.—Peace in this prison.

Sir Toby.
The knife counterfeits well; a good knife.

Malvolio. [Within.

Who calls there?

Clown.
Sir Topas, the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Malvolio.
Sir Topas, sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clown.
Out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this man. Talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir Toby.
Well said, master parson.

Malvolio.
Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged. Good sir Topas, do not think I am mad: they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clown.
Fie, thou dishonest Satan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the devil himself with courtesy. Say'st thou that house is dark?

Malvolio.
Malvolio.

As well, sir Topas.

Clown.

Why, it hath bay-windows transparent as barricadoes, and the clear stories towards the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Malvolio.

I am not mad, sir Topas. I say to you, this house is dark.

Clown.

Madman, thou earnest: I say, there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

Malvolio.

I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused. I am no more mad than you are: make the trial of it in any constant question.

Clown.

What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?

Malvolio.

That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

Clown.

What thinkest thou of his opinion?

Malvolio.

I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clown.

Fare thee well: remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Malvolio.

Sir Topas! sir Topas!—

Sir Toby.

My most exquisite sir Topas.

Clown.

Nay, I am for all waters.

Maria.

Thou might'st have done this without thy beard, and gown: he sees thee not.

Sir Toby.

To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would, we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber.

[Exeunt Sir Toby and Maria.]

Clown.

"Heh Robin, Jolly Robin. Tell me how thy lady does." [Singing.

Malvolio.

Fool,—

Clown.

"My lady is unkind, perdy."

Malvolio.

Fool,—

Clown.

"Alas, why is she so?"

Malvolio.

Fool, I say;—

Clown.

"She loves another." —Who calls, ha?

Malvolio.

Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clown.

Master Malvolio!

Malvolio.

Ay, good fool.

Clown.

Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Malvolio.

Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clown.

But as well? then you are mad, indeed, if you be no better lucid in your wits than a fool.

Malvolio.

They have here propounded me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses! and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clown.

Advise you what you say: the minister is here.—Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain blubblé babble.

Malvolio.

Sir Topas,—

Clown.

Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God b' wi' you, good sir Topas.—Marry, amen.—I will, sir, I will.

Malvolio.

Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clown.

Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent for speaking to you.

Malvolio.

Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper: I tell thee, I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clown.

Well-a-day, that you were, sir!

Malvolio.

By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady: it shall advantage thee, more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clown.

I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit.

Malvolio.

Believe me, I am not: I tell thee true.

Clown.

Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Malvolio.

Fool, I'll require it in the highest degree: I pr'ythee, be gone.

Clown.

I am gone, sir; And anon, sir, I'll be with you again, In a trice, Like to the old vice, Your need to sustain; Who with dagger of faith, In his rage and his wrath, Cries, Ah, ha! to the devil; Like Like a mad lad,
Par’d thy nails, dad,
Odieu, Goodman devil.

[Exit.

SCENE III.
Olivia’s Garden.

Enter Sebastian.

Sebastian.

This is the air; that is the glorious sun;
This pearl she gave me, I do feel it, and see’t;
And though ‘tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet ‘tis not madness. Where’s Antonio then?
I could not find him at the Elephant;
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit,
That he did arrange the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service:
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad,
Or else the lady’s mad: yet, if ‘twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her
Take, and give back affairs, and their despatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing,
As, I perceive, she does. There’s something in’t,
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter Olivia and a Priest.

Olivia.

Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean
Now go with me, and with this holy man, [well,
Into the chantry by; there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: he shall conceal it,
While you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth.—What do you say?

Sebastian.

I’ll follow this good man, and go with you,
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Olivia.

Then lead the way, good father; and heavens
so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.
The Street before Olivia’s House.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fabian.

Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his letter.

Clown.

Good master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fabian.

Any thing.

Clown.

Do not desire to see this letter.

Fabian.

This is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, and Attendants.

Duke.

Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clown.

Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.

Duke.

I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?

Clown.

Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke.

Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clown.

No, sir, the worse.

Duke.

How can that be?

Clown.

Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me: now, my foes tell me plainly I am an ass;
so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused; so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke.

Why, this is excellent.

Clown.

By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke.

Thou shalt not be the worse for me; there’s gold.

Clown.

But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke.

O I you give me ill counsel.

Clown.

Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this one, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke.

Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer: there’s another.

Clown.

Primo, secundo, tercio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of S. Bennet, sir, may put you in mind—
One, two, three.

Duke.

You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know, I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clown.

Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of coverture: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon.

[Exit Clown.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Viola.

Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke.

That face of his I do remember well;
Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeared,
As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war.

A bow-
A bawling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable,
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,
Cried fame and honour on him.—What's the matter?

First Officer.

Osrino, this is that Antonio;[
Candy; that took the Phenix, and her fraught, from
And this is he, that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg,
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Viola.

He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side,
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon
I know not what 'twas, but distraction. [me;

Duke.

Notable pirate, thou salt-water thief,
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?

Antonio. Osrino, noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you gave me:

Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate,
Though, I confess, on base and ground enough,
Osrino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither: That most ingratitude boy there, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem: a wreck past hope he was.
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication: for his sake,
Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him, when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning (Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty-years-removed thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own
Which I had recommended to his use [purse,
Not half an hour before.

Viola.

How now can this be?

Duke.

When came he to this town?

Antonio.

To-day, my lord; and for three months beeno interim, not a minute's vacancy; [fore,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter Olivia and Attendants.

Duke.

Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth!—[meas;
But for thee, fellow: fellow, thy words are mad.
Three months this youth hath tended upon me; But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

Olivia.

What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?—Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Gracious Olivia,—
That makes thee strange thy propriety.
Fear not, Cesario: take thy fortunes up;
[art
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou
As great as that thou fear'st.—O, welcome,
father!

Re-enter Attendant with the Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,
Here to unfold (though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe) what thou dost know,
Hath newly past between this youth and me.

Priest.

A contract of eternal bond of love.
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strenthen'd by interchangegment of your rings;
And all the ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my
I have travelled but two hours. [grave

Duke.

O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be,
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet,
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Viola.

My lord, I do protest,—

Oliv.

I do not swear: [fear
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, with his head broken.

Sir Andrew.

For the love of God, a surgeon! send one presently to sir Toby.

Oliv.

What's the matter?

Sir Andrew.

He has broke my head across, and has given sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound
I were at home.

Oliv.

Who has done this, sir Andrew?

Sir Andrew.

The count's gentleman, one Cesario. We took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinate.

Duke.

My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir Andrew.

Oid's lifelings! here he is. —You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do't by sir Toby.

Vila.

Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me without cause;
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir Andrew.

If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody cox-comb.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunk, led by the Clown.

Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you other places than he did.

Duke.

How now, gentleman! how is't with you?

Sir Toby.

That's all one: he has hurt me, and there's the end on't.—Sot, didst see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clown.

O! he's drunk, sir Toby, an hour agone: his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir Toby.

Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin. I hate a drunken rogue.

Olivia.

Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir Andrew.

I'll help you, sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir Toby.

Will you help? An ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knife! a thin-faced knife, a gull!

Olivia.

Get him to bed, and let his hurt he look'd to.
[Exeunt Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Enter Sebastian.

Sebastian.

I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;
But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by
I do perceive it hath offended you: [that Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke.

One face, one voice, one habit, and two per-
A, natural perspective, that is, and is not! [sons;

Sebastian.

Antonio! O, my dear Antonio!
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee!

Sebastian are you?

Sebastian.

Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

Antonio.

How have you made division of yourself?—
An apple clef't in two is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Olivia.

Most wonderful!

Sebastian.

Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have de-

[To Viola.]

Of charity, what kin are you to What countryman? what name? what parent-age?

Viola.

Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too,
So went he suited to his watery tomb.
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.

Sebastian.

A spirit I am indeed;
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say—thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Viola.

My father had a mole upon his brow.
Sebastian.
And so had mine.

Viola.
And died that day, when Viola from her birth
Had number'd thirteen years.

Sebastian.
O! that record is lively in my soul.
He finished, indeed, his mortal act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Viola.
If nothing lets make us happy both,
But this my masquer'd and attire,
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump,
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town. [help
Where lie my maiden weeds: by whose genteel
I was preserv'd to serve this noble count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady, and this lord.

Sebastian.
So comes it, lady, [To Olivia] you have been mistook;
But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid,
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceitful:
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke.
Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.—
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.
Boy, [To Viola.] thou hast said to me a thousand times,
Thou never should'st love woman like to me.

Viola.
And all those sayings will I over-swear,
And all those swears keep as true in soul,
As doth that orbited continent, the fire
That severs day from night.

Duke.
Give me thy hand;
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Viola.
The captain, that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some ac-
Is now in durance at Malvolio's suit, [clown,
A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Olivia.
He shall enlarge him.—Fetch Malvolio hither:
And yet, alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.
A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.

Re-enter Clown, with a letter.

How does he, sirrah?

Clown.
 Truly, madam, he holds Belmont at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do. He has here writ a letter to you: I should have given it you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

Olivia.
Open it, and read it.

Clown.
Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman:—[Reads]"By the Lord, madam,"—

Olivia.
How now! art thou mad?
And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious gawk, and gull,
That e'er invention play'd on? tell me why.

Olivia.

Alas! Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character;
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand:
And now I do betheke me, it was she First told me thou wast mad; then canst in smiling,
And in such forms which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content:
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon
thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Fabian.

Good madam, hear me speak;
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall Most freely I confess, myself, and Toby, [not,
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him. Maria writ
The letter at sir Toby's great importance;
In recompense whereof, he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Olivia.

Alas, poor fool, how have they baffled thee!

Clown.

Why, "some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them." I was one, sir, in this interlude; one sir Topas, sir; but that's all one. — "By the Lord, fool, I am not mad." — But do you remember? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he's gag'd:"
And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenge.

Malvolio.

I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you.

Olivia.

He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke.

Purse him, and entreat him to a peace.
He hath not told us of the captain yet:
When that is known and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls: — mean time, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. — Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man,
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen.

[Exeunt.

CLOWN SINGS.

When that I was a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas! to wife,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With tost-pots still had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes' Palace.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Camillo, I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Archidamus.

Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Camillo.

Beseech you,—

Archidamus.

Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Camillo.

You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Archidamus.

Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

---

Camillo.

Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attorney'd, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies, that they have seemed to be together, though absent, shook hands, as over a vast, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves?

Archidamus.

I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Camillo.

I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they, that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

Archidamus.

Would they else be content to die?

Camillo.

Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Archidamus.

If the king had no son they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE
SCENE II. The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Hermione, Camillo, and Attendants.

Polixenes.

Nine changes of the watery star have been The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne
Without a burden; time as long again Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks; And yet we should for perpetuity Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher, Yet standing in rich place, I multiply With one we-thank-you many thousands more That go before it.

Leontes.

Stay your thanks awhile, And pay them when you part.

Polixenes.

Sir, that's to-morrow. I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance,
Or breed upon our absence; that may blow No sneaping winds at home, to make us say, "This is put forth too truly." Besides, I have To tire your royalty. [stay'd

Leontes.

We are tougher, brother, Than you can put us to't.

Polixenes.

No longer stay.

Leontes.

One seven-night longer.

Polixenes.

Very sooth, to-morrow,

Leontes.

We'll part the time between's then; and in I'll no gain-saying. [that

Polixenes.

Press me not, beseech you, so.

There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world, [now, So soon as yours, could win me: so it should Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder, Were in your love a whip to me, my stay To you a charge, and trouble: to save both, Farewell, our brother.

Leontes.

Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Hermione.

I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until [You, sir, You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. Charge him too coldly: tell him, you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction The by-gone day proclaim'd. Say this to him, He's best from his best ward.

Leontes.

Well said, Hermione.

Hermione.

To tell he longs to see his son were strong: But let him say so then, and let him go; But let him swear so, and he shall not stay, We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.— Yet of your royal presence [To Polixenes]

I'll adventure The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give him my commission, To let him there a month behind the gest Prefix'd for parting: yet, good deed, Leontes, I love thee not a jot o' the clock behind What lady she her lord. You'll stay?

Polixenes.

No, madam.

Hermione.

Nay, but you will?

Polixenes.

I may not, verily.

Hermione.

Verily! You put me off with limber vows; but I, Though you would seek t' unsphere the stars with oaths, Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily, You shall not go: a lady's verily Is As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet? Force me to keep you as a prisoner, Not like a guest, so you shall pay your fees, When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you? My prisoner, or my guest? by your dread verily, One of them you shall be.

Polixenes.

Your guest then, madam: To be your prisoner should import offending; Which is for me less easy to commit, Than you to punish.

Hermione.

Not your jailor then, But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were You pretty lording here. [boys:

Polixenes.

We were, fair queen, Two lads, that thought there was no more be- But such a day to-morrow as to-day, [hind, And to be boy eternal.

Hermione.

Was not my lord the verler wag o' the two?

Polixenes.

We were as twinn'd lambs, that did frisk i' the sun, And beat the one at th'other: what we chang'd, Was innocence for innocence: we knew not The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd That any did. Had we pursued that life, And our weak spirits ne'er been higher reared With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven Boldly, "not guilty;" the imposition clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Hermione.

By this we gather, You have tripp'd since.

Polixenes.

O! my most sacred lady, Temptations have since then been born to's; for In those unfield'd days was my wife a girl: Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes Of my young play-fellow.

Hermione.

Gracious to boot! Of this make no conclusion, lest you say, Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on; Th' offences we have made you do, we'll answer; If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not With any, but with us.

Leontes.

Is he won yet?

Hermione.

He'll stay, my lord.
Leontes.
At my request he would not.

Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Hermione.
Never?

Leontes.
Never, but once.

Hermione.
What? have I twice said well? when wasn't before?

I pr'ythee, tell me. Cram's with praise, and As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying tongueless,
Slaughter's a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages: you may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:
My last good deed was to entreat his stay:
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to the purpose: When?
Nay, let me have't; I long.

Leontes.
Why, that was when
Three crabb'd months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make them open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter,
"I am yours for ever."

Hermione.
It is Grace, indeed.—
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband,
The' other for some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to Polixenes.]

Leontes. [Aside]
Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis on me:—my heart dances,
But not for joy,—not joy. —This entertainment
May a free face put on; derive a liberty.
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: 't may, I grant;
But to be padding palms, and pinching fingers,
As now they are; and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass;—and then to sigh, as 'twere
The mort o' the deer: O! that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.—Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mamillius.
Ay, my good lord.

Leontes.
I' fecks?
Why, that's my baycock. What! hast smutch'd thy nose?—
They say, it is a copy out of mine.
Come, captain,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all cal'd neat.—Still virgining

[Observing Polixenes and Hermione.]

Upon his palm?—How now, you wanton calf!
Art thou my calf?

Mamillius.
Yes, if you will, my lord.

Leontes.
Thou want'st a rough pass, and the shoots
That I had,
To be full like me—yet, they say, we are Almost as like as eggs: women say so,
That will say any thing: but were they false
As o'er-dyed blacks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me.—Come, sit page, Look on me with your welkin eye: sweet villain!
[may't be
Most dear'st! my collop!—Can thy dam?—
Affection? thy intention stabs the centre:
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicating with dreams:—(how can this
With what's unreal thou coaxative art, [be]?—
And fellow'st nothing. Then, 'tis very credent, Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost:
(And that beyond commission;) and I find It,
And that to the infection of my brains,
And hardening of my brows.

Polixenes.
What means Sicilia?

Hermione.
He something seems unsettled.

Polixenes.
How, my lord!

Leontes.
What cheer? how is't with you, best brother?

Hermione.
You look,
As if you held a brow of much distraction:
Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leontes.
No, in good earnest.—
How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, my thoughts I did recall
Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd,
In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.
How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash, this gentleman. —Mine honest
Will you take eggs for money? [friend,
Mamillius.
No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leontes.
You will? why, happy man be his dole!—
My brother,
Are you so fond of your young prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

Polixenes.
If at home, sir,
He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all.
He makes a July's day short as December;
And with his varying childish cures in me
Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

Leontes.
So stands this squire
Offic'd with me. We two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps.—Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's wel-
Let what is dear in Sicily, be cheap. [come:
Next to thyself, and my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.

THE WINTER'S TALE

ACT I. Sc. II.

Be you beneath the sky. — [Aside] I am angling now.
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the net, the bill to him;
And arms her with the boldness of a wife.
To her allowing husband. Gone already!
[Exeunt Polixenes, Hermione, and Attendants.
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one! —
Go play, boy, play — thy mother plays, and I Play too, but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave: contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. — Go play, boy, play. — There have been,
Or I am much deceiv'd. cuckolds ere now;
And many a man there is, (even at this present,
Now, while I speak this,) holds his wife by th' arm.
That little thinks she has been sluic'd in's ab—
And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by Sir Smile, his neighbour. Nay, there's comfort in't, [open'd,
Whiles other men have gates, and those gates As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind Would hang themselves. Physic for't there is
It is a bawdy planet, that will strike [none:
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful, think it.
From east, west, north, and south; be it con-
No barricado for a belly: know it; [closed,
It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage. Many a thousand on's Have the disease, and feel't not.—How now, boy?

Mamillius.
I am like you, they say.

Leontes.
Why, that's some comfort. —
What ! Camillo there?

Camillo.
Ay, my good lord.

Leontes.
Go play, Mamillius; thou'rt an honest man. — [Exit Mamillius.

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

Camillo.
You had much ado to make his anchor hold:
When you cast out, it still came home.

Leontes.
Didst note it?

Camillo.
He would not stay at your petitions; made
His business more material.

Leontes.
Didst perceive it?

They're here with me already; whispering,
rounding,
"Sicilia is a " — so-forth. 'Tis far gone,
When I shall gust it last. — How came 't Camillo,
That he did stay?

Camillo.
At the good queen's entreaty.

Leontes.
At the queen's, be't: good should be perti-

Camilo.
Business, my lord? I think, most understand
Bohemia stays here longer.

Leontes.
Ha?

Camillo.
Stays here longer.

Leontes.
Ay, but why?

Camillo.
To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

Leontes.
Satisfy
The entreaties of your mistress? — satisfy?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like, thou Hast cleans'd my bosom: I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd; but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.

Camillo.
Be it forbid, my lord!

Leontes.
To bide upon't, — thou art not honest; or,
If thou inclin'est that way, thou art a coward,
Which boxes honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted
A servant grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool.
That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake
And tak'st it all for jest.

Camillo.
My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful:
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly: if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-perfectance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest. These, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of: but, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me: let me know my trespass
By its own visage; if then I deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leontes.
Have not you seen, Camillo,

(But that's past doubt; you have, or your eyeglass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn) or heard,
(For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought, (for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think)
My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
Or else be impudently negative, [say,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then
My wife's a hobby-horse; deserves a name
As rank as any flux-wench, that puts to Before her troth-pilgrimage: say't and justify't.

Camillo.
I would not be a stander-by to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken. 'Shrew my heart, You never spoke what did become you less

Then
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.

Leontes.

With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only, That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing? Why, then the world, and all that is in’t, is nothing:
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing; My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these If this be nothing.

Camillo.

Good my lord, be cur’d.

Of this disease’d opinion, and betimes;
For ’tis most dangerous.

Leontes.

Say, it be; ’tis true.

Camillo.

No, no, my lord.

Leontes.

It is; you lie, you lie:
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pray pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave, Or else a hovering temporizer, that Cannot with thine eyes at once see good and evil, Inclining to them both: Were my wife’s liver Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Camillo.

Who does infect her?

Leontes.

Why he, that wears her like her medal, hanging
About his neck. Bohemia: who—if I Had servants true about me, that bare eyes to see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts, they would do that
Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou,
His cupbearer—whom I from meaner form
Have ‘brench’d, and rear’d to worship, who may’st see
[heaven, Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees
How I am galled.—might’d besip a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink,
Which draught to me were cordial.

Camillo.

Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram, that should not work
Maliciously, like poison; but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov’d thee,—

Leontes.

Make that thy question, and go rot!
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets, (Which to preserve is sleep; which, being spotted,
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps,)
Give scandal to the blood o’ the prince, my son,
(Who, do I think is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe moving to’? Would I do this?
Could man so brench?

Camillo.

I must believe you, sir:
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for’t;

Provided, that when be’s remov’d, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first,
Even for your son’s sake; and thereby for Sealing The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leontes.

Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I’ll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Camillo.

My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen. I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leontes.

This is all:
Do’t, and thou hast one half of my heart;
Do’t not, thou split’s at thine own.

Camillo.

I’ll do’t, my lord.

I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis’d me.

[Exit.}

Camillo.

O, miserable lady!—But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes; and my ground to do’t
Is the obedience to a master: one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his so too. —To do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish’d after, I’d not do’t; but since
No brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not Let villainy itself forswear’t. I must,
Forsake the court: to do’t, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.

Polixenes.

This is strange. Methinks,
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak?—
Good-day, Camillo.

Camillo.

Hail, most royal sir!

Polixenes.

What is the news? the court?

Camillo.

None rare, my lord.

Polixenes.

The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region
Lov’d as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speedeth from me; and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding
That changes thus his manners.

Camillo.

I dare not know, my lord.

Polixenes.

How! dare not? Do not! Do you know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? ’Tis thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang’d complexions and to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang’d too; for I must
A party in this alteration, finding [be Myself thus alter’d with ‘t.

Camillo.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT II. Sc. 1.

Camillo. There is a sickness which puts some of us in disorder; but I cannot name the disease, and it is caught of you, that yet are well.

Polixenes. How caught of me? Make me not sighted like the basilisk: [better I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,-- As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto Clerk-like, experience, which no less adorns Our gentry than our parents' noble names, In whose success we are gentle,--I beseech you, If you know aught which does behove my know— Thereof to be inform'd, imprison it not [ledge In ignorant concealment.

Camillo. I may not answer.

Polixenes. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well? I must be answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Camillo, I conjure thee, by all the parts of man [least Which honour does acknowledge,—If you do not the Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare What incendancy thou dost guess of harm Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near; Which way to be prevented, if to be; If not, how best to bear it.

Camillo. Sir, I will tell you:

Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him That I think honourable. Therefore, mark my counsel, Which must be even as swiftly follow'd, as I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me Cry, "lost," and so good night.

Polixenes. I am appointed him to murder you.

Camillo. By whom, Camillo?

Polixenes. By the king.

Polixenes. For what?

Camillo. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears, As he had seen't, or been an instrument To vice you to— that you have touch'd his Forbiddenly.

Polixenes. O! then my best blood turn To an infected jelly, and my name Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best! Turn then my freshest reputation To a savour, that may strike the dullest nostril Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd, Nay, hated too, worse than the great't in That e'er was heard, or read!

Camillo. I saw his heart in's face. Give me thy hand: Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure Two days ago. —This jealousy Is for a precious creature: as she's rare, Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty, Must it be violent; and, as he does conceive He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenge must [me: In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades Good expedition be my friend, and comfort The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo: I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence. Let us avoid.

Camillo. It is in mine authority to command The keys of all the posterns. Please your highness To take the urgent hour. Come, sir: away!

(Exeunt)

ACT II.

SCENE I. The same.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, and Ladies.

Hermione. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me, 'Tis past enduring.

First Lady. Come, my gracious lord: Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mamillius. No, I'll none of you.

First Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mamillius. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me as if I were a baby still.—I love you better.

Second Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mamillius. Not for because [say, Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they Become some women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semi-circle, Or a half-moon made with a pen.
Second Lady. Who taught this?

Mamillius. I learn'd it out of women's faces.—Pray now, What colour are your eyebrows?

First Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mamillius. Nay, that's a mock; I have seen a lady's nose, That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

Second Lady. Hark ye. The queen, your mother, rounds space: we shall Present our services to a fine new prince, One of these days, and then you'd wanton with If we would have you.

First Lady. She is spread of late Into a goody bulk: good time encounter her!

Hermione. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir; I am for you again: pray you, sit by us, [now And tell's a tale.

Mamillius. Merry, or sad, shall't be?

Hermione. As merry as you will.

Mamillius. A sad tale's best for winter.

I have one of sprites and goblins.

Hermione. Let's have that, good sir. Come on; sit down:—come on, and do your best To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful Mamillius. There was a man.—

Hermione. Nay, come, sit down; then on.

Mamillius. Dwelt by a church-yard.—I will tell it softly; Yond' crickets shall not hear it.

Hermione. Come on then, And give't me in mine ear.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and others.

Leontes. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?

First Lord. Behind the tuit of pines I met them: never Saw I men scour so on their way. I e't them Even to their ships.

Leontes. How bless'd am I In my just carens! In my true opinion!— Alack, for lesser knowledge!—How accrues'd, In being so biest!—There may be in the cup A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart, And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge Is not infected; but if one present The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides, With violent hefts.—I have drunk, and seen the Camillo was his help in this, his pardon.— There is a plot against my life, my crown: All's true that is mistrusted;—that false villain, Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him. He has discover'd my design, and I Remain a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick For them to play at will.—How came the posterns So easily open?

First Lord. By his great authority; Which often hath no less prevail'd than so, On your command.

Leontes. I know't well too.— Give me the boy. [To Hermione.] I am glad, you did not nurse him: Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you Have too much blood in him.

Hermione. What is this? sport?

Leontes. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about Away with him; and let her sport herself [her. With that she's big with, for 'tis Polixenes Has made thee swell thus.

Hermione. But I'd say he had not, And, I'll be sworn, you would believe my saying, Howe'er you lean to the yawnd.

Leontes. You, my lords, Look on her, mark her well; be but about To say, "she is a goodly lady," and The justice of your hearts will thereto add, "'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable:" Praise her but for this her without-door form, (Which, on my faith, deserves high speech) and straight The shrug, the hum, or ha (these petty brands, That calumny doth use,—O, I am out!— That merey does, for calumny will scar (ha's, Virtue itself)—these shrugs, these hums, and When you have said "she's goodly," come be'tween, Ere you can say "she's honest." But be'lt known, From him that has most cause to grieve it She's an adultress? [should be,] Hermione. Should a villain say so, The most replenish'd villain in the world, He were as much more villain: you, my lord, Do but mistake.

Leontes. You have mistook, my lady, Polixenes for Leontes. O, thou thing! Which I'll not call a creature of thy place, Least bastardism, making me the precedent, Should a like language use to all degrees, And mannerly distinguishment leave out Betwixt the prince and beggar!—I have said She's an adultress; I have said with whom: More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is A fiderary with her, and one that knows What she should shame to know herself, But with her most vile principal, that she's A bed-servant, even as bad as those That vulgar give bold titles; ay, and privy To this their late escape.

Hermione. No, by my life, Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you, When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that You thus have publish'd me? Gentle my lord, You scarce can right me thoroughly then, to say You did mistake.

Leontes. No; if I mistake In those foundations which I build upon, The centre is not big enough to bear A school-boy's top.—Away with her to prison! He Hermione.

There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.—Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are, the want of which vain dew,
Perchance, shall dry your pities; but I have
That honourable grief lodg'd here, which burns Worse than tears drawn. Beseech you, all my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me—and so
The king's will be perform'd.

Leontes. Shall I be heard? [To the Guards.

Hermione.

Who is't, that goes with me?—Beseech your highness,
My women may be with me; for, you see,
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause: when you shall know, your mistress
Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears,
As I come out: this action. I now go on,
Is for my better grace.—Adieu, my lord:
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now, [leave.
I trust, I shall.—My women, come; you have

Leontes.

Go, do our bidding: hence! [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

First Lord.

Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Antigonus.

Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence; in the which three great ones
Yourself, your queen, your son. [suffer,

First Lord.

For her, my lord, I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir,
Please you t' accept it, that the queen is spotless
I the eyes of heaven, and to you: I mean,
In this which you accuse her.

Antigonus.

If it prove
She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her;
Than when I feel, and see her, no further trust
For every lurch of woman in the world, [ther;
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh, is false,
If she be.

Leontes.

Hold your peace! [First Lord.

Antigonus.

It is for you we speak, not for ourselves.
You are abus'd, and by some putter-on,
That will be damn'd for't; would I knew the villain.
[Sw'd—
I would land-damn him. Be she honour-
I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven,
The second, and the third, nine, and some five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honour
I'll gend them all: fourteen they shall not see,
To bring false generations: they are co-heirs,
And I had rather gib myself, than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leontes.

Cease! no more.
You smell this business with a sense as cold

As is a dead man's nose; but I do see't, and
As you feel doing thus, and see withal [feel't,
The instruments that feel.

Antigonus.

If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty:
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.

Leontes. What! lack I credit?

First Lord.

I had rather you did lack, than I, my lord,
Upon this ground; and more it would content
me
To have her honour true, than your suspicion,
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leontes.

Why, what need we
Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
Imparts this; which, if you (or stupid'd
Or seeming so in skill) cannot, or will not,
Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The lose, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Antigonus.

And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture,

Leontes.

How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age
Or thou wilt born a fool. Camillo's flight
Added to their familiariry,
(Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances Made up to the deed) doth push on this pro-yet, for a greater confirmation, [covenanting:
(For in an act of this importance 'twere [post, Most piteous to be wild,) I have despatch'd In
To sacred Delphos, Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency. Now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well?

First Lord.

Well done, my lord.

Leontes.

Though I am satisfied, and need no more
Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others; such as he,
Whose ignorant credulity will not [good,
Come up to the truth. So have we thought it
From our free person she should be confin'd,
Let that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us:
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Antigonus. [Aside.

To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. [Exeunt.

Enter Paulina and Attendants.

Paulina.

The keeper of the prison, call him:
[Exit an Attendant.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT II. SC. 11.

Let him have knowledge who I am.—Good lady! No court in Europe is too good for thee, What dost thou then in prison?—Now, good sir, Re-enter Attendant, with the Jailor.

You know me, do you not?

Jailor. For a worthy lady, And one whom much I honour.

Paulina. Pray you then, Conduct me to the queen.

Jailor. I may not, madam: to the contrary I have express commandment.

Paulina. Here's ado,

To lock up honesty and honour from [you, Th' access of gentle visitors I—Is't lawful, pray To see her women? any of them? Emilia?] Jailor. So please you, madam, To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paulina. I pray now, call her.

Withdraw yourselves. [Exeunt Attendants.

Jailor. And, madam, I must be present at your conference.

Paulina. Well, be 't so, pr'ythee. [Exit Jailor. Here's such ado to make no stain a stain, As passes colouring.

Re-enter Jailor, with Emilia.

Dear gentlewoman, How fares our gracious lady?

Emilia. As well as one so great, and so forlorn, May hold together. On her frowns, and griefs, (Which never tender lady hath borne greater,) She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

A boy?

Emilia. A daughter; and a goodly babe, Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives Much comfort in't, says, "My poor prisoner, I am innocent as you!"

Paulina. I dare be sworn:—These dangerous, unsafe lunes 't the king, be-shrew them! He must be told on't, and he shall: the office Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me. If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister, And never to my red-look'd anger be. The trumpet any more.—Pray you, Emilia, Commend my best obedience to the queen: If she dares trust me with her little babe, I'll shew't the king, and undertake to be Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know How he may soften at the sight o' the child: The silence often of pure innocence Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emilia. Most worthy madam, Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident, That your free undertaking cannot miss A thriving issue: there is no lady living [ship So meet for this great errand. Please your lady-

To visit the next room, I'll presently Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer, Who, but to-day, hammer'd of this design, But durst not tempt a minister of honour, Lest she should be denied.

Paulina. Tell her, Emilia, I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it, As boldness from my bosom, let it not be doubted I shall do good.

Emilia. Now, be you blest for it! I'll to the queen.—Please you, come something nearer.

Jailor. Madam, if't please the queen to send the babe, I know not what I shall incur to pass it, Having no warrant.

Paulina. You need not fear it, sir: The child was prisoner to the womb, and is, By law and process of great nature, hence Freed and enfranchis'd: not a party to The anger of the king, nor guilty of, If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Jailor. I do believe it.

Paulina. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I Will stand betwixt you and danger. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. A Room in the Palace. Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leontes. Nor night, nor day, nor rest. It is but weakness To bear the matter thus, mere weakness. If The cause were not in being, part o' the cause, She, th' adultress; for the harlot king Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank And level of my brain, plot-proof; but she I can hook to me: say, that she were gone, Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest Might come to me again.—Who's there?

First Attendant. My lord.

Leontes. How does the boy?

First Attendant. He took good rest to-night: 'Tis hop'd, his sickness is discharge'd.

Leontes. To see his nobleness! Conceiving the dishonour of his mother, He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply, Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself, Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep, [go, And downright languish'd.—Leave me solely;— See how he fares. [Exit Attendant.]—Fie, fie! no thought of him:— The very thought of my revenges that way Recoil upon me; in himself too mighty, And in his paces, his alliance,—let him be, Until a time may serve: for present vengeance, Take it on her. Camillo and Polizenes Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow: They should not laugh, if I could reach them; Shall she, within my power. [nor Enter Paulina, with a Child. First Lord. You must not enter.

Paulina.
Paulina.
Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me.
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas!
That the queen’s life? a gracious innocent soul,
More free than he is jealous.

Antigonus.
That’s enough.

First Attendant.
Madam, he hath not slept to-night; com-
None should come at him. [manded
Paulina.
Not so hot, good sir:
I come to bring him sleep. ’Tis such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings,—such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as medicinal as true,
Honest as either, to purge him of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.

Leontes.
What noise there, ho?
Paulina.
No noise, my lord; but needful conference,
About some gossips for your highness.

Leontes.
How 2—
Away with that audacious lady. Antigonus,
I charg’d thee, that she should not come about
I knew she would. [me:

Antigonus.
I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure’s peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leontes.
What I cannot not rule her?
Paulina.
From all dishonesty he can: in this,
(Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honour) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Antigonus.
Lo, you now I you hear.
When she will take the rent, I her run;
But she’ll not stumble.

Paulina.
Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who professes
Myself your loyal servant, your physician.
Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares
Less appear so in comforting your evils,
Than such as most seem yours,—I say, I come
From your good queen.

Leontes.
Good queen!

Paulina.
Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say, good
queen;
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leontes.
Force her hence.

Paulina.
Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me. On mine own accord I’ll off,
But first I’ll do my errand.—The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a
daughter;
Here ’tis; commends it to your blessing.
[laying down the child.

Leontes.
Out!
Paulina.
A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

Leontes.
I'll ha' thee burn'd.

Paulina.
I care not:
It is an heretic that makes the fire, [tyrant;
Not she which burns it. I'll not call you
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation [savors Than your own weak hing'd fancy) something
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leontes.
On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her. Were I a tyrant,
Where was her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!

Paulina,
I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: [Jove
Send her [hands?—
A better guiding spirit!—What need these
You, that are thus tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so:—farewell; we are gone. [Exit.

Leontes.
Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this:—
My child? away with 't!—even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire:
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done.
(And by good testimony) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard-brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire,
For thou sott'st on thy wife.

Antigonus.
I did not, sir:—
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

First Lord.
We can: my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leontes.
You're liars all.

First Lord.
Beseech your highness, give us better credit.
We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech
So to esteem us; and on our knees we beg,
(As recompense of our dear services, [pose;
Fast, and to come) that you do change this pur-
Which, being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.

Leontes.
I am a feather for each wind that blows. —
Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? Better burn it now,
Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:—
It shall not neither.—You, sir, come you hither;
[To Antigonus.
You, that have been so tenderly officious
With lady Margery, your mildwife, there,
To save this bastard's life,—for 'tis a bastard,
So sure as thy beard's grey,—what will you
To save this brat's life? [adventure

Antigonus.
Any thing, my lord,
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose; at least, thus much;
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left,
To save the innocent: any thing possible.

Leontes.
It shall be possible. Swear by this sword,
Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Antigonus.
I will, my lord.

Leontes.
Mark, and perform it, seoeth thou; for the fall
Of any point in't shall not only be Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife, Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin
thee,
As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry [it
This female bastard hence; and that thou bear
To some remote and desert place, quite out
Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it,
Without more mercy, to its own protection,
And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune
It came to us, I do in justice charge thee,
On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it up.

Antigonus.
I swear to do this, though a present death
Had been more merciful. —Come on, poor babe:
Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens,
To be thy nurses! Wolves, and bears, they say,
Casting their savage ness aside, have done
Like offices of pity. —Sir, be prosperous
In more than this deed doth require!—and Against this cruelty fight on thy side, [blessing
Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!
[Exit with the child.

Leontes.
No; I'll not rear
Another's issue.

First Attendant.
Please your highness, posts
From those you sent to the oracle are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both Hasting to the court.[landed,
First Lord.
So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond account.

Leontes.
Twenty-three days
They have been absent: 'tis good speed, forrestals
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords:
Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady; for, as she bath
Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have
A just and open trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,
And think upon my bidding. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I. The Same. A Street in some Town.
Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleomenes.
THERE the climate's delicate, the air most sweet,
Fertile the isle, the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

Dion.
I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits,
(Methinks, I so should term them) and the reverence
Of the gods wearers. O, the sacrifice!

How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was I the offering I

Cleomenes.
But, of all, the burst
And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense,
That I was nothing.

Dion.
If th' event o' the journey
Prove as successful to the queen.—O, be't so—
As it has been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.

Cleomenes.
Great Apollo,
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione, I little like.

Dion.
The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end, the business: when the oracle,
(That by Apollo's great divine seal'd up)
Shall the contents discover, something rare,
Even then, will rush to knowledge.—Go, fresh horses;—
And grac'd be the issue! [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. A Court of Justice.

Enter Leontes, Lords, and Officers.

Leontes.
This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even presses against our heart: the party tried,
The daughter of a king; our wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd.—Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the guilt, or the purification.—
Produce the prisoner.

Officer.
It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen
Appear in person here in court. [Silence.

Enter Hermione, guarded; Paulina, and Ladies attending.

Leontes.
Read the indictment.

Officer.
"Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia: and consorting with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night."

Hermione.
Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my accusation; and
The testimony on my part no other [boast me
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce
To say, "Not guilty:" mine integrity,
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it, be so receiv'd; But thus,—if pow'rs divine
Behold our human actions, (as they do,) I doubt not, then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience.—You, my lord, best know,
(Who least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chast, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devil'sd,
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life, and honour, 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for hoo-
'Tis a derivative from me to mine, [nour,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes,
Came to your court. how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncertain I
Have strain'd, t' appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or, in act, or will,
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry, ' Fie!" upon my grave.

Leontes.
I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.

Hermione.
That's true enough;
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leontes.
You will not own it.

Hermione.
More than mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
(With whom I am accus'd) I do confess,
I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded; [me
Which not to have done, I think, had been in Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you, and toward your friend, whose love
I had spoke,
Even since it could speak from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how : all I know of it
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.

Leontes.
You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in's absence.

Hermione.
Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leontes.
Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes. [shame.
And I but dream'd it.—As you were past all (Those of your fact are so) so past all truth,
Which to deny concerns more than avails; for as Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it) so thou

Shall Enter a Servant, hastily.

Servant.

My lord the king, the king!

Leontes.

What is the business?

Servant.

O sir! I shall be hated to report it:
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leontes.

How I gone?

Leontes.

Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione faints]

How now there?

Paulina.

This news is mortal to the queen.—Look down,
And see what death is doing.

Leontes.

Take her hence:—Her heart is but o'ercharged; she will recover.—
I have too much belief'd mine own suspicion:—
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon
[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Hermione]
My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!—
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied [with My swift command; though I with death, and Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane,
And still'd with honour, to my kingly guest
Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here,
Which you knew great, and to the hazard
Of all incertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour.—How he glister
Thorough my rust! and how his plenty
Does my deeds make the blacker?

Re-enter Paulina.

Paulina.

Woe the while!—O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it, Break too!

First Lord.

What fit is this, good lady?

Paulina.

What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? What playing? boiling,
In leads, or oils? what old, or newer torture?
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny,
Together working with thy jealousies,—
Fanes too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine,—O! I think, what they have done,
And then run mad, indeed; stark mad, for all
Thy by-gone follyers were but spiles of it.
That thou betray'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant,
And dangnable ungrateful: nor was't much,
Thou would'st have poison'd good Camillo's
honour,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by! whereof I reckon
The
The casting forth to crowns thy baby daughter, To be or none, or little; though a devil Would have she shed water out of fire, ere don't: Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts Of one so tender, so fair, so full of grace Could conceiv'd a good and foolish sire Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no, I laid to thy answer: but the last.—O, lords! When I have said, cry, woe!—the queen, the queen. The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead; and vengeance for't Not dropp'd down yet.

First Lord.

The higher powers forbid!

Paulina.

I say, she's dead; I'll swear't: if word, nor oath, Prevail not, go and see. If you can bring Tincture, or lustre, in her eye, Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant! Do not repent these things, for they are heavier Than all thy woes can stir; therefore, betake thee To nothing but despair. A thousand knees Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting, Upon a barren mountain, and still winter, In storm perpetual, could not move the gods To look that way thou wert.

Leontes.

Go on, go on; Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd All tongues to talk their bitterest.

First Lord.

Say no more: How're the business goes, you have made fault I' the boldness of your speech.

Paulina.

I am sorry for't: All faults I make, when I shall come to know them, I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much The rashness of a woman. He is touch'd To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past help, Should be past grief: do not receive affliction At my petition, I beseech you; rather, Let me be punish'd that has minded you Of what you should forget. Now, good my Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman: [liege, The love I bore your queen,—I, fool again!— I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children; I'll not remember you of my own lord, Who is lost too. Take your patience to you, And I'll say nothing.

Leontes.

Thou dost speak but well, When most the truth, which I receive much better, Than to be pitted of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me To the dead bodies of my queen and son. One grave shall be for both: upon them shall The causes of their death appear, unto Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there Shall be my recreation: so long as nature Will bear up with this exercise, so long I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me To these sorrows. [Exeunt.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT III. Sc. III.

But my heart bleeds, and most accurs'd am I, To be by oath enjoin'd to this. Farewell! The day frowns more and more: thou art like A lullaby too rough. I never saw [to have The heavens so dim by day. [Bear roar.] A savage clamour?—

Well may I get aboard!—This is the chase; I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.

Enter an old Shepherd.

Shepherd.

I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wrangling the anciently, stealing, fighting.—Hark you now!—Would any but these boiled-brains of nineteen, and two-and-twenty, hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which, I fear, the wolf will sooner find, than the master: if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, brows of ivy. Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we here? [Taking up the child.] Mercy on's, a barn; a very pretty barn! A boy, or a child, I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one. Sure some scope: though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scope. This has been some stairs-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work: they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll carry till my son come: he halloed but even now.—Whoa, ho hoa!

Enter Clown.

Hilloa, loa! Shepherd.

What art so near? If thou'll see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What all's thou, man?

Clown.

I have seen two such sights, by sea, and by land:—but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky: betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shepherd.

Why, boy, how is it?

Clown.

I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes I see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her malmsait; and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hogshad. And then for the land service:—to see how the bear tore out his shoulder bone; how he cried to me for help, and said, his name was Antigonus, a nobleman. — But to make an end of the ship,—to see how the sea flap-flap flapped it:—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them;—and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea, or weather.

Shepherd.

Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clown.

Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.

Shepherd.

Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clown.

I would you had been by the ship's side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shepherd.

Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou met st with things dying, 1 with things new born. Here's a sight for thee: look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! Look thee here: take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see. It was told me, I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling. — Open't: what's within, boy?

Clown.

You're a made old man: if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Shepherd.

This is fair gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with it, keep it close: home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still requires nothing but charity.—Let my sheep go.—Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clown.

Go you the next way with your findings: I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curt, but when they are hungry. If there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

Shepherd.

That's a good deed. If thou may'st discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clown.

Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him 1 the ground.

Shepherd.

'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Time.

I THAT please some, try all; both joy, and terror, Of good and bad; that make, and unfold Now take upon me, in the name of Time, To use my wings. Impute it not a crime To me, or my swift passage, that I slide O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried Of that wide gap; since it is in my power To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass The same I am, ere ancient'st order was, Or what is now receiv'd; I witness to The times that brought them in; so shall I do To the freshest things now reigning, and make The glistering of this present, as my tale [stale Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing, I turn by glass, and give my scene such growing, As you had slept between. Leontes leaving Th' effects of his fond jealosies, so grieving That he shuts up himself, imagine me, Gentle spectators, that I now may be In fair Bohemia; and remember well, I mention'd a son o' the king's, which Florizel I now name to you; and with speed so pace To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace Equal with wondering; What of her enues, I list not prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known, when 'tis brought forth:—a shepherd's daughter.
And what to her adheres, which follows after, is 'th argument of Time. Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now:
If never, yet that Time himself doth say,
He wishes earnestly you never may.

SCENE I. The Same. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Polixenes.
I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee any thing, a death to grant this.

Camillo.
It is fifteen years, since I saw my country: though I have, for the most part, been ailed abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, which is another spur to my departure.

Polixenes.
As thou lov'st me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now. The need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made: better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee. Thou, having made me businesses, which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot) to be more thankful to thee shall be my duty, my master, and my profit that for me to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, which is another spur to my departure. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, pr'ythee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen, and children, are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.

Camillo.
Sir, it is three days, since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown; but I have missingly noted, he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Polixenes.
I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removedness: from whom I have this intelligence; that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Camillo.
I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, than can be thought to begin from such a cottage estate.

Polixenes.
That's likewise part of my intelligence, but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will, not appearing what we are, have some course, and teach Florizel; for whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Camillo.
I willingly obey your command.

Polixenes.
My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The Same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,—
With, height! the dozy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,—
With, height! the sweet birds, C, how they sing!

Doth set my priggling tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The bark, that erra-lira chants,— Say, With, height! with height! the thrush and the Arc summer songs for me and my aunts;
While we, with running in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear?
The pale moon shines by night;
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the son-skin budget,
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me, Autolycus; who, being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With dils, and drait, I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the sly cheat. Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway: beating, and hanging, are terrors to me: for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it.—A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clown.
Let me see;—Every 'leven wether tods; every tod yields—pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn,—what comes the wool to?

Autolycus.
If the springe hold, the cock's mine.

Clown.
I cannot do without counters.—Let me see; what I am to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? "Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice".—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shepherds; three-man song-men all, and very good ones, but they are most of them means and bases: but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden pies; mace,—dates,—none; that's out of my note: "nutmegs, seven: a race or two of ginger;" but that I may beg:"—four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun.

Autolycus.
O, that ever I was born!

"Groveling on the ground.

Clown."
I' the name of me! —

Autolycus.

O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags, and then, death, death!

Clown.

Alack, poor soul! you need not more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Autolycus.

O, sir! the loathsome ness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clown.

Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Autolycus.

I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel 't an me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clown.

What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Autolycus.

A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.

Clown.

Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horse-man's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come; lend me thy hand.

[Helping him up.]

Autolycus.

O! good sir, tenderly, O!

Clown.

Alas, poor soul!

Autolycus.

O, good sir! softly, good sir. I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clown.

How now? canst stand?

Autolycus.

Softly, dear sir; [Picks his pocket.]: good sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

Clown.

Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Autolycus.

No, good, sweet sir: no. I beseech you, sir. I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or any thing I want. Offer me no money, I pray you: that kills my heart.

Clown.

What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Autolycus.

A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with trol-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clown.

His vices, you would say: there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there, and yet it will no more but abide.

Autolycus.

Vices I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he compassed a motion of the prodigal son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clown.

Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Autolycus.

Very true, sir; he, sir, he: that's the rogue, that put me into this apparel.

Clown.

Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

Autolycus.

I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clown.

How do you now?

Autolycus.

Sweet sir, much better than I was: I can stand, and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clown.

Shall I bring thee on the way?

Autolycus.

No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clown.

Then fare thee well. I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

Autolycus.

Prosper you, sweet sir! — [Exit Clown.]

Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your splice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hunt the stile-a;
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your and tires in a mile-a. — [Exit.]

SCENE III. The same. A Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter Florizel and Perdita.

Florizel.

These, your unusual weeds, to each part of Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora Peering in April's front. This, your sheep Is as a meeting of the petty gods, [shearing, And you the queen on.'

Perdita.

Sir, my gracious lord, To chide at your extremes it not becomes me: O! pardon, that I name them: your high self, The gracious mark o' the land, you have ob-scur'd [maid, With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts In every mess have folly, and the seeders Digest it with a custom, I should blush To see you so attired, sworn, I think, To show myself a glass.

Florizel.

I bless the time, When my good falcon made her flight across Thy father's ground.

Perdita.

Now, Jove afford you cause! To me the difference forges dread; [ble Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I trem- To
To think, your father, by some accident, should pass this way, as you desire. O, the fate! How would he look, to see his work, so noble, vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how should I, in these my borrow'd flaults, behold The sternness of his presence?

Florizel.

Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, humbling their deities to love, have taken The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter became a bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune a ram, and bleated; and the fire-rod's god, Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain, as I seem now. Their transformations were never for a piece of beauty rarer, nor in a way so chaste: since my desires run not before mine honour, nor my lusts burn hotter than my faith.

Perdita.

O! but, sir, your resolution cannot hold when 'tis [king, Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the One of these two must be necessaries, Which then will speak — that you must change Or I my life.

Florizel.

Thou dearest Perdita, [not With these forc'd thoughts, I pr'ythee, darken The mirth o' the feast: or I'll be thine, my fair, Or not my father's; for I cannot be, Mine own, nor any thing to any, if I be not thine: to this I am most constant, Though destiny say, no. Be not my gait Strangle such thoughts as these with any thing That you behold the while. Your guests are coming: Lift up your countenance, as it were the day Of dedication of that capital, which We two have sworn shall come.

Perdita.

O, lady fortune, Stand you auspicious.

Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo, disguised; Clown, Nops, Dorcas, and others. Shepherds.

See, your guests approach: Address yourself to entertain them sprightly, And let's be red with mirth.

Shepherd.

Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon This day she was both pantier, butter, cook; Both dame and servant; welcome'd all; serv'd all; [here, Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now At upper end o' the table, now, 'tis the middle; On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire, [it, With labour, and the thing she took to quench She would to each slip. You are retir'd, As if you were a feasted one, and not The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid These unknown friends to 's welcome; for it is A way to make us better friends, more known. Come; quench your blushes, and present your- [on, self That which you are, mistress o' the feast: come And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing, As your good flock shall prosper.

Perdita. [To Polixenes.]

Sir, welcome, It is my father's will, I should take on me The hostess-ship o' the day:—[To Camillo.] You're welcome, sir.—[sirs, Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend For you there's rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming and savour all the winter long: Grace, and remembrance, be to you both, And welcome to our shearing!

Polixenes.

Shepherdess, (A fair one are you) well you fit our ages With flowers of winter.

Perdita. Sir, the year growing ancient,— Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers of the season Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyflowers, Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not To get slips of them.

Polixenes.

Wherefore, gentle maiden, Do you neglect them?

Perdita. For I have heard it said, There is an art which, in their Piedness, shares With great creating nature.

Polixenes. Say, there be; Yet nature is made better by no mean, But nature makes that mean: so, o'er that art, Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we A gentle scion to the wildest stock, [marry And make conceive a bark of baser kind By bud of nobler race: this is an art [but But which does mend nature,—change it rather; The art itself is nature.

Perdita. So it is.

Polixenes.

Then make your garden rich in gillyflowers, And do not call them bastards.

Perdita. I'll not put The dibble in earth to set one slip of them: No more than, were I painted, I would wish This youth should say, 'twere well, and only therefore Desire to breed by me. —Here's flowers for Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram; [you; The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun, And with him rises weeping: these are flowers Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given To men of middle age. You are very welcome.

Camillo.

I should leave grazing, were I of your flock, And only live by gazing.

Perdita. Out, alas! You'd be so lean, that blasts of January Would blow you through and through.—Now my fair' st friend, [might I would, I had some flowers o' the spring, that Become your time of day; and yours, and yours, That wear upon your virgin branches yet. Your maidenheads growing,—O Proserpina! For the flowers now, that, that, frightened, thou let'st From Dis's waggon I daffodills, [fall That come before the swallow dares, and take The winds of March with beauty, violet dim, But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes, Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses, That
That die unmarried ere they can behold
Bright Phæbus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maid's; bold oxlips, and
The crown- imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O! these I lack,
To make you garlands of, and, my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Florizel.

What I like a corse?

Perdita.

No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on,
Not like a corse; or if,—not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers.
Methinks, I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun-pastorals: sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Florizel.

What you do (sweet,
Still better's what is done. When you speak,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
You Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crows what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Perdita.

O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which peeps fairly through
It,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Florizel.

I think, you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.—But, come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Perdita.

I'll swear for'em.

Polixenes.

This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or seems,
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Camillo.

He tells her something,
That makes her blood look on't. Good sooth,
The queen of curds and cream. [she is

Clown.

Come on, strike up.

Dorcas.

Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlick,
To mend her kissing with.—

Mopsa.

Now, in good time—

Clown.

Not a word, a word: we stand upon our manners.—
Come, strike up. [Music.

[Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Polixenes.

Pray, good shepherd, what fair swan is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Shepherd.

They call him Doricles; and boasts himself.

To have a worthy feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth. He says, he loves my

I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Polixenes.

She dances fealty.

Shepherd.

So she does any thing, though I report it,
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Servant.

O master! if you did but hear the pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clown.

He could never come better: he shall come in.
I love a ballad but even too well; if it be doleful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Servant.

He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes: no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves. He has the prettiest love-songs for maids; so without bawdry, which is strange with such delicate burdens of " diklos" and "fading," "jump her and thump her;" and where some stretch'd-mouth'd rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer,
"Whoop, do me no harm, good man;" puts him off, slight's him with "Whoop, do me no harm, good man."

Polixenes.

This is a brave fellow.

Clown.

Believe me, thou talk'st of an admirable-conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

Servant.

He hath ribands of all the colours i' the rainbow; points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inkies, caddisses, cambries, lawns: why, he sings them over, as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smell were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the square on't.

Clown.

Pr'ythee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Perdita.

Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes.

Clown.

You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

Perdita.

Ay, good brother, or go about to think.
Autolycus.

Here's another bland, of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her. The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dorcas.

It is true too, think you?

Autolycus.

Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clown.

Lay it by too: another.

Autolycus.

This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mopsa.

Let's have some merry ones.

Autolycus.

Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of, "Two maids wooing a man." There's scarce a maid westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mopsa.

We can both sing it: if thou'lt hear a part, thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dorcas.

We had the tune 'nt a month ago.

Autolycus.

I can bear my part; you must know, 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

Song.

Autolycus.

Get you hence, for I must go; Where it fits not you to know.

Dorcas.

Whither?

Mopsa.

O! whither?

Dorcas.

Whither?

Mopsa.

It becomes thy oath, full well,

Thou to me thy secrets tell.

Dorcas.

Me too: let me go thither.

Mopsa.

Or thou go'st to the grange, or mill;

Dorcas.

If to either, thou dost ti.

Autolycus.

Neither.

Dorcas.

What, neither?

Autolycus.

Neither.

Dorcas.

Thou hast sworn my love to be;

Mopsa.

Thou hast sworn it more to me: Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

Clown.

We'll have this song out anon by ourselves. My father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both. Pedler, let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

Autolycus.

And you shall pay well for 'em. [Aside.] Will you buy any tape, Or lace for your cape, My dainty duck, my dear-a? Any silk, any thread, Any toys for your head, Of the newest, and finest, wear-a? Come to the pedler; Money's a medler, That doth uther all men's ware-a.

[Exeunt Clown, Autolycus, Dorcas, and Mopsa.

Enter a Servant.

Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all more of hair: they call themselves saltiers; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't; but they themselves are of the mind, (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shepherd.

Away I'll none on't: here has been too much homely foolery already. — I know, sir, we weary you.

Polixenes.

You weary those that refresh us. Pray, let's see these three threes of herdsmen.

Servant.

One of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.

Shepherd.

Leave your prating. Since these good men are pleased, let them come in: but quickly now.

Servant.

Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.

Re-enter Servant, with twelve Rustics habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exit.

Polixenes.

O father! you'll know more of that hereafter.
Is it not too far gone? — 'Tis time to part them He's simple, and tells much. How now, fair
shepherd?
Your heart is full of something, that does take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young.
And handed love as you do, I was wont
To load my she with knacks: I would have ran sack'd
The pedler's silk treasury, and have pour'd it
To her acceptance; you have let him go,
And nothing marted with him. If your lass Interpretation should abuse, and call this
Your lack of love, or bounty, you were straited
For reply, at least, if you make a care
Of happy holding her.

Florizel.

Old sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are.
The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and loot'd.
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not deliver'd. — O! I hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow, that's
By the northern blasts twice o'er. [boiled

Polixenes.

What follows this? —
How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand, was fair before! — I have put you
But, to your protestation: let me hear [out.—
What you profess.

Florizel.

Do, and be witness to't.

Polixenes.

And this my neighbour too?

Florizel.

And he, and more
Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and
all;

That were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve; had force, and knowledge,
[them,
More than was ever man's, I would not prize
Without her love: for her employ them all,
Commend them, and condemn them to her ser-
Or to their own perdition.

Polixenes.

Fairly offer'd.

Camillo.

This shows a sound affection.

Shepherd.

But, my daughter,
Say you the-like to him?

Perdita.

I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shepherd.

Take hands; — a bargain: —
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't. I give my daughter to him, and will make Her portion equal his.

Florizel.

O! that must be
I the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder. But, come on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shepherd.

Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.

Polixenes.

Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you.

Have you a father?

Florizel.

I have; but what of him?

Polixenes.

Knows he of this?

Florizel.

He neither does, nor shall.

Polixenes.

Methinks, a father
Is at the nuptial of his son a guest [more:
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? Is he not stupid [hear?
With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? and again, does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Florizel.

No, good sir;
He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Polixenes.

By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unphilial. Reason, my son [reason,
Should choose himself a wife: but as good
The father, (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Florizel.

I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint.
My father of this business.

Polixenes.
Polixenes. Let him know't.

Florizel.

He shall not.

Polixenes. Pry'thee, let him.

Florizel.

No, he must not.

Shepherd. Let him, my son: he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

Florizel. Come, come, he must not.—

Mark our contract.

Polixenes. Mark your divorce, young sir,

[Discovering himself]

Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd. Thou a scep'tre's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheep-hook! — Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that by hanging thee I can [piece
But shorten thy life one week. — And thou fresh
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal fool thou copst with —

Shepherd. O, my heart!

Polixenes. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made
More homely than thy state. — For thee, fond
If I may ever know, thou dost but sigh, [boy,
That thou no more shalt never see this knack, as never
I mean thou shalt) we'll bar thee from success-
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin,
Far than Desecration off: — mark thou my words.
Follow us to the court. — Thou, churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. — And you, enchantment,
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,— if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to.'

[Exit.

Perdita. Even here undone!

I was not much afeard; for once, or twice,
I was about to speak, and tell him plainly,
The selfsame sun that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike. — Will you please you, sir, be gone?

I told you, what was come of this. Beseech
you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,
Being now awake, I'll queen it no much farther,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Camillo. Why, how now, father?

Shepherd

I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. — O, sir!

You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,

To lie close by his honest bones: but now,
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels in dust. — O cursed wretch!

That knew'st this was the prince, and would adventure
To mingle fate with him. — Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire.

[Exit.

Florizel. Why look you so upon me? —
I am but sorry, not afraid; delay'd, But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am:
More straining on, for buckling back; not
My leash unwillingly.

[Following

Camillo. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech, (which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him) and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.

Florizel. I not purpose it.

Camillo. Even he, my lord.

Perdita. How often have I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'were known?

Florizel. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith; and then,
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth togeth-[looks: —
And mar the seeds within! — Lift up thy
From my succession wipe me, father; I Am heir to my affection.

Camillo. Be advis'd.

Florizel. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Camillo. This is desperate, sir.

Florizel. So call it; but it does fulfill my vow:
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be threat't glean'd; for all the sun sees, or
The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathom's, will I break my oath
To this my fair belov'd. Therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion: let myself and fortune,
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver. — I am put to sea.
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to her need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Camillo. O, my lord! —

I would
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Florizel.

Hark, Perdita.—

[To Camillo.] I'll hear you by and by.

Camillo.

He's irremovable;
Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn;
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Florizel.

Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leave out ceremony.

[Going.

Camillo.

Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, I 'tis love
That I have borne your father?

Florizel.

Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music,
To speak your deeds; not little of his care
To have them recompens'd, as thought on.

Camillo.

Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king, [is
And, through him, what's nearest to him, which
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction,
(If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration) on mine honour
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by,
As heavens forefend, your ruin) marry her;
And (with my best endeavours in your absence)
Your discontenting father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.

Florizel.

How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done,
That I may call thee something more than man,
And, after that, trust to thee.

Camillo.

If I have thought on
A place wheroeto you'll go?

Florizel.

Not any yet;
But as th' unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and files
Of every wind that blows.

Camillo.

Then list to me:
This follows:—if you will not change your pur-
But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia, [pose
And there present yourself, and your fair princess,
(For so, I see, she must be) fore Leonatus:
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see
Leonatus, opening his free arms, and weeping
His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness,
As 'twere i' the father's person; kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: th' one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than thought, or time.

Florizel.

Worthy Camillo,

What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

Camillo.

Sent by the king, your father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known buttwixt us three, I'll write you
down:
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say, that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

Florizel.

I am bound to you.

There is some sap in this.

Camillo.

A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves [certain,
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores; most
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But, as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loth to be. Besides, you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of love, [gather,
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart to-Affliction alters.

Perdita.

One of these is true:
I think, affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

Camillo.

Yea, say you so?
There shall not, at your father's house, these
Be born another such. [seven years

Florizel.

My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding, as
She is i' the rear our birth.

Camillo.

I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Perdita.

Your pardon, sir; for this
I'll blush you thanks.

Florizel.

Your prettiest Perdita.—
But, O, the thorns we stand upon!— Camillo,
Preserver of my father, now of me.
The medicine of our house, how shall we do?
We are not furnished like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia—

Camillo.

My lord, [tunes
Fear none of this. I think, you know, my for-
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if [sir,
The scene you play were mine. For Instance,
That you may know you shall not want,—one word.
[They talk aside.

Enter Autolycus.

Autolycus.

Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeited stone, not a riband, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-rug, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction
THE WINTER’S TALE. 373

Benediction to the buyer: by which means, I saw whose purse was best in picture, and what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches’ song, that he would not stir his petticoats, till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a picket, it was senseless; ’twas nothing to geld a copiece of a purse: I would have filed keys off, that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir’s song, and admiring the nothing of it; so that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses, and had not the old man come in with a whoo-bub against his daughter and the king’s son, and scared my thoughts from the chalk, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

[Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita, come forward.

Camillo.

Nay, but my letters, by this means being there So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Florizel.

And those that you’ll acquire from king Leontes? Camillo.

Shall satisfy your father. Perdita.

Happy be you! All that you speak shows fair.

Camillo.

Whom have we here?—[Seeing Autolycus.

We’ll make an instrument of this: omit Nothing may give us aid.

Autolycus.

If they have overheard me now,—why hanging.

Camillo.

How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man; here’s no harm intended to thee.

Autolycus.

I am a poor fellow, sir.

Camillo.

Why, be so still; here’s nobody will steal that from thee: yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange: therefore, discourse thee instantly, (thou must think, there’s a necessity in’t) and change garments with this gentleman. Though the pennypworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there’s some boot.

Autolycus.

I am a poor fellow, sir.—[Aside.] I know ye well enough. Camillo.

Nay, pr’ythee, dispatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.

Autolycus.

Are you in earnest, sir?—[Aside.] I smell the trick of it.

Florizel.

Dispatch, I pr’ythee. Autolycus.

Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Camillo.

Unbuckle, unbuckle. [Florizel and Autolycus exchange garments Fortunate mistress, (let my prophecy

Come home to you! you must retire yourself into some covert; take your sweetheart’s hat, and pluck it o’er your brows; muzzle your Dismantle you, and as you can, dislik’en [face; The truth of your own seeming, that you may, (For I do fear eyes ever) to ship-board Get undescribed. Perdita.

I see, the play so lies, That I must bear a part. Camillo.

No remedy. — Have you done there? Florizel.

Should I now meet my father, He would not call me son. Camillo.

Nay, you shall have no hat. — Come lady, come.— Farewell, my friend.

Autolycus.

Adieu, sir.

Florizel.

O Perdita! what have we twain forgot? Pray you, a word. [They converse apart.

Camillo.

What I do next shall be to tell the king Of this escape, and whither they are bound; Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail, To force him after: in whose company I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight I have a woman’s longing.

Florizel.

Fortune speed us! — Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Camillo.

The swifter speed, the better. [Exit Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.

Autolycus.

I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! I what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year conclave at us, and we may do any thing exemplifies. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do’ : I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I constant to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside: here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane’s end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Clown.

See, see, what a man you are now! There is no other way, but to tell the king she’s a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood. Shepherd.

Nay, but hear me. Clown.

Nay, but hear me. Shepherd.

Go to them. Clown.

She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him.
Shepherd.

I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clown.

Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Autolycus. [Aside.

Very wisely, peddling.

Shepherd.

Well, let us to the king: there is that in this fardel will make him scratch his beard.

Autolycus. [Aside.

I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clown.

Pray heartily he be at palace.

Autolycus. [Aside.

Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance; let me wrestle up my peddler's excrement. [Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustles! whither are you bound?

Shepherd.

To the palace, an it like your worship.

Autolycus.

Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known? discover.

Clown.

We are but plain fellows, sir,

Autolycus.

A lie; you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbling steel: therefore, they do not give us the lie.

Clown.

Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shepherd.

Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

Autolycus.

Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these unfoldings? hast not my gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect not on thy baseness court-contempt? Thinkst thou, for that I insinuate or touze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-piece; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon, I command thee to open thy affair.

Shepherd.

My business, sir, is to the king.

Autolycus.

What advocate hast thou to him?

Shepherd.

I know not, an't like you.

Clown.

Advocate's the court word for a pheasant: say, you have none.
I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clown.

He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember, stoned, and flayed alive!

That shepherd.

An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Autolycus.

After I have done what I promised?

Shepherd.

Well, give me the moiety.—Are you a party in this business?

Clown.

In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Autolycus.

O! that's the case of the shepherd's son.—Hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clown.

Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know, 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn, till it be brought you.

Autolycus.

I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side: go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, and follow you. Clown.

We are blessed in this man, as I may say even blessed.

Shepherd.

Let's before, as you bids us. He was prorided to do us good.

If I had a mind to be honest, I see, fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion—gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to't. To him will I present them: there may be matter in it.

ACT V.

SCENE I. Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes.

Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, and others.

Cleomenes.

Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd

A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make,
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down [Last,
More penitence than done trespass. At the Do,
As the heavens have done, forget your evil;
With them, forgive yourself.

Leontes.

Whilst I remember
Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself; which was so much,
That heless it hath made my kingdom, and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that o'er man
Bred his hopes out of: true.

Paulina.

Too true, my lord;
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good,
To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd
Would be unparallel'd.

Leontes.

I think so. Kill'd! She I kill'd? I did so; but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did: it is as bitter [now,
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good
Say so but seldom.

Cleomenes.

Not at all, good lady: I would
You might have spoken a thousand things that Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindness better.

Paulina.

You are one of those,
Would have him wed again.

Dion.

If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign name; consider little,
What dangers, by his highness' fall of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Incurious lookers on: what were more holy,
Than to rejoice the former queen is well?
What holier than, for royalty's repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to't?

Paulina.

There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes;
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is't not the kenour of his oracle,
That king Leontes shall not have an heir,
Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonus to break his grave,
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. "Tis your counsel,
My lord should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.—Care not for issue;
The crown will find an heir: Great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest, so his successor
Was like to be the best.

Leontes.

Good Paulina,—Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honour,—O, that ever I
[now,
Had squar'd me to thy counsel!—then, even
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paulina.

And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.

Leontes.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT V. Sc. 1.

Leontes. Thou speak'st truth. [worse, No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit Again possess her corpse; and, on this stage, (Where we offenders now appear) soul-vex'd, Begin, "And why to me?" Paulina. Had she such power, She had just cause. Leontes. She had; and would incense me To murder her I married. Paulina. I should so: Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't You chose her? then I'd shriek, that even your ears [low'd Should rift to hear me, and the words that fol- Should be, "Remember mine."] Leontes. Stars, stars! And all eyes else dead coals.—Fear thou no I'll have no wife, Paulina. [wife ;

Paulina. Will you swear Never to marry, but by my free leave? Leontes. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit! Paulina. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath. Cleomenes. You tempt him over-much. Paulina. Unless another, As like Hermione as is her picture, Affront his eye. Cleomenes. Good madam,—I have done. Paulina. Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir, No remedy, but you will—give me the office To choose you a queen. She shall not be so young As was your former; but she shall be such As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should To see her in your arms. [take joy Leontes. My true Paulina, We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us. Paulina. That Shall be when your first queen's again in breath: Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman. Gentleman. One that gives itself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access To your high presence. Leontes. What with him? he comes not Like to his father's greatness; his approach, So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us 'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd By need, and accident. What train? Gentleman. But few, And those but mean.

(He

(He bade me say so) more than all the sceptres, And those that bear them, living.

Leontes.

O, my brother! Good gentleman, the wrongs I have done thee Ashen within me; and these thy offices, [sit! So rarely kind, are as interpreters Of my behind-hand slackness.—Welcome hither, As is the spring to the earth. And hath he, too, Exposé'd this paragon to the fearful usage (At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune, To greet a man not worth her pains, much less Th' adventure of her person?

Fiorzel. Good my lord,

She came from Libya.

Leontes. That noble, honour'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?

Fiorzel. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly) we have cross'd.

To execute the charge my father gave me, For visiting thy highness. My best train I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd, Who for Bohemia bend, to signify, Not only my success in Libya, sir, But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety Here, where we are.

Leontes. The blessed gods Purge all infection from our air, whilst you Do climate her! You have a holy father, A graceful gentleman, against whose person, So sacred as it is, I have done sin;

For which the heavens, taking angry note, Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd, (As he from heaven merits it) with you, Worthy his goodness. What might I have been, Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on, Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir, That which I shall report will bear no credit. Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great Bohemia greets you from himself by me; [sir, Desires you to attach his son, who has (His dignity and duty both cast off) Fleed from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Lord. Here in your city; I came now from him: I speak amazedly, and it becomes My marvel, and my message. To your court While he was hastening (in the chase, it seems, Of this fair couple) meets he on the way The father of this seeming lady, and Her brother, having both their country quitted With this young prince.

Fiorzel. Camillo has betray'd me, Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now, Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay'st su to his charge: He's with the king your father.

Leontes. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo, sir: I spake with him, who now Has these poor men in question. Never saw I Wretches so quakes: they kneel, they kiss the earth, Forswear themselves as often as they speak: Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them With divers deaths in death.

Perdita. O, my poor father!— The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have Our contract celebrated.

Leontes. You are married?

Fiorzel. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be; The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first: The odds for high and low's alike.

Leontes. My lord, Is this the daughter of a king?

Fiorzel. She is,

When once she is my wife.

Leontes. That once, I see, by your good father's speed, Will come on very slowly. I am sorry, Most sorry, you have broken from his liking, Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry, Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty, That you might well enjoy her.

Fiorzel. Dear, look up:

Though fortune, visible an enemy, Should chase us with my father, power no jot Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir, Remember since you ow'd no more to time Than I do now; with thought of such affections, Step forth mine advocate: at your request, My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leontes. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress, Which he counts but a trifle.

Paulina. Sir, my liege,

Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month Fore your queen died, she was more worth Than what you look on now. [such gazes

Leontes. I thought of her, Even in these looks I made.—But your petition [To Fiorzel. Is yet unanswered. I will to your father: Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires, I am a friend to them, and you; upon which errand I now go toward him. Therefore, follow me, And mark what way I make. Come, good my lord [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Autolycus. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

First Gentleman. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazement, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only only this, methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Autolycus.
I would most gladly know the issue of it.

First Gentleman.
I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the king, and Camillo, were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with strangling on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked, as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the importance were joy, or sorrow, but in the extremity of the one it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes a gentleman, that, haply, knows more. The news, Roger?

Second Gentleman.
Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter a third Gentleman.
Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir? this news, which is called true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir?

Third Gentleman.
Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione,—her jewel about the neck of it;—the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character;—the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother;—the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding, and many other evidences, proclaim her with all certainty to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

Second Gentleman.
No.

Third Gentleman.
Then you have lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have b—held one joy crown another; so, and in such manner, that, it seemed, sorrow went to take leave of them, for their joy waived in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, "O, thy mother, thy mother!" then asks Bohemtia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-bitten conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.

Second Gentleman.
What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

Third Gentleman.
Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief, and rings of his that Paulina knew.

First Gentleman.
What became of his bark, and his followers?

Third Gentleman.
Wrecked, the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments, which aided to expose the child, were even then lost, when it was found. But, O! the noble combat, that 'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

First Gentleman.
The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such it acted.

Third Gentleman.
One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught the writer, though not the fault) was, when at the relative loss of the queen's death, (with the manner how she came to't, bravely confessed, and lamented by the king) how attentiveness wounded his daughter; till, from one sign of doleful to another, she did, with an alms! I would fain say, bled tears, for, I am sure, my heart went blood. Who was most marble there changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal.

First Gentleman.
Are they returned to the court?

Third Gentleman.
No: the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself eternity and could put breath in his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope to answer. To thither with all greediness of affection, are they gone, and there they intend to stay.

Second Gentleman.
I thought, she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoiceing?

First Gentleman.
Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born; our absence makes us unthy to our knowledge. Let's along.

[Exeunt Gentleman.

Autolycus.
Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, I would preface drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardele, and I know not what; but he at that time, over fond of the shepherd's daughter, (so then he took her to his heart,) and I made myself over light, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder out WINTER'S TALE.

Act 5. Sc. 3
out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discords.

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Shepherd.

Come, boy: I am past more children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clown.

You are well met, sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say, you see them not, and think me still no gentleman born; you were best say, these robes are not gentleman born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Autolycus.

I know, you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

Clown.

Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shepherd.

And so have I, boy.

Clown.

So you have;—but I was a gentleman born before my father, for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me, brother; and then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shepherd.

We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clown.

Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so posteroestate as we are.

Autolycus.

I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shepherd.

Pr'ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clown.

Thou wilt amend thy life?

Autolycus.

Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clown.

Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shepherd.

You may say it, but not swear it.

Clown.

Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shepherd.

How if it be false, son?

Clown.

If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend:—And I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it, and I would thou would'st be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Autolycus.

I will prove so, sir, to my power.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT V. SC. III.

Perdita.
And give me leave,
And do not say 'tis superstition, that
I kneel, and then implore her blessing.—Lady,
Dear queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

Paulina.
The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's
Not dry.

Camillo.
My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on,
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away,
So many summers dry: scarce any joy
Did ever so long live: no sorrow,
But kill'd itself much sooner.

Polixenes.
Dear brother, let him that was the cause of this have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he Will piece up in himself.

Paulina.
Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought, the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is I'd not have show'd it.) [mine]

Leontes.
Do not draw the curtain.

Perdita.
No longer shall you gaze on't, lest your fancy
May think anon it moves.

Leontes.
Let be, let be!
Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already—
What was he that did make it?—See, my lord,
Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those Did verily bear blood? [veins

Polixenes.
Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leontes.
The fixture of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with art.

Paulina.
I'll draw the curtain.

Leontes.
O, sweet Paulina! Make me to think so twenty years together:
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let it alone.

Paulina.
I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you;
I could afflict you farther. [but

Leontes.
Do, Paulina,
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock
For I will kiss her. [me,

Paulina.
Good my lord, forbear.
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet:
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

Leontes.
No, not these twenty years.

Perdita.
I am so long could I
Stand by, a looker on.

Paulina.
Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue more indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked powers.

Leontes.
What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paulina.
It is requir'd,
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still.
On, those that think it is unlawful business
I am about; let them depart.

Leontes.
No foot shall stir.

Paulina.
Music awake her. Strike!—[Music.
'Tis time; descend; be stone more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you.—You perceive, she stirs.
[Hermondes descends from the pedestal.
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again, for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand;
When was she young you woor'd her; now, in
Is she become the auctor? [age,

Leontes.
O! she's warm. [embracing her.
If this be magic, let it be an art.
Lawful as eating.

Polixenes.
She embraces him.

Camillo.
She hangs about his neck.
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Polixenes.
Ay; and make it manifest where she has liv'd,
Or how stol'n from the dead?

Paulina.
That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.

Please you to interpose, fair madam: kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good
Our Perdita is found. [lady,

[Perdita kneels to Hermione.

Hermione.
You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head!—Tell me, mine own, Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd? how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear, that I,
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
Myself to see the issue.

Paulina.
There's time enough for that,
Lest they desire upon this push to trouble
Your joys with like relation.—Go together,
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
KING JOHN

Arthur, Duke of Bretagne.
William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke.
Geffrey Fitz-Peter, Earl of Essex.
William Longavard, Earl of Salisbury.
Robert Bigot, Earl of Norfolk.
Hubert de Burgh, Chamberlain to the King.
Robert Faulconbridge.
Philip Faulconbridge.
James Gurney, Servant to Lady Faulconbridge.
Peter of Pomfret.
Philip, King of France.
Lewis, the Dauphin.

Philip of Austria.
Cardinal Pandulph, the Pope's Legate.
Melun, a French Lord.
Chatillon, Ambassador from France.
Elinor, Widow of King Henry II.
Constance, Mother to Arthur.
Blanch, Daughter to Alphonsus, King of Castile.
Lady Faulconbridge.
Lords, Ladies, Citizens of Angiers, Sheriffs, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE, sometimes in England and sometimes in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.
Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, and others, with Chatillon.

Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France, in my behaviour, to the majesty, the borrow'd majesty, of England here.

A strange beginning!—borrow'd majesty?

Silence, good mother: hear the embassy.

And take her by the hand, whose worth, and is richly noted, and here justified [honesty, by us, a pair of kings.—Let's from this place.—What!—Look upon my brother:—both your pardons,

That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion.—This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, (whom heavens directing)
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina, Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of time, since first
We were disserver'd. Haste! lead away.

[Exeunt.

KING JOHN.

Will wing me to some whither'd bough, and there
My mate, that's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

Listen.

Peace, Paulina!
The husband take by my consent,
As by thine, a wife: this is a match,
And made between's by vows. Thou hast found mine:

But how is to question'd, for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have in vain said many
A prayer upon her grave: I'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband.—Come, Camillo,

ARCHDUKE OF AUSTRIA.
CARDINAL PALMULPH, THE POPE'S LEGATE.
MELUN, A FRENCH LORD.
CHATILLON, AMBASSADOR FROM FRANCE.
ELINOR, WIFE TO KING HENRY II.
CONSTANCE, MOTHER TO ARTHUR.
BLANCH, DAUGHTER TO ALPHONSO, KING OF CASTILE.
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE.

LORDS, LADIES, CITIZENS OF ANGERS, SHERIFFS, HERALDS, OFFICERS, SOLDIERS, MESSENGERS, AND ATTENDANTS.

SCENE, sometimes in ENGLAND and sometimes in FRANCE.
Châtillon.
Then take my king's defiance from my mouth, The farthest limit of my embassy.

King John:
Bears mine to him, and so depart in peace. Be thine as lightning in the eyes of France; For ere thou canst report I will be there, The thunder of my cannon shall be heard. So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath, And sullen preface of your own decay.—
An honourable conduct let him have: Pembroke, look to't. Farewell, Châtillon. [Exeunt Châtillon and Pembroke.]

Elinor.
What now, my son? have I not yet said, How that ambitious Constance would not cease, Till she had kindled France, and all the world, Upon the right and party of her son? This might have been prevented, and made whole, With very easy arguments of love, Which now the manage of two kingdoms must With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

King John.
Our strong possession, and our right for us. Elinor.
Your strong possession, much more than your right. Or else it must go wrong with you, and me: So much my conscience whispers in your ear, Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers Essex.

Essex.
My liege, here is the strangest controversy, Come from the country to be judge'd by you, That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men.

King John.
Let them approach.— [Exit Sheriff.]

Re-enter Sheriff, with Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip, his bastard brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Bastard.
Your faithful subject 1; a gentleman Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son, As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge, A soldier, by the honour-giving hand Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

King John.
What art thou?

Robert.
The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

King John.
Is that the elder, and art thou the heir? You came not of one mother, then, it seems?

Bastard.
Most certain of one mother, mighty king; That is well known, and, as I think, one father: But, for the certain knowledge of that truth, I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother: Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Elinor.
Out on thee, rude man! I thou dost shame thy mother, And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Bastard.
I, madam? no, I have no reason for it: That is my brother's plea, and none of me; The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out From at least fair five hundred pound a year.

Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!

King John.
A good blunt fellow.—Why, being younger born Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bastard.
I know not why, except to get the land. But once he slander'd me with bastardy: But 'wher' I be as true begot, or no, That still I lay upon my mother's head; But, that I am as well begot, my liege, (Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!) Compare our faces, and be judge yourself. If old sir Robert did beget us both, And were our father, and this son like him, O! old sir Robert, father, on my knee I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

King John.
Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Elinor.
He hath a trick of Cœur-de-lion's face; The accent of his tongue affecteth him. Do you not read some tokens of my son In the large composition of this man?

King John.
Mime eye hath well examined his parts, And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah, speak; What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bastard.
Because he hath a half-face, like my father, With that half-face would he have all my land: A half-face'd great five hundred pound a year!

Robert.
My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd, Your brother did employ my father much.—

Bastard.
Well, sir; by this you cannot get my land: Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Robert.
And once despatch'd him in an embassy To Germany, there, with the emperor, To treat of high affairs touching that time. The advantage of his absence took the king, And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's; Where he did prevail I shame to speak, But truth is truth: large lengths of seas And between my father and my mother lay, [shores As I have heard my father speak himself, When this same lusty gentleman was got. Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd His lands to me; and took it, on his death, That this, my mother's son, was none of his: And, if he were, he came into the world Full fourteen weeks before the course of time. Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine, My father's land, as was my father's will.

King John.
Sirrah, your brother is legitimate; Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him; And if she did play false, the fault was hers, Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother, Who, as you say, took pains to get this son, Had of your father claim'd this son for his? In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world; In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's, My brother might not claim him, nor your father, Being none of his, refuse him. This concludes.—

My
KING JOHN.

My mother’s son did get your father’s heir; Your father’s heir must have your father’s land.

Shall, then, my father’s will be of no force To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bastard.

Of no more force to dispossess me, sir, Than was his will to get, as I think.

Elinor.

Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge, And like thy brother to enjoy thy land, Or the reputed son of Ceaur-de-lion, Lord of thy presence, and no land beside?

Bastard. Madam, an if my brother had my shape, And I had his, sir Robert his, like him; And if my legs were two such riding-rioles, My arms such eel-skins stuff’d; my face so thin, That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose, Lest men should say, “Look, where three-farthings goes,”

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land, Would I might never sit from off this place, I’d give it every foot to have this face: It would not be sir Nob in any case.

Elinor. I like thee well. Wilt thou forsake thyfortune, Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me? I am a soldier, and now bound to France?

Bastard. Brother, take you my land, I’ll take my chance. Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year, Yet sell your face for five pence, and tis dear.— Madam, I’ll follow you unto the death.

Elinor. Nay, I would have you go before me therewith. Our country manners give our betters way.

King John.

What is thy name?

Bastard. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun; Philip, good old sir Robert’s eldest son.

King John. From henceforth bear his name whose form Is the best;

Kneel thou down Philip, but rise more great; Arise sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bastard. Brother, by the mother’s side, give me your hand: My father gave me honour, yours gave land.— Now blessed be the hour, by night or day, When I was got sir Robert was away.

Elinor. The very spirit of Plantagenet!— I am thy granddaughter, Richard; call me so.

Bastard. Madam, by chance, but not by truth: what something about, a little from the right, In at the window, or else o’er the hatch: Who dare not stir by day, must walk by night, And have is have, however men do catch. Near or far off, well won is still well won, And I am low, how’e’er I was begot.

King John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy desire; A landless knight makes thee a landed ‘squire.— Come, madam, and come, Richard: we must speed. For France, for France, for it is more than need.

Bastard. Brother, adieu! good fortune come to thee, For thou wast got in the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.

A foot of honour better than I was. But many a many foot of land the worse. Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:— “Good den, sir Richard.”—” God-a-mercy, fol- low;”—

And if his name be George, I’ll call him Peter; For new-made honour doth forget men’s names: “Tis too respective, and too sociable, For your conversation. Now your traveller,— He and his tooth-jick at my worship’s mess; And when my knightly stomach is suffic’d, Why then I suck my teeth, and catechize My picked man of countries:—” My dear sir,” Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin, “I shall beseech you”—that is question now; And then comes answer like an absay-book:— “O sir,” says answer, “at your best command: At your employment; at your service, sir:’— “No, sir,” says question, “I see you, sir;— And so, ere answer knows what question would, Saving in dialogue of compliment, And talking of the Alps, and Alpenines, The Pyreneus, and the river Po. It draws toward supper, in conclusion so. But this is worshipful society, And fits the mounting spirit, like myself; For he is but a bastard to the time,

That doth not_smack_at oberwok and: And so am I, whether I smack, or no; And not alone in habit and device, Exterior form, outward accoutrement, But from the inward motion to deliver Sweet, sweet smack upon the other’s tooth: Which, though I will not practise to deceive, Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn, For it shall strew the footstep’s of my rising. — But who comes in such haste, in riding robes? What woman-post is this? hath she no husband, That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

O me! it is my mother. — How now, good lady! What brings you here to court so hastily? Lady Faulconbridge.

Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he, That holds in chase mine honour up and down?

Bastard. My brother Robert? old sir Robert’s son? Colbrant the giant, that same mighty man? Is It sir Robert’s son, that you seek so?

Lady Faulconbridge.

Sir Robert’s son! Ay, thou un reverend boy, Sir Robert’s son: why scorn’st thou at sir Ro. He is sir Robert’s son, and so art thou. [Exit Bastard.

James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a while?

Gurney. Good leave, good Philip. [Exit Bastard.

Philip?— sparrow! —James,

There’s toys abroad: anon I’ll tell thee more. [Exit Gurney.

Madam, I was not old sir Robert’s son: Sir Robert might have eat his part in me. Upon Good-fridays and no’er broke his fast. Sir Robert could do well: marry, to confess, Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it: We know his handy-work. —Therefore, good mother, To whom am I beholding for these limbs? Sir Robert never hoip to make this leg.

Lady
Lady Faulconbridge.

Hast thou conspired with thy brother, too,
That thine own gain should'st defend mine honour? [kneel]

What means this scorn, thou most untoward Bastard.

Knight, knight, good mother,—Basilisco-like,
What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder. But, mother, I am not sir Robert's son; I have disclaim'd sir Robert, and my land; Legitimation, name, and all is gone. Then, good my mother, let me know my father: Some proper man, I hope; who was it, mother?

Lady Faulconbridge.

Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

Bastard.

As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady Faulconbridge.

King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father. By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd To make room for him in my husband's bed.— Heaven I lay not my transgression to my charge, That art the issue of my dear offence, Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bastard.

Now, by this light, were I to get again, Madam, I would not wish a better father. Some sins do bear their privilege on earth, And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly: Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose, Subjected tribute to commanding love, Against whose fury and unmatched force The aweless lion could not wage the fight, Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand, He, that perfere robes lions of their hearts, May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother, With all my heart I thank thee for my father! Who lives, and dares but say thou didst not well When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell. Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin; And they shall say, when Richard me begot, If thou hast'd said him nay, it had been sin: Who says it was, he lies: I say, 'twas not. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of Austria, and Forces: on the other, Philip, King of France, and Forces; Lewis, Constance, Arthur, and Attendants.

Lewis.

BEFORE Angiers well met, brave Austria.— Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood, Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart, And fought the holy wars in Palestine, By this brave duke came early to his grave: And, for amends to his posterity, At our importance hither is he come, To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf; And to rebuke the usurpation Of thy unnatural uncle, English John: Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither

Arthur.

God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death, The rather, that you give his offspring life, Shadowing their right under your wings of war I give you welcome with a powerless hand, But with a heart full of unstained love: Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lewis.

A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Austria.

Upon thy cheque lay this zealous kiss, As seal to this indenture of my love; That to my home I will no more return, Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France, Together with that pale, that white-face'd shore, Where thou hast spurs back the ocean's roaring And coops from other lands her islanders; [tides, Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main, That water-walled bulwark, still secure And confident from foreign purposes, Even till that utmost corner of the west Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy, Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Constance.

Oh take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks, [frestrength, Till your strong hand shall help to give him To make a more requital to your love.

Austria.

The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their In such a just and charitable war. [swords

King Philip.

Well then, to work. Our cannon shall be sent Against the brows of this resisting town: — Call for our chiefest men of discipline, To call the plots of best advantages. We'll lay before this town our royal bones, Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood, But we will make it subject to this boy.

Constance.

Stay for an answer to your embassy, Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood. My lord Chatillon may from England bring That right in peace, which here we urge in war; And then we shall repent each drop of blood, That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chatillon.

King Philip.

A wonder, lady!—lo, upon thy wish, Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd. What England says, says briefly, gentle lord: We coldly pause for thee: Chatillon, speak.

Chatillon.

Then turn your forces from this paltry siege, And stir them up against a mighty task. England, impatient of your just demands, Hath put himself in arms: the adverse winds, Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him To land his legions all as soon as I. [time His marches are expedient to this town; His forces strong, his soldiers confident. With him along is come the mother-queen, An Até stirring him to blood and strife: With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain; With them a bastard of the king's deceas'd, And all th' unsettled honours of the land: Rash, Inconsiderate, flighty, and many volunaries, With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spoons, Have sold their fortunes at their native homes, Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs, To make a hazard of new fortunes here. In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits, Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er, Did never float upon the swelling tide, To do offence and scath in Christendom.

[Drums heard within

The Interruption of their council

KING JOHN.

Cuts off more circumstance: they are at hand,
To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

King Philip.

How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Austria.

By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion;
Let them be welcome, then; we are prepar'd.

Enter King John, Elinor, Blanche, the Bastard, Pembroke, and Forces.

King John.

Peace be to France; if France in peace permit
Our just and lineal entrance to our own:
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven;
Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to heaven.

King Philip.

Peace be to England; if that war return
From France to England, there to live in peace,
England we love; and, for that England's sake,
With burden of our armour here we sweat.
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Outfaced infant state, and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
Look here upon thy brother Jeffry's face:
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Jeffry, and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
That Jeffry was thy elder brother born,
And this his son: England was Jeffry's right,
And this is Jeffry's. In the name of God,
How comes it, then, that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

King John.

From whom hast thou this great commission,
To draw my answer from thy articles? [France.

King Philip.

From that supernal Judge, that stirs good
In any breast of strong authority,
[thoughts To look into the blot and stains of right,
That Judge hath made me guardian to this boy;
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

King John.

Alack! thou dost usurp authority.

King Philip.

Excuse: it is to beat usurping down.

Elinor.

Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Constance.

Let me make answer:—thy usurping son.

Elinor.

Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king,
That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Constance.

My bed was ever to thy son as true,
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father were we.

Than thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.

My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,
His father never was so true begot:
It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

Elinor.

There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.

Constance.

There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Peace!

Bastard.

Hear the crier.

Austria.

What the devil art thou?

Bastard.

One that will play the devil, sir, with you,
An 'a may catch your hide and you alone.
You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat, and I catch you right:
Sirrah, look to't; I faith, I will, I faith.

Blanche.

O! well did he become that lion's robe,
That did disrobe the lion of that robe.

Bastard.

It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass—
But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Austria.

What cracker is this same, that deals our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?

King Philip.

Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.

Lewis.

Women and fools, break off your conference.

King John, this is the very sum of all:
England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee.
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

King John.

My life as soon: I do defy thee, France. —
Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand,
And out of my dear love I'll give thee more,
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Elinor.

Come to thy grandam, child.

Constance.

Do, child, go to it' grandam, child:
Give grandam kingdom, and it' grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:
There's a good grandam.

Arthur.

Good my mother, peace!
I would that I were laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Elinor.

His mother shame him so, poor boy, he weeps.

Constance.

Now shame upon you, whe'r she do, or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's Shames,

Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:
Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be
To do him justice, and revenge on you. [brib'd

Elinor.

Thou monstrous slanderrr of heaven and earth!

Constance.

Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!
Call not me slanderer: thou, and thine, usurps.

Cc
The dominations, royalties, and rights. [son, Of this oppressed boy. This is thy eldest son's Infortunate in nothing but in thee: Thy sins are visited in this poor child; The canon of the law is laid on him, Being but the second generation Removed from thy sin-conceving womb.

King John.

_Bedlam_, have done.

Constance.

I have but this to say,— That he that is not only plagued for her sin, But God hath made her sin and her, the plague On this removed issue, plaguing for her, And with her plague her sin: his injury Her injury the heading to her sin, All punished in the person of this child, And all for her, a plague upon her!

Elinor.

Thou madvised scold, I can produce A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Constance.

Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will! A woman's will: a canker'd grandam's will!

King Philip.

Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate. It ill becomes this presence, to your aim To these ill-tuned repetitions.— Some trumpet summon bither to the walls These men of Angiers: let us hear them speak, Whose title they admit, _Arthur's_ or _John's._

Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.

Citizen.

Who is it, that hath warned us to the walls?

King Philip.

_Tis France, for England._

King John.

England, for itself.

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

King Philip.

You loving men of Angiers, _Arthur's_ subjects, Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

King John.

For our advantage; therefore, bear us first,— These flags of France, that are displayed here Before the eye and prospect of your town, Have hither march'd to your endament: The cannons have their bowels full of wrath, And ready mounted are they, to spit forth Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls; All preparation for a bloody siege, And merciless proceeding by these French, Confirmt your city's eyes, your winking gates; And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones, That as a waist do girdle you about, By the compulsion of their ordnance By this time from their fixed beds of lime Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made For bloody power to rush upon your peace. But, on the sight of us, your lawful king, Who painfully, with much expedient march, Have brought a countercheck before your gates, To save unscrath'd your city's threaten'd cheeks, Behold, the French amazed, unawares a parle; And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire, To make a shaking fever in your walls, They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke, To make a faithless error in your ears: Which trust according, kind citizens, And let us in, your king; whose labour'd spirits, Forwearied in this action of swift speed, Crave harbourage within your city walls.

King Philip.

When I have said, make answer to us both. Lo! in this right hand, whose protection Is most divinely vow'd upon the right. Of him it holds, stands young _Plantagenet_, Son to the elder brother of this man, And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys. For this down-trodden equity, we treat In wardlike march these green fields before your town: Being no farther enemy to you, Than the constraint of hospitable zeal, In the relief of this oppressed child, Religiously provokes. Be pleased, then, To pay that duty, which you truly owe, To him that owes it, namely, this young prince; And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear, Save in aspect, have all offense seal'd up; Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent Against th' invulnerable clouds of heaven; And with a blessed and unvex'd retire, With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruised, We will bear home that lusty blood again, Which here we came to spout against your town, And leave your children, wives, and you, In peace.

But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer, 'Tis not the roundtide of your old-fac'd walls Can hide you from our messengers of war, Though all these English, and their discipline, Were harbour'd in their rude circumference. Then, tell us; shall your city call us lord, In that behalf which we have challeng'd it, Or shall we give the signal to our rage, And stalk in blood to our possession?

Citizen.

In brief, we are the king of England's subjects. For him, and in his right, we hold this town.

King John.

Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

Citizen.

That can we not; but he that proves the king, To him will we prove loyal; till that time, Have we remitt'd our gates against the world.

King John.

Dost not the crown of England prove the And, if not that, I bring you witnesses, [king? Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed, —

Bastard.

Bastards, and else.

King John.

To verify our title with their lives.

King Philip.

As many, and as well-born bloods as those,—

Bastard.

Some bastards too.

King Philip.

Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

Citizen.

Till you compound whose right is worthiest, We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

King John.

Then God forgive the sin of all those souls, That to their everlasting residence Before the dew of evening fall shall fleet, In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

King Philip.

Amen, Amen. — Mount, chevaliers! to arms! -

Bastard.

S. George, that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since,

_Sits._
KING JOHN.

ACT II. SC. II.

Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence! [To Austria.] Sirrah, were I at home,
at your den, sirrah, with your lonesse,
I would set an ox-head to your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

Austria.

Peace! no more.

Bastard.

O! I tremble, for you bear the lion roar.

King John.

Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth in best appointment all our regiments.

Bastard.

Speed, then, to take advantage of the field.

King Philip.

It shall be so;—[To Lewis] and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand.—God, and our right! [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same.

Alarums and Excursions; then a Retreat.
Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

French Herald.

You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur, duke of Brittany, in.
Who by the hand of France this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother,
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discolor'd earth,
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne, England's king, and yours.

Enter an English Herald, with trumpets.

English Herald.

Rejoice, ye men of Angiers, ring your bells:
King John, your king, and England's, doth appoint
Commander of this hot malicious day. [proach,
Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.
There stuck no plume in any English crest,
That is removed by a staff of France:
Our colours do return in those same hands,
That did display them when we first march'd
And like a jolly troop of huntsmen come [forth;
Our lusty English, all with purple bands,
Dyed in the dying slaughter of their foes.
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Citizen.

Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have an-swer'd blows; [fronted power
Strength match'd with strength, and power con-
Both a like, and both alike we like. [even,
One must prove greatest: while they weigh so
We hold our town for neither, yet for both.

Enter, at one side, King John, with his power,
Elinor, Blanch, and the Bastard; at the other,
King Philip, Lewis, Austria, and Forces.

King John.

France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right roam on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment.
Shall leave his native channel, and o'er-swell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
Unless thou let his silver water keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean.

King Philip.

England, thou hast but said one drop of blood,
In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: and by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom thou dost arms
Or add a royal number to the dead. [we bear,
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bastard.

Ha! majesty, how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire.
O! now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men,
In undetermin'd differences of kings.—
Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
Cry, havoc, kings back to the stained field,
You equal potent, fiery-kindled spirits!
Then let confusion of one part confirm [death!
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and

King John.

Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

King Philip.

Speak, citizens, for England, who's your king?

Citizen.

The king of England, when we know the king.

King Philip.

Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

King John.

In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

Citizen.

A greater power than we denies all this;
And, till he unclench'd, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates,
Kings of our fear; until our fears, resolve'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bastard.

By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you,
And stand securely on their battlements. [kings,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul'd by me;
Do like the multines of Jerusalem,
Be friends awhile, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town.
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon, charged to the mouths,
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawl'd down
The faint shrill of this contemptuous city:
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation.
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, discover your united strengths,
And parle your mingled colours o'er again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;
Then, in a moment, fortune shall call forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy?
KING JOHN.

Now, by the sky that hangs above our heads, I like it well.—France, shall we knit our powers, And lay this Angiers even with the ground, Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bastard.

All as thou hast the mettle of a king, Being wrong’d as we are by this peevish town, Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery, As we will ours, against these saucy walls; And when that we have dash’d them to the ground! Why, then defy each other, and, pell-mell, Make work upon ourselves for heaven, or hell.

King Philip.

Let it be so.—Say, where will you assault?—

King John.

We from the west will send destruction Into this city’s bosom.

Austria.

1 from the north.

King Philip.

Our thunder from the south, Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bastard.

O, prudent discipline! From north to south, Austria and France shoot in each other’s mouth: [Aside.

I’ll stir them to it.—Come, away, away!

Citizen.

Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe a while to stay: [Lecture And shall show you peace, and fair-fac’d Win you this city without stroke, or wound; Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds, That here come sacrifices for the field. Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.

King John.

Speak on, with favour: we are bent to hear.

Citizen.

That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch, Is near to England: look upon the years Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid. If lusty love should go in quest of beauty, Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch? If jealous love should go in search of virtue, Where should he find it purer than in Blanch? If love ambitious sought a match of birth, Whose veins bound richer blood than Blanch? Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth, Is the young Dauphin every way complete: If not complete of, say, he is not she; And she again wants nothing, to name want, If want it be not, that she is not he; He is the half part of a blessed man, Left to be finished by such a she; And she a fair divided excellence, Whose fulness of perfection lies in him. O! two such silver currents, when they join, Do glorify the banks that bound them in; lone, And two such shores to two such streams made Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings, To these two princes, if you marry them. This union shall do more than battery can To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match, With swifter spleen than powder can enforce, The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope, And give you entrance; but, without this match, The sea enraged is not half so deaf, Lions more confident, mountains and rocks More free from motion: no, not death himself In mortal fury half so peremptory, As we to keep this city.

Bastard.

Here’s a stay, That shakes the rotten carcase of old death Out of his rags! Here’s a large mouth, indeed, That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, Trees and a fowling of roaring lions, and seas; As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs. What cannon ear begets this lusty blood? He speaks plain cannon-fire, and smoke, and bompas.

He gives the bastinado with his tongue; Our ears are cudgell’d: not a word of his, But buffets better than a fist of France.

Zounds! I was never so bethump’d with words, Since I first call’d my brother’s father dad.

Elinor.

Son, list to this conjunction; make this match; Give with our niece a dowry large enough, For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie Thy now uns’r’d assurance to the crown, That yond’ green boy shall have no sun to ripe The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit. I see a yielding in the looks of France; Mark, how they whisper: urge them while their Are capable of this combination, [Souls Last rest, now melted by the cloudy breath Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse, Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Citizen.

Why answer not the double majesties This friendly treaty of our threaten’d town?

King Philip.

Speak England first, that hath been forward To speak unto this city: what say you? [first

King John

If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son, Can in this book of beauty read, I love, Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen: For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poitiers, And all that we upon this side the sea [Excuse this city now by us besieg’d] Find liable to our crown and dignity, Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich In titles, honours, and promotions, As she in beauty, education, blood, Holds hand with any princess of the world.

King Philip.

What say’st thou, boy? look in the lady’s face.

Lewis.

I do, my lord; and in her eye I find A wonder, or a wondrous miracle, The shadow of myself form’d in her eye, Which, being but the shadow of your son, Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow. I do protest, I never lov’d myself, Till now infixed I beheld myself Drawn in the flattering table of her eye. [Whispers with Blanch.

Bastard.

Drawn in the flattering table of her eye, Hang’d in the frowning wrinkle of her brow, And quarter’d in her heart, he doth espy Himself love’s traitor: this is pity now, That hang’d, and drawn, and quarter’d, there That should be, In such a love, so vile a lout as he.

Blanch.

My uncle’s will in this respect is mine: If he see aught in you, that makes him like, That any thing he sees, which moves his liking, I can
ACT III. Sc. 1.

I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or if you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Farther I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love;
Thus this,—that nothing do I see in you,
Though churlish thoughts themselves should
That I can find should merit any hate.

King John.

What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

Blanch.

That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

King John.

Speak then, prince Dauphin: can you love this lady?

Lewis.

Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her most unfeignedly.

King John.

Then do I give Volquessen, Tournaine, Maine,
Poictiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.—
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

King Philip.

It likes us well.—Young princes, close your hands.

Austria.

And your lips too; so, I am well assur'd,
That I did so, when I was first assur'd.

King Philip.

Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at saint Mary's chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd.—
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?
I know, she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much.
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

Lewis.

She is sad and passionate at your highness' tent.

King Philip.

And, by my faith, this league, that we have
Will give her sadness very little cure.—
[made,
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way,
To our own vantage.

King John.

We will heal up all;
For we'll create young Arthur duke of Brittany,
And earl of Richmond, and this rich fair town
We make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance:
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity;—I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd for, unprepared pomp.
[Exeunt all but the Bastard.—The Citizens retire from the walls.

Bastard.

Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part;—
[on.
And France, whose armour conscience buckled
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As God's own soldier, rounded in the ear
With that same pious, churlish man, that evil devil,
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids.

Who having no external thing to lose
[that;
But the word maid,—cheats the poor maid of
That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling comon-Commodity, the bias of the world;
[dity,—
The world, who of itself is pleased well,
Made to run even, upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France.
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,
From a resolv'd and honourable war,
To a most base and vile- concluded peace.
And why rall I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not woop'd me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels would salute my palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, ralleth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say, there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say, there is no vice but beggary.
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. The same. The French King's Tent.

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Constance.

GONE to be married? gone to swear a peace?
False blood to false blood join'd! Gone to be friends or foes?
[vinces?
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those pro-it is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard:
Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again:
it cannot be; thou dost but say 'tis so.
I trust, I may not trust thee, for thy word is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for this frightening me,
For I am capable of fear,
Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears; [fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess, thou didst but jest
With my vex'd spirits, I cannot take a truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thing?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these sad signs confirmares of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.
Salisbury.
A true, as, I believe, you think them false,
That give you cause to prove my saying true.

Constance
O! if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter an.
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and die,—
Lewis marry Blanch! O, boy! then where art thou?

France friend with England! what becomes of Fellow, be gone; I cannot brook thy sight:
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Salisbury.
What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?

Constance
Which harm within itself so heinous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arthur.
I do beseech you, madam, be content.

Constance
If thou, that bid'st me be content, wert grim,
Ugly, and slanderous to thy mother's womb,
Full of unpleasing blot, and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content;
For then should I not love thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blown rose. But fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee;
Shi' adulatoris hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluck'd on France
To trend down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to fortune, and king John;
That 'tis a trump't fortune, that usurping John. —
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Salisbury.
Pardon me, madam, I may not go without you to the kings.

Constance.
Thou may'st, thou shalt: I will not go with
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud, [thee.
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Enter King John, King Philip, Lewis, Blanch,
Etienne, Bastard, Austria, and Attendants.

King Philip.
'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in his course, and plays the alchymist,
Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holyday.

Constance.
A wicked day, and not a holy day! [Rising.
What hath this day deserved? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set,
Among the high tides, in the calendar?
Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week,
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd:
But on this day, let women fear no wreck;
No bar'zains break, that are not this day made;
This day all things begun come to ill end;
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

King Philip.
By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day.
Have I not promised to you my majesty?

Constance.
You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,
Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried,
Proves valueless. You are forsworn, forsworn;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
The grappling vigour, and rough frown of war,
Is cold in amity and painted peace.
And our oppression hath made up this league.—
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd kings!
A widow cries: be husband to me, heavens!
Let no' the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings! I hear me! O, hear me! Austria.

Lady Constance, peace!

Constance.
War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.
O, Lynneges! O, Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward!
Thou little valiant, great in villainy!
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by.
To teach thee safety! thou art perjur'd too,
And sooth'd 'st up greatness. What a foole'rt thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spok'd like thunder on my side?
Been sworn my soldier! bidding me depend,
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fail over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Austria.
O, that a man should speak those words to me!

Bastard.
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Austria.
Thou dar' st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bastard.
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

King John.
We like not this: thou dost forget thyself.

Enter Pandulph.

King Philip.
Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pandulph.
Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven.
To thee, King John, my holy errand is.
Act III. Sc. i.

KING JOHN.

I Pandulp, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand,
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So falsely and most unspeakably,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope. [And,
Tell him this tale: and from the mouth of Eng-
Shall much more— that no Italian priest
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself;
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

And the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate:
And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretic:
That hand be call'd, Canonized, and worship'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Admit false life.

I can lawfully let it be,
Thou that have room with Rome to curse us,
Good father Cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse me right.

And for mine too: when law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law;
Therefore, since law itself is peremptory wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Elizor.

Look'st thou pale, France? Do not let go thy hand.

Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoining hands hell lose a soul.

Austria.

King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bastard.

And hang a calf's-skin on his recusant limbs.

Austria.

Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, Because—

Bastard.

Your breeches best may carry them.

King John.

Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

Constance.

What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lewis.

Bethink you, father; for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forgo the easier.

Blanch.

That's the curse of Rome.

Constance.

O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts thee here,
In likeness of a new untrimmed bride.

Blanch.

The lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Constance.

O! if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need:
O! then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up;
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

King John.

The king is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Constance.

O! be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Austria.

Do so, King Philip; hang no more in doubt.

Bastard.

Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lout.

King Philip.

I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pandulp.

What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more,
If thou stand excommunicate, and curs'd?

King Philip.

Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow yourself;
This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
What fatal breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,
Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this royal bargain up of peace, [stain'd
Heaven knows, they were besmeard and over-
Both in our hands, and this kind regret?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm;
Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O! holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pandulph.

All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church,
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolving son,
France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue,
A chafed lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost

King Philip.

I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.
So mak'st thou faith with an enemy to faith;
And, like a civil war, set'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O! let thy vow
First made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd;
That is, to be the champion of our church.
What since thou swor'st is sworn against thyself,
And may not be performed by thyself:
For that, which thou hast sworn to do amiss,
Is not amiss when it is truly done:
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it.
The better act of purposes mistook
Is to mistake again: though indirect,
Yet Indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures; as fire cools fire
Within the scorched veins of one new born'd.
It is religion that doth make vows kept,
But thou hast sworn against religion, [swear'st,
By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth
Against an oath: the truth, thou art unsure
To swear, swears only not to be forsworn;
Else, what a mockery should it be to swear?
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost
swear.
Therefore, thy later vows, against thy first,
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself:
And better conquest, never cannot thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them; but, if not, then know
The peril of our curses light on thee.
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But in despair die under their black weight.

Austria.

Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Bastard.

Will not be?

Will not a call'skin stop that mouth of thine?

Lewis.

Father, to arms!

Bianch.

Up! is thy wedding day?

Against the blood that thou hast married?
What shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd men?
Shall braying trumpets, and loud curliarch drums,
Clamours of hell, be measured to our pomp?
O husband, hear me! ah, alack! how now
Is husband in my mouth!—even for that name,
Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms
Against mine uncle.

Constance.

O! upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Fore-thought by heaven.

Blanch.

Now shall I see thy love. What motive may Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?

Constance.

That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honour. O! thine honour, Lewis, thine honour.

Lewis.

I muse, thy majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pandulph.

I will denounce a curse upon his head.

King Philip.

Thou shalt not need.—England I'll fall from thee.

Constance.

O, fair return of banish'd majesty!

Elinor.

O, foul revolt of French inconstancy!

King John.

France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bastard.

Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton

Time,
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blanch.

The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day, adieu!
Which is the side that I must go withal!
I am with both: each army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirr asunder, and dismember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose
Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Lewis.

Lady, with me; with me thy fortune lies.

Blanch.

There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

King John.

Cousin, go draw our puissance together.

[Exit Bastard.

France: I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can alloy, nothing hut blood.
The blood, and dearest-val'd blood of France.

King Philip.

Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire.
Look to thyself: thou art in jeopardy.

King John.

No more than he that threats.—To arms let's hie!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. Plains near Angiers.

Alarums, Excursions. Enter the Bastard with Austria's Head.

Bastard.

Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;

Some
KING JOHN.

ACT III. SC. IV.

Some airy devil hovers in the sky, And pours down mischief. Austria's head, lie, While Philip breathes. [there, Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert.

King John. Hubert, keep this boy.—Philip, make up: My mother is assailed in our tent, And t'ain, I fear.

Bastard. My lord, I rescued her; Her highness is in safety, fear you not: But on, my liege; for very little pains Will bring this labour to an happy end.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. Alarums: Excursions; Retreat. Enter King John, Elinor, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords.

King John. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind, [To Elinor. So strongly guarded.—Cousin, look not sad; [To Arthur. Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arthur. O! this will make my mother die with grief.

King John. Cousin, [To the Bastard, away for England: haste before; And ere we coming, see thou shake the bags Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace Must by the hungry now be fed upon: Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bastard. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back, When gold and silver beckes me to come on. I leave your highness:—Grandam, I will pray (if ever I remember to be holy,) For your fair s'cety: so I kiss your hand.

King John. Come hither, Hubert. O! my gentle Hubert, We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh There is a soul, counts thee her creditor, And with advantage means to pay thee love: And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished. Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,— But I will fit it with some better time. By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hubert. I am much bounden to your majesty.

King John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet; But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow; Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good. I had a thing to say—but let it go. The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day, Attended with the pleasures of the world, Is all too wanton, and too full of gauds,

To give me audience:—if the midnight bell Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth, Sound one into the drowsy race of night: If this same were a churchyard where we stand, And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs; Or if that surly spirit, melancholy, Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick, (Which, else, runs tickling up and down the veins.) Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes, And strain their cheeks to idle merriment, A passion hateful to my purposes,) Or if that thou could'st see me without eyes, Hear me without thine ears, and make reply Without a tongue, using conceit alone, Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words, Then, in despite of brooded watchful day, I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts. But ah! I will not:—yet I love thee well; And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hubert. So well, that what you bid me undertake, Though that my death were adjunct to my act, By heaven, I would do it.

King John. Do not I know, thou wouldst? Good Hubert! Hubert—Hubert, throw thine eye On yond' young boy: I'll tell thee what, my He is a very serpent in my way; [friend, And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread, He lies before me. Dost thou understand me? Thou art his keeper.

Hubert. And I'll keep him so, That he shall not offend your majesty.

King John. Death.

Hubert. My lord?

King John. Enough. I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee; Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee: Remember.—Madam, fare you well: I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.

Elinor. My blessing go with thee!

King John. For, England, cousin: go. Hubert shall be your man, attend on you With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho! [Exit.

SCENE IV. The same. The French King's tent.

Enter King Philip, Lucius, Pandulph, and Attendants.

King Philip. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood, A whole armado of convicted sail Is scatter'd, and disjoin'd from fellowship. Pandulph. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

King Philip. What can go well, when we have run so ill? Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost? Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?

And
And bloody England into England gone,
O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lewis.

What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed with such advice dispast'd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example. Who hath read, or heard,
Of any kindred action like to this?

King Philip.

Well could I bear that England had this praise,
So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul;
Holding th' eternal spirit against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath.—
I pr'ythee lady, go away with me.

Constance.

Lo now, now see the issue of your peace!

King Philip.

Patience, good lady: comfort, gentle Constance.

Constance.

No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all cons—true redress,
Death, death.—O, amiable lovely death!
Thou odorous stench! sound rottenness!
Arise forth from the couch of lastling night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy digestable bones;
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulty brows;
And tug these fingers with thy household worms;
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself:
Come, grin on me; and I will think thou smil'st,
And buss thee as thy wife! Misery's love,
O, come to me!

King Philip.

O, fair affliction, peace! Constance.

Constance.

No, no, I will not, having breath to cry—
O! that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth;
Then with a passion would I shake the world,
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorns a modern invocation.

Pandulp.

Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Constance.

Thou art not holy to belle me so.
I am not mad:—I would to heaven, I were,
For then, 'tis like I should forget myself:
O, if I could, what grief should I forget!—
Preach some philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal;
For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliver'd of these woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang myself:
I were mad, I should forget my son,
Or madly think, a babe of clouts were he.
I am not mad: too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.

King Philip.

Bind up those tresses. O! what love I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends

Do glue themselves in solvable grief;
Like true, inseparable, faithful lovers,
Sticking together in calamity.

Constance.

To England, if you will.

King Philip.

Bind up your hairs

Constance.

Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cried aloud,
"O, that these hands could so redeem my son,
As they have given these hairs their liberty!"
But now, I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner.—
And, father cardinal, I have heard you say,
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I shall see my boy again;
For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,
To him that ever suffered such an issue,
There was not such a gracious creature born.
But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he'll look as hollow as a glove,
As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,
And so he'll die: and, rising so again,
When I shall meet him in the court of heaven
I shall not know him: therefore never,
Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pandulp.

You hold too helious a respect of grief.

Constance.

He talks to me, that never had a son.

King Philip.

You are as fond of grief, as of your child.

Constance.

Grief fills the room up of my absent child,
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me;
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form:
Then, have I reason to be fond of grief,
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.—
I will not keep this form upon my head,
When there is such disorder in my wit,
O lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world.
My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure.

Exit.

King Philip.

I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.

[Exit.

Lewis.

There's nothing in this world, can make me life
Is as tedious as a twice-told tale, [Joy:
Vexing that all ear of a drowsy man; [Tis:
And bitter shame hath spol'd the sweet world's
That it yields nothing, but shame, and bitterness.

Pandulp.

Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest: evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil.
What have you lost by losing of this day?

Lewis.

All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pandulp.

If you had won it, certainly, you had.
No, no: when fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
KING JOHN.

Act 4, Sc 1.
ACT IV. Sc. 1.

KING JOHN.

'Tis strange, to think how much King John hath lost In this which he accounts so clearly won. Are not you grieved, that Arthur is his prisoner? Lewis.

As heartily, as he is glad he hath him. Pandulph.

Your mind is all as youthful as your blood. Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit; For even the breath of what I mean to speak Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub, Out of the path which shall directly lead [mark. Thy foot to England’s throne, and therefore John hath seiz’d Arthur; and it cannot be, That while true life plays in that infant’s veins, The mispisc’d John should entertain an hour, One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest. A scewre, snatch’d with an unruly hand, Must be as bolterously maintaine’d as gain’d; And he, that stands upon a slippyry place, Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him un: That John may stand, then Arthur needs must So be it, for it cannot be but so. [fall; Lewis.

But what shall I gain by young Arthur’s fall? Pandulph.

You, in the right of lady Brench your wife, May then make all the claim that Arthur did. Lewis.

And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did. Pandulph.

How green you are, and free in this old world! John lays you plots: the times conspire with you, For he that steeps his safety in true blood Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue. This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal, That none so small advantage shall step forth To check his reign, but they will cherish it: No natural exhalation in the sky, No scope of nature, no distemper’d day, No common wind, no customed event, But they will pluck away his natural cause, And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs, Aborives, presages, and tongues of heaven, Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Methinks, I see this hurly all on foot: And, O! what better matter breeds for you, Than I have nam’d.—The bastard Faulconbridge Is now in England transacking the church, Offending charity: if but a dozen French Were there in arms, they would be as a call To train ten thousand English to their side; Or as a little snow, tumbled about. Anon becomes a mountain. O, noble Dauphin! Go with me to the king. 'Tis wonderful, What may be wrought out of their discontent: Now that their souls are topful of offence, For England go; I will whet on the king. Lewis.

Strong reasons make strange actions. Let us go: If you say, ay, the king will not say, no. [Exeunt.
KING JOHN.

ACT IV. Sc. I.

Hubert. And I will.

Arthur. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,) And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head, And, like the watchful minutes to the hour, Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time, [griefs? Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your Or, What good love may I perform for you? May a poor man's son would have lain still, And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you; But you at your sick service had a prince. Nay you may think my love was crafty love, And call it cunning: do, an if you will. If heaven be pleas'd that you will use me ill, Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine eyes?

These eyes, that never did, nor never shall So much as frown on you?

Hubert. I have sworn to do it, And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arthur. Ah! none but in this iron age would do it. The iron of itself, though heat red-hot, Approaching near these eyes would drink my And quench this fiery indignation, Even in the matter of mine innocence: Nay, after that, consume away in rust, But for containing fire to harm mine eye. Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd An if an angel should have come to me, [iron? And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes, I would not have believ'd him; nor tongue but Hubert's.

Come forth. [Stamps.

Re-enter Attendants, with Cord, irons, &c.

Do as I bid you.

Arthur. O! save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out, Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hubert. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.

Arthur. Alas! what need you be so boisterous rough? I will not struggle; I will stand stone-still. For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound. Nay, hear me, Hubert: drive these men away, And I will sit as quiet as a lamb: I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word, Nor look upon the iron angrily. Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you, Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hubert. Go stand within: let me alone with him. [First-Attendant.

First-Attendant. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed. [Exeunt Attendants.

Arthur. Alas! I then have child away my friend; He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart.— Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hubert. Come, boy, prepare yourself. [Arthur. Is there no remedy?

Arthur. O heaven!—that there were but a mote in A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair, [yours, Any annoyance in that precious sense! [there. Then, feeling what small things are boisterous
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hubert. Is this your promise? go to; hold your tongue.

Arthur. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes: Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert: Or, Hubert, if you will put out my tongue, So I may keep mine eyes. Of spare mine eyes; Though to no use, but still to look on you. Lo! by my troth, the instrument is cold, And would not harm me.

Hubert. I can heat it, boy.

Arthur. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with grief, Being create for comfort, to be us'd In undeserv'd extremes; see else yourself; There is no malice in this burning coal; The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out, And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hubert. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Arthur. And if you do, you will but make it blush, And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert: Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes; And like a dog that is compelld to fight, Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on. All things that you should use to do me wrong, Deny their office: only you do lack That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, extends, Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Hubert. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes For all the treasure that thine uncle owes: Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy, With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arthur. O! now you look like Hubert: all this while You were disguised.

Hubert. Peace! no more. Adieu. Your uncle must not know but you are dead: I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports; And, pretty child, sleep double, and secure, That Hubert for the wealth of all the world Will not offend thee.

Arthur. O heaven! I thank you, Hubert.

Hubert. Silence! no more. Go closely in with me; Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, crowned; Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his State.

King John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd, And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pembroke.
Pembroke.

This once again, but that your highness pleased d,—
Was once superfluous: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off;
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land,
With any long'd for change, or better state.

Salsbury.

Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excess.

Pembroke.

But that your royal pleasure must be done,
This act is as an ancient tale new told,
And in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urged at a time unreasonable.

Salsbury.

In this, the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigured;
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to lurch about,
Startles and frights consideration,
Makes sounds opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.

Pembroke.

When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in covetousness;
And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse:
As patches, set upon a little Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Salsbury.

To this effect, before you were new-crown'd,
We breath'd our counsel; but it pleas'd your highness
To overbear it, and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

King John.

Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possess'd you with, and think them strong;
And more, more strong than lesser is my fear,
I shall indulge you with: mean time, but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not well,
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pembroke.

Then I, as one that am the tongue of these,
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them, but, chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th' enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument:—
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your fears, which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong, should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise?—
That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit,
That you may bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no farther ask,
KING JOHN.

ACT IV. SC. II.

King John.

O! where hath our intelligence been drank? Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care,
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Message.

My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust: the first of April, died
Your noble mother: and, as I hear, my lord,
The lady Constance in a frenzy died:
Three days before: but this iron rumour's tongue
I idly heard; if true, or false, I know not.

King John.

Withhold thy speed, dreadful Occasion! O! make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
My discontented peers.—What! mother dead?
How wildly, then, walks my estate in France!
Under whose conduct came those powers of France,
That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Message.

Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard, and Peter of Pomfret.

King John.

Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tidings.—Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.

Bastard.

But if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

King John.

Bear with me, cousin, for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breathe again
Albeit the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bastard.

How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sum I have collected shall express:
But as I travell'd hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied:
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear:
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treaing on his heels;
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That ere the next Ascension day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.

King John.

Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter.

Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

King John.

Hubert, away with him: Imprison him;
And on that day at noon, whereon, he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to safety, and return: For I must use thee: O my gentle cousin!

[Exit Hubert, with Peter.

Hearth thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bastard.

The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:
Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury,
With eyes as red as ever kindled fire.
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.

King John.

Gentle kinman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies.
I have a way to win their loves again:
Bring them before me.

Bastard.

I will seek them out.

King John.

Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.—
O! I let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners all through my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.
Be Mercury; set feathers to thy heels,
And fly like thought from them to me again.

Bastard.

The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.

[Exit.

King John.

Spoke like a spritefull, noble gentleman.—
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers,
And be thou he.

Message.

With all my heart, my liege. [Exit.

King John.

My mother dead!

Re-enter Hubert.

Hubert.

My lord, they say, five moons were seen to-four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about: The other four in wonderous motion.

King John.

Five moons?

Hubert.

And he that speaks, doth grippe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he that hears, makes fearful action.
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes,
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news:
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet)
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattelled and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean, unwash'd artificer
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

King John.

Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause
[him.
To wish him dead, but thou hast done to kill

Hubert.

Had none, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

King John.

It is the curse of kings, to be attended
By slaves, that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life;
And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Ofdangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humour than advis'd respect.

Hubert.

Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

King
Act IV. Sc. III.
KING JOHN.

SCENE III. The same. Before the Castle.

Enter ARTHUR, on the Walls.

ARTHUR.

The wall is high; and yet will I leap down. — Good murder be pitiful, and hurt me not! There's few, or none, do know me; if they did, This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it. [quite. If I get down, and do not break my limbs, I'll find a thousand shifts to get away: As good to die and go, as die and stay. [Leaps down.

O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones. — Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones! [Dies.

Enter PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

SALISBURY.

Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmund's It is our safety, and we must embrace [Bury: This gentle offer of the perilous time.

PEMBROKE.

Who brought that letter from the cardinal?

SALISBURY.

The count MCION, a noble lord of France; Whose private with me, of the Dauphin's love, Is much more general than these lines import.

BIGOT.

To-morrow morning let us meet him then.

SALISBURY.

Or, rather then set forward: for 'twill be Two long days' journey, lords, or 'er we meet.

Enter the BASTARD.

BASTARD.

Once more to-day well met, distemper'd lords. The king by me requests your presence straight.

SALISBURY.

The king hath dispossess'd himself of us: We will not line his thin bestained cloak With our pure honours, nor attend the foot That leaves the print of blood where-o'er it walks. Return, and tell him so: we know the worst.

BASTARD.

What'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

SALISBURY.

Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now.

BASTARD.

But there is little reason in your grief; Therefore, 'twere reason you had manners now.

PEMBROKE.

Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.

BASTARD.

'Tis true; to hurt his master, no man else.

SALISBURY.

This is the prison. What is he lies here? [Seeing ARTHUR

PEMBROKE.

O death! made proud with pure and princely beauty, The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.

SALISBURY.

Murder, as hating what himself hath done, Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

BIGOT.

Or when he doomed this beauty to a grave, Found it too precious-princely for a grave.

SALISBURY.

Sir RICHARD, what think you? Have you beheld [think? Or have you read, or heard? Or could you Or do you almost think, although you see, That you do see? could thought, without this object, Form such another? This is the very top, The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest, Of murder's arms: this is the bloodiest shame, The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke, That
KING JOHN.

Act IV. Sc. iii.

That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage,
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pembroke.

All murders past do stand excus'd in this;
And this, so sole and so unmatched,
Shall give a holiness, a purity.
To the yet unbegotten sin of times;
And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,
Examplied by this heinous spectacle.

Bastard.

It is a damned and a bloody work;
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.

Salisbury.

If that it be the work of any hand?—
We had a kind of light, what would ensue:
It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand;
The practice, and the purpose, of the king;
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of revenge.

Pembroke and Bigot.
Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter Hubert.

Hubert.

Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you.
Arthur doth live: the king hath sent for you.

Salisbury.

O! he is bold, and blushes not at death.—
Avant, thou hateful villain I get thee gone.

Hubert.

I am no villain.

Salisbury.

Must I rob the law?
[Drawing his sword.

Bastard.

Your sword is bright, sir: put it up again.

Salisbury.

Not till I sheath it in a murderer's skin.

Hubert.

Stand back, lord Salisbury: stand back, I say:
By heaven, I think, my sword's as sharp as
I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your worth, your greatness, and nobility.

Bigot.

Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a nobleman?
Hubert.

Not for my life: but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.

Salisbury.

Thou art a murderer.

Hubert.

Do not prove me so;
Whose tongue soo'er speaks false,
Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly lies.

Pembroke.

Cut him to pieces.

Bastard.

Keep the peace, I say.

Salisbury.

Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.

Bastard.

Thouwert better gall the devil, Salisbury:
If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
Or reach thy basty spleen to do me shame,
I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword, belike,
Or I'll so maul you and your tortois-ering,
That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Bigot.

What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a villain, and a murderer?

Hubert.

Lord Bigot, I am none.
Bigot.

Who kill'd this prince?

Hubert.

'Tis not an hour since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep,
My date of life out for his sweet life's loss.

Salisbury.

Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villainy is not without such rheum;
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocency.
Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor
Th' uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house;
For I am stilled with this smell of sin.

Bigot.

Away, toward Bury: to the Dauphin there!
Pembroke.

There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.
[Exeunt Lords.

Bastard.

Here's a good world! — Knew you of this fair work?
Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,
Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hubert.

Do but hear me, sir.

Bastard.

Ha! I'll tell thee what;
Thou art damn'd as black — nay, nothing is so black;
Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer;
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.
Hubert.

Upon my soul, —

Bastard.

If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel act, do but despair;
And if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread
That ever spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam
To hang thee on; or would'st thou drown thy-Put but a little water in a spoon, [self,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.
I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hubert.

If I in act, consent, or sin of thought
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath,
Which was embosomed in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me.
I left him well.

Bastard.

Go, bear him in thine arms. —
I am amas'd, methinks; and lose my way.

Among
Among the throns and dangers of this world.
How easy dost thou take all England up!
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right, and truth of all this realm
Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth
The unwed interest of proud swelling state.
Now for the bare-sick'd home of majesty,
Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
And snarlith in the gentle eyes of peace: [home,
No powers from home, and discontent at
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waileth,
As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
The imminent decay of wrested pome.
Now happy he, whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest. — Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed: I'll to the king.
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.
[Exeunt."

ACT V.

SCENE I. The same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King John, Pandulph with the Crown, and Attendents.

King John: Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

King John: Now keep your holy word: go meet the French:
And from his holiness use all your power
To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.
Our discontented counties do revolt,
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
To stranger blood, to reign'd royalty.
This inundation of mistemper'd humour
Rests by you only to be qualified:
Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.

Pandulph: It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
But since you are a gentle conversite,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blustering land.
On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

[Exit."

King John: Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say that before Ascension-day at noon,
My crown I should give of? Even so I have.
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.

Bastard: All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds
But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd, [out,

Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers.
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.

King John: Would not my lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?

Bastard: They found him dead, and cast into the streets;
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

King John: That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bastard: So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you drop? why look you said?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threaten, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by you example, and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.

Away! and glister like the god of war,
When he intendeth to become the field:
Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
What shall they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there? and make him tremble
0! let it not be said.—Forage, and run [there?
To meet displeasure further from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

King John: The legate of the pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

Bastard: O, inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking great by his colours wildly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

King John: Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bastard: Away then, with good courage; yet I know,
Our party may well meet a ponderous foe.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A Plain, near S. Edmund's Bury.

Enter, in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun, Pembroke, Bigot, and Soldiers.

Lewis: My lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance.
Return the present report to the lords again;
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they, and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Salisbury: Upon our sides it never shall be broken.

v. 11 And,
And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
A voluntary zeal, and an unurg'd faith,
To your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince,
I am not glad that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by contemn'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound,
By making many. O! it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker; O! and there,
Where honourable rescue, and defence,
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confused wrong.—
And is't not pity, O, my griev'd friends!
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
Wherein we step after a stranger, murch
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw, and weep Upon the spot of this enforced cause!)
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow with unquainted colours here? [move! What, here?— O nation, that thou could'st res
That Neptune's arm, which clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
And give thee to the best card in the game,
Where these two Christian armies might com-
The blood of malice in a vein of league, [bine
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!}

Lewis.}{

A noble temper dost thou show in this;
A tender affection wresting from my bosom
Do make an earthquake of nobility.
O! what a noble combat hast thou fought,
Between confusion, and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silvery doth progress on thy cheeks.
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;
But this effusion of such many drops,
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors
Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
And with a great heart heave away this storm:
Commend these waters to the tender baby eyes,
That never saw the giant-world engag'd;
Nor meet with fortune other than at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of goSSIPing.
Could you shew for thou hast that thy hand
As into the purge of rich prosperity, [deep
As Lewis himself:— so, nobles, shall you all,
That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter Pandulph, attended.}{

And even there, methinks, an angel spake—
Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.

Pandulph.}{

Hail, noble prince of France.

The next is this:— king John hath reconcile'd Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
That breath first kindled the high coal
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore, thy threat'ning colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war,
That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
it may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no farther harmful than in show.

Lewis.}{

Your grace shall pardon me; I will not back:

I am too high-born to be proprested,
To be a secondary at control,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
To any sovereign state throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the deep coal of wars
Between this chas't'd kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me, John hath made
His peace with Rome? What is that peace to
I, by the honour of my marriage bed,
To me? After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And now it is half-conquer'd, must I back,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?

Trumpet sounds.

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard attended.}{

Bastard.}{

According to the fair play of the world,
Let me have audience: I am sent to speak.—
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited into my own tongue.

Pandulph.}{

The Dauphin is too willful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties:
He flatly says, he'll not lay down his arms.

Bastard.}{

By all the blood that ever furry breath'd,
The youth says well.—Now, hear our English
For this his royalty doth speak in me. [king,
He is prepare'd; and reason, too, he should:
This ariish and unmannerly approach,
This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
This unhair'd sauciness, and boyish troops.
The king doth smile at; and is well prepare'd
To whip this dbarfish war, these pigny arms,
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand, which had the strength, even at Your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;
To dive like buckets in concealed wells;
To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
To lie like wasps lock'd up in chests and trunks;
To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shake,
KING JOHN.

ACT V. SC. IV.

Even at the crying of your nation's crow,
Thinking this voice an armed Englishman:
Shall that victorious hand be feeled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No!  Know, the gallant monarch is in arms;
And like an eagle o'er his alery towers,
To souse annoyance that comes near his nest.—
And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
You bloody Neroes, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
For your own ladies, and pale-viso'd maids,
Like Amazona come tripping after drums;
Their thimbles into armed gauntletts change,
Their need'l's to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

lew.

There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace:
We grant thou canst outscold us. Fare thee well:
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabeller.

Pandolph.

Give me leave to speak.

Bastard.

No, I will speak.

lew.

We will attend to neither.—

Strike up the drums! and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest, and our being here.

Bastard.

Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten. Do but start
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready brace'd,
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall,
As loud as thine, rattle the welkin's ear, [hand
And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at (Not trusting to this halting legate here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-rabb'd death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

lew.

Strike up our drums to find this danger out.

Bastard.

And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert.

King John.

How goes the day with us? O! tell me, Hubert.

Hubert.

Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?

King John.

This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me: O! my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.

My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,
Desires your majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me which way you go.

King John.

Tell him, toward Swinestead, to the abbey there.

Messenger.

Be of good comfort; for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wreck'd three nights ago on Goodwins sands:
This news was brought to Richard but even now.
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

King John.

Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinestead; to my litter straight:
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The same. Another part of the same.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and others.

Salisbury.

I did not think the king so stord with friends.

Pembroke.

Up once again; put spirit in the French:
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Salisbury.

That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pembroke.

They say, king John sore sick hath left the field.

Enter Melun wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Melun.

Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Salisbury.

When we were happy we had other names.

Pembroke.

It is the count Melun.

Salisbury.

Wounded to death

Melun.

Fly, noble English; you are bought and sold: Unthread the rude eye of rebellion, And welcome home again discarded faith. Seek out king John, and fall before his feet For if the French be lords of this loud day, He means to recompence the pains you take, By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn, And I with him, and many more with me, Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's Bury; Even on that altar, where we swore to you Dear amity and everlasting love.

Salisbury.

May this be possible? may this be true?

Melun.

Have I not hidden death within my view, Retaining but a quantity of life, Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire? What in the world should make me now deceive, Since I must lose the use of all deceit? Why should I then be false, since it is true That I must die here, and live hence by truth? I say again, if Lewis do win the day, He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours Behold another day break in the east: [breath But even this night, whose black contagious Already smokes about the burning crest Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun, Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire, Paying the fine of rated treachery, Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives, If Lewis by your assistance win the day, Command me to one Hubert, with your king; The love of him,—and this respect besides, For that my grand sire was an Englishman,— Awakes my conscience to confess all this. In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence From forth the noise and rumour of the field; Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts In peace, and part this body and my soul With contemplation and devout desires.

Salisbury.
Salisbury.

We do believe thee, and beshrew my soul,
But I do love the favour and the form
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will unthread the steps of damned flight;
And, like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have over-
And calmly run on in obedience,
[look'd,
Even to our ocean, to our great King John.—
My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence,
For I do see the cruel pangs of death.
Right in thine eye.—Away, my friends! New flight,
And happy newness, that intends old right.
[Exeunt, leading off Mclum.

SCENE V. The same. The French Camp.
Enter Lewis and his Train.

Lewis.
The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to set,
But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush,
When English measur'd backward their own ground,
In faint retire. O! bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needless shot,
After such bloody toil we bid good night,
And wound our tattering colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.

Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lewis.

Here.—What news?

Messenger.

The count Mclum is slain! the English lords,
By his persuasion, are again fallen off;
And your supply, which you have wish'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin sands.

Lewis.

Ah, foul shrewd news!—Beshrew thy very
I did not think to be so sad to-night, [heart! As this hath made me.—Who was he, that said,
King John did fly an hour or two before
The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Messenger.

Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.

Lewis.

Well; keep good quarter, and good care to—
The day shall not be up so soon as I, [night:
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. An open Place in the Neighbourhood of Swanston-Abbey.
Enter the Bastard and Hubert, severally.

Hubert.

Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bastard.

A friend.—What art thou?

Hubert.

Of the part of England.

Bastard.

Whither dost thou go?

Hubert.

What's that to thee? Why may not I demand
Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?

Bastard.

Hubert, I think.

Hubert.

Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will, upon all hazards, well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so
Who art thou? [well.

Bastard.

Who thou wilt: and, if thou please,
Thou mayst befriend me so much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hubert.

Unkind remembrance I thou, and endless
night,
Have done me shame:—brave soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue
Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bastard.

Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hubert.

Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night,
To find you out.

Bastard.

Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hubert.

O! my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Bastard.

Show me the very wound of this ill news:
I am no woman; I'll not swoon at it.

Hubert.

The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:
I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil, that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bastard.

How did he take it? who did taste to him?

Hubert.

A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king
Yet speaks, and peradventure, may recover.

Bastard.

Whom didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hubert.

Why, know you not? the lords are all come back,
And brought prince Henry in their company;
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his majesty.

Bastard.

Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power.
I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats, are taken by the tide;
These Lincoln washes have devour'd them:
Myself well-mounted hardly have escap'd. Away,
Before; conduct me to the king; I doubt,
he will be dead or ere I come.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. The Orchard of Swanston-Abbey.
Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Prince Henry.

It is too late: the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house)
Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.
Enter Pembroke.

Pembroke.

His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief, That being brought into the open air, It would allay the burning quality Of that fell poison which assails him.

Prince Henry.

Let him be brought into the orchard here.—
Doth he still rage? [Exit Bigot.

Pembroke.

He is more patient
Than when you left him: even now he sung.

Prince Henry.

O, vanity of sickness! I fierce extremes In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd on the outward parts, Leaves them, invisible; and his siege is now Against the mind, which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies, Which, in their throng and press to that last hold, Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death should sing.

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of fality sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Salisbury.

Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born To set a form upon that indiget,
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter Bigot and Attendants, who bring in King John in a Chair.

King John.

Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;
It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is no heat a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrink up.

Prince Henry.

How fares your majesty?

King John.

Poison'd—ill-fare—dead, forsook, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust my icy fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold.—I do not ask you much:
I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,
And so ungrateful, you deny me that.

Prince Henry.

O, that there were some virtue in my tears,
That might relieve you!

King John.

The salt in them is hot—
Within me is a hell; and there the poison, Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize
On unreprievable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bastard.

O! I am scalced with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

King John.

O cousin! thou art come to set mine eye
The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;
And all the shruders, wherewith my life should sail,
Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered,
And then this thread is but a clod,
And model of confounded royalty.

Bastard.

The Dauphin is preparing hitherward, [him;
Where, heaven he knows, how we shall answer
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwary
Devoured by the unexpected flood.

Salisbury.

You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear—
My liege! my lord!—But now a king, now thus.

Prince Henry.

Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What certainty of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay?

Bastard.

Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,
To do the office for thee of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
Where break the dews? Show now your mended And instantly return with me again, [faiths, To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be
The Dauphin rages at our very heels. [sought:

Salisbury.

It seems you know not, then, so much as we,
The cardinal Pandalaph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bastard.

He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.

Salisbury.

Nay, It is in a mill but done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal:
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.

Bastard.

Let it be so.—And you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

Prince Henry.

At Worcester must his body be interr'd;
For so he will'd it.

Bastard.

Thither shall it then.
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state and glory of the land:
To whom, with all submission, on my knee, I do bequeath my faithful services,
And true subjection everlastingly.

Salisbury.

And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.

Prince Henry.

I have a kind soul, that would give thanks,
And knows not how to do it, but with tears.
THE LIFE AND DEATH OF

KING RICHARD II.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

KING RICHARD THE SECOND.
Edmund of Langley, Duke of York.
Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford.
Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.
Duke of Surrey.
Bushy,
Bagot,
Green,
Earl of Northumberland.
Henry Percy, his Son.

Bishop of Carlisle. Abbot of Westminster.
Lord Marshal; and another Lord.
Sir Pierce of Exton. Sir Stephen Scroop.
Captain of a Band of Welchmen.
Queen to King Richard.
Duchess of Gloster.
Duchess of York.
Lady attending the Queen.
Loros, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Gardeners,
Keeper, Messenger, Groom, and other
Attendants.

SCENE, dispersedly in England and Wales.

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. A Room in the Palace.
Enter King Richard attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles, with him.

King Richard.

OLD John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,
Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son;
Here to make good the bolterous late appeal,
Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt.

I have, my liege.

King Richard.

Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeal the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily, as a good subject should,
On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt.

As near as I could sift him on that argument,

On some apparent danger seen in him,
Aim'd at your highness; no inveterate malice.

King Richard.

Then call them to our presence: face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
Th' accuser, and th' accused, freely speak.—

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants with Bolingbroke and Norfolk.

Bolingbroke.

Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Norfolk.

Each day still better other's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!

King Richard.

We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come;

Namely,
Act 1. Sc. 1. KING RICHARD II.

Besides, I say, and will in battle prove,
Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the treasurers for these his years
Complotted and contrived in this land,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.

Farther, I say, and farther will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,
That he did plot the duke of Glosterol's death;
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And, consequently, like a traitor coward,
Slue'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice, and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

King Richard.

How high a pitch his resolution soars!—
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Norfolk.

O! let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.

King Richard.

Mowbray, impartial are our eyes, and ears:
Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partizalize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul.
He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou:
Free speech and fearless, I to thee allow.

Norfolk.

Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest.

Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais,
Disburs'd I duly to his highness' soldiers:
The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen,
Now, swallow down that lie.—For Gloster's death
I slew him not; but to mine own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.

King Richard.

Wrath-kindled gentleman, be rul'd by me.
Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision.
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say this is no month to bleed.

KING RICHARD.

Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal.
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this;
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and naught at all to say. [me
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post, until it had return'd these terms of treason doubled down his throat,
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do my lord, and I spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tlied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen rides of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Mean time, let this defend my loyalty:—
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie,

Bolingbroke.

Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;
And detaining in my high blood's what
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop.
By that and all the rites of knighthood else,
Wilt I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.

Norfolk.

I take it up; and, by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoul'der,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree, [der,
Or chivalrous design of knighthly trial:
And, when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight.

KING RICHARD.

What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's
It must be great, that can inherit us [charge?
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bolingbroke.

Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand
In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.

Norfolk.

Can art thou so absentee my wrong,
Since I have made thee my surety besides,
To dissemble me, and, in the face of God,
Have I not power to make thee both despair,
To make thee fear to say that I am wrong?

KING RICHARD.

A summons to the heavens, I do say,
Our distant brother, and our nearest lord,
Whose low degree doth shame his high estate,
And my revolt in him, that cannot bear
To hear the cause of his own dishonour;
While I do challenge him, and dare his arm
To a desulent path, and a forlorn war.
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll call the duke of Norfolk, you your son.
Gaunt.

To be a make-peace shall become my age.—
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.
King Richard.

And, Norfolk, throw down his.
Gaunt.

When, Harry? when?
To which obdience bids, I should not bid again.
King Richard.

Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is no boot.

Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot.
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
Despite of death that lives upon my grave,
To dark dishonour's use thou shall not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;
Pierce'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poison.
King Richard.

Rage must be withstood.
Give me his gage:—lions make leopards tame.

Yea, but not change his spots; take but my shame,
And I resign my gage. My dear, dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loan, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten times barr'd-up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one:
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try;
In that I live, and for that will I die.

Cousin, throw down your gage: do you begin.
Bolingbroke.

O! God defend my soul from such deep sin
Shall I seem crest-fall'n in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height
Before this outdard dastard? Ere my tongue
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong.
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace; [face.
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's

We were not born to sue, but to command:
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day.
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate;
Since we cannot alone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.—
Lord Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home-alarmas. [Exeunt.

The same. A Room in the Duke of Lancaster's Palace.

Enter Gaunt, and Duchess of Gloster.
Gaunt.

Alas! the part I had in Gloster's blood
Doth more solicit me, than your exclaims,
To stry against the butchers of his life,
But since correction lieth in those hands,

Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven:
Who when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duchess.

Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood.
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood.
One flourishings branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor split;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah! Gaunt, his blood was thine: that bed, that womb,
That metal, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee.
Made he was man; and though thou livest, and breath'st,
Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:
In suffering thy brother to be slaughtered,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee.
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Gloster's death.

Duchess.

God's is the quarrel; his God's substitute,
His deputy anointed in his sight.
Hath caus'd his death; the which, if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge, for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duchess.

Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

To God, the widow's champion and defence.

Duchess.

Why, then, I will.—Farwell, old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight.
O! sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast;
Or if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A califl'f recreant to my cousin Hereford.
Farwell, old Gaunt; thy sometimes brother's wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt.

Sister, farewell! I must to Coventry.
As much good stay with thee, as go with me!

Duchess.

Yet one word more.—Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowness, but weight;
I take my leave before I have begun.
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all:—nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him—O! what?—
With all good speed at Plasty visit me.

Alack!
King.

And as I true fight, defend me heaven!

Bolingbroke.

Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,
To prove by God's grace, and my body's valour,
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me;
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

On pain of death no person be so bold,
Or daring hardy, as to touch the lists;
Except the marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Bolingbroke.

Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's
And bow my knee before his majesty:
[hand, For Mowbray and myself are like two men
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;
Then let us take a ceremonious leave,
And loving farewell of our several friends.

The appellant in all duty greets your highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

King Richard.

We will descend, and fold him in our arms.
Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,
So be thy fortune in this royal fight.
Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed,
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Bolingbroke.

O! let no nobler profane a tear
For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's spear.
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My loving lord, I take my leave of you;—
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Aumerle;—
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerily drawing breath.
Lo! as at English feasts, so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet:
O! thou [To Gaunt,] the earthly author of my blood,
Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers;
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
That it may enter Mowbray's waxy coat,
And furnish new the name of John of Gaunt,
Even in the lusty 'havoir of his son.

Gaunt.

God in thy good cause make thee prosperous!
Be swift like lightning in the execution;
And let thy blows, doubly redivulded,
Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.

Bolingbroke.

Mine innocence, and Saint George to thrive!

Norfolk.

However God, or fortune, cast my lot,
There lives or dies, true to king Richard's throne,
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontrol'd enfranchisement,
More than my dashing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversity.
Most mighty ilere, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years;
As gentle and as jecond, as to jest,
Go I to fight. Truth both a quiet breast.
King Richard.

Farewell, my lord: securely I esp'y
Virtue with valour couch'd in thine eye.—
Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receive thy lance; and God defend the right!
Bolingbroke.

Strong as a tower in hope, I cry, amen.

Go bear this lance [To an Officer] to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

First Herald.

Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him;
And dares him to set forward to the right.

Second Herald.

Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
Courageously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signal to begin.

Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combatants.

[Charge sounded]

Stay, the king hath thrown his warder down.

King Richard.

Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,
And both return back to their chairs again.—
Withdraw with us; and let the trumpets sound,
While we return these dukes what we decree.—

A long flourish.

Draw near, [To the Combatants] and list, what with our council we have done.

For that our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd
With that dear blood which it hath foster'd;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours' swords:

[And for we think the eagle-winged pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,
With rival-hating envy, set on you]
To wak our peace, which in our country's cradle
Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so rous'd up with boisterous untim'd drums,
With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's blood:
Therefore, we banish you our territories:—
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,
I'll twice five summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regret our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Bolingbroke.

Your will be done. This must my comfort be,
That sun that warms you here shall shine on me;
And those his golden beams, to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

King Richard.

Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:
The sly hours shall not deterinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile.
The hopeless word of—never to return
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Norfolk.

A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all look'd for from your highness' mouth:
A dearer merit, not so deep a main
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forego;
And now my tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstrung viol, or a harp's;
Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have enjail'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd, with my teeth and lips;
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my jailer to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now;
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

King Richard.

It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence painless comes too late.

Norfolk.

Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Retiring]

King Richard.

Return again, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that ye owe to God,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves)
To keep the oath that we administer:—
You never shall (so help you truth and God)
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or compass any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Bolingbroke.

I swear.

Norfolk.

And I, to keep all this.

Bolingbroke.

Norfolk, so fare, as to mine enemy.—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Norfolk.

No, Bolingbroke: if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd as an accursed.
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rule.—
Farewell, my liege.—Now no way can I stay:
Save back to England, all the world's my way.

[Exit]

King Richard.

Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy griev'd heart: thy sad aspect
Bath from the number of his banish'd years Pluck'd as a four-away. [To Bolingbroke] Six frozen winters spent,
Return with welcome home from banishment.

Bolingbroke.

How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters and four wanton springs.
End in a word: such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt.
I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile;
But little vantage shall I reap thereby,
For, ere the six years, that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons, and bring their times about.
My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
Shall be extinct with age and endless night:
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

King Richard.
Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt.
But not a minute, king, that thou canst give:
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not a moment's morrow.
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

King Richard.
Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Wherefore thy tongue a party-verdict gave:
Why at our justice seem'st thou, then, to lower?

Gaunt.
Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour,
You urg'd me as a judge: but I had rather,
You would have bid me argue like a father.
O! had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
[Mild: And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.]
Alas! I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict, to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do myself this wrong.

King Richard.
Cousin, farewell; — and, uncle, bid him so:
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.
[FLOURISH. EXEUNT King Richard and Trau.

Aumerle.
Cousin, farewell: what presence must not know,
From where do you remain, let paper show.

Marschal.
My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt.
O! to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Bolingbroke.
I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prefoidal
To breathe th' abundant doleur of the heart.

Gaunt.
Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Bolingbroke.
Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt.
What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

Bolingbroke.
To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt.
Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Bolingbroke.
My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt.
The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foll, wherein thou art set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.

[Bolingbroke.
Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me, what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Gaunt.
All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus:
There is no virtue like necessity:
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king: woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceiv'st it is but faintly borne.
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not the king exil'd thee; or suppose,
Devouring pestilence hangs in your air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime:
Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou
Suppose the singing birds musicians, [COM'T:
The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence
Strew'd,
The flowered fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure, or a dance;
For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.]

Bolingbroke.
O! who can hold a fire in his hand,
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloys the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or downhill naked in December snow,
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O! no: the apprehension of the good,
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:
Fell sorrow is but never rankle more,
Than when it bites, but lancheth not the sere.

Gaunt.
Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way:
Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Bolingbroke.
Then, England's ground farewell: sweet soil,
Adieu;
My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!
Where-e'er I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman.

[EXEUNT.

SCENE IV.  The same.  A Room in the King's Castle.
Enter KING Richard, Bagot, and Green, at one door;
Aumerle at another.

King Richard.
We did observe,—Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Herford on his way?

Aumerle.
I brought high Herford, if you call him so,
But to the next highway, and there I left him.

King Richard.
And say, what store of parting tears were shed?

Aumerle.
'Faith, none for me: except the north-east wind,
Which then blew bitterly against our faces, Awak'd
KING RICHARD II.

Act I. Sc. iv.

A'wak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

King Richard.

What said our cousin, when you parted with him 9

Aumerle.

Farewell: and, for my heart disdained that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave.
Marry, would the word "farewell" have lengthen'd hours,
And added years to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of farewells;
But, since it would not, he had none of me.

King Richard.

He is our cousin, cousin; but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Ourself, and Bushy, Bagot here; and Green,
Observe'd his courtship to the common people:
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy;
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles,
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 't were to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench:
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With "'Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends;"
As were our England in reversion his,
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green.

Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts,
Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
 Ere farther leisure yield them farther means,
For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

King Richard.

We will ourself in person to this war:
And, for our coffers with too great a court,
And life large, are grown somewhat light,
We are enforce'd to farm our royal realm;
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank character;
Rich, Whereeto, when they shall know what men are
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,
And send them after to supply our wants,
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what news?

Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my lord,
Suddenly taken, and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat your majesty to visit him.

King Richard.

Where lies he?

Bushy.

At Ely-house.

King Richard.

Now put it, God, in his physician's mind,
To help him to his grave immediately!
The lining of his coffers shall make costs
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late!
[Exeunt.]
Renowned for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry,
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son:
This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear
land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now less'd, out, I die pronouncing it,
Like to a tenement, or pestling farm.

King Gaunt.

Enter King Richard, and Queen; Aumerle,
Busby, Green, Basset, Ross, and Willoughby.

York.

The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;
For young hot colts, being raged, do rage the more.

Queen.

How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?

King Richard.

What, comfort, man! How is't with aged
Gaunt?

Gaunt.

O, how that name beats my composition!
Old Gaunt, indeed; and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is my strict fast, I mean my children's looks;
And therein fasting hath thou made me gaunt,
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

King Richard.

Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt.

No; misery makes sport to mock itself:
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.

King Richard.

Should dying men flatter with those that live?

Gaunt.

No, no; men living flatter those that die.

King Richard.

Thou, now a-dying, say'st—thou flatter'st me.

Gaunt.

0, no; thou diest, though I the sicker be.

King Richard.

I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt.

Now, He that made me knows I see thee ill;
Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.
Thy death-bed is no lesser than the land,
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick;
And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
Commit'st thy 'pointed body to the cure.
Of those physicians that first wounded thee.
A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head,
And yet, incaged in so small a verge,
The waste is so white lesser than thy land.
O I had thy grandair, with a prophet's eye,
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,

Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.
Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to be land by lease;
But for thy world enjoying but this land,
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou now, not king:
Thy state of law is bondslave to the law,
And thou—

King Richard.

A lunatic lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an ague's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheeks, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence.
Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thou unreverend shoulders.

Gaunt.

O I spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
For that I was his father Edward's son:
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou bled out, and drunkenly caroused.
My brother Gloster, plain well-meaning soul,
Whom fair befal in heaven 'mongst happy souls!
May be a precedent and witness good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood.
Join with the present sickness that I have,
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long withered flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee:
These words hereafter thy tormentors be—
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
Love they to live, that love and honour have.

King Richard.

And let them die, that age and sullens have,
For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

York.

I do beseech your majesty, impute his words
To wayward sickness and age in him:
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry, duke of Hereford, were be here.

King Richard.

Right, you say true; as Hereford's love, so
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

[his; Enter Northumberland.

Northumberland.

My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.

King Richard.

What says he?

Northumberland.

Nay, nothing; all is said.
His tongue is now a stringless instrument:
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York.

Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

King Richard.

The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he:
His time is spent; our pilgrimage must be.
So much for that.—So now for our Irish wars.
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns.
Which live like venom, where no venom else,
But only they, hath privilege to live:
And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.
York.

How long shall I be patient? Ah! how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloster's death, nor Herford's banishment,
[wrongs,
Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face:
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first:
In war was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman.
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours;
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.

King Richard.

Why, uncle, what's the matter?

York.

O, my liege!
Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardoned, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Herford?
Is not God's dead, and doth not Herford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Herford's rights away, and take from His charters and his customary rights; [time
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Herford's rights,
Call in the letters patent that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
And lose a thousand well-deserved hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

King Richard.

Think what you will: we seize into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

York.

I'll not be by the while. My liege, farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good.

[Exit.

King Richard.

Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire straight:
Bid him repair to us to Elly-house,
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just, and always lov'd us well. —
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

[Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy, Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.

[Flourish.

Northumberland.

Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross.

And living too, for now his son is duke.
Willoughby.

Barely in title, not in revenues.
Northumberland.

Richly in both, if justice had her right.
Ross.

My heart is great; but it must break with silence,
Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.
Northumberland.

Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more,
That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Willoughby.

Tends that thou'dst speak, to the duke of
If it be so, out with it boldly, man: [Herford?
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Ross.

No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gilded of his patrimony.

Northumberland.

Now, afore God, 'tis shame such wrongs are
In him, a royal prince, and many more [borne
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute, [thems.
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our Ross.

The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes, [of'd
And quite lost their hearts: the nobles hath he
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
Willoughby.

And daily new exactions at devi'd;
As blanks, benevolences, and I wit not what:
But what, o' God's name, doth become of this?
Northumberland.

Wars have not wasted it, for war'd he hath not,
But basely yielded upon compromise [blows.
That which his noble ancestors achiev'd with
More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.
Ross.

The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.
Willoughby.

The king's grown bankrupt, like a broken man.
Northumberland.

Reproach, and dissolution, hangeth over him.
Ross.

He hath not money for these Irish wars,
His burdensome taxations notwithstanding,
But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.

Northumberland.

His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing;
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

Ross.

We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavowed is the danger now,
For suffering is to the causes of our wreck.

Northumberland.

Not so: even through the hollow eyes of death,
I spy
I spy life peering; but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is.

Willoughby.
Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ros.
Be confident to speak, Northumberland: We three are but thyself; and, speaking so, Thy words are but as thoughts: therefore, be bold.

Northumberland.
Then thus. — I have from Porti la Bianca, a bay In Brittany, receiv'd Intelligence, That Harry duke of Hereford, Reginald lord Cobham, That late broke from the duke of Exeter, His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury, Sir Thomas Erpingham, sir John Ramston, Sir John Norbury, sir Robert Water ton, and Francis Quoin, All these well furnish'd by the duke of B restane, With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war, Are making hither with all due expedi encie, And shipp'd to mean to touch our northern shore: Perhaps, they had ere this, but that they stay The first departing of the king for Ireland. If, then, we shall shake off our slavish yoke, Imp out our drooping country's broken wing, Redem from breaking pawn the Blemish'd crown, Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptor's girt, And make high majesty look like itself, Away with me in post to Ravenspurg; But if you faint, as fearing to do so, Stay and be secret, and myself will go.

Ros.
To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that fear.

Willoughby.
Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. An Apartment in the Palace. Enter Queen, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bushy.
Madam, your majesty is too much sad: You promis'd, when you parted with the king, To lay aside life-harming heaviness, And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen.
To please the king, I did; to please myself, I cannot do it; yet I know no cause Why I should welcome such a guest as grief, Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest As my sweet Richard. Yet, again, methinks, Some unbom sorrow, ripe in fortunate womb, Is coming towards me; and my inward soul With nothing trembles: at some thing it grieves, More than with parting from my lord, the king.

Bushy.
Each substance of a grief hath twenty shades, Which show like grief itself, but are not so: For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears, Divides one thing entire to many objects; Like perspectives, which, rightly gaz'd upon, Show nothing but confusion: ey'd awry, Distinguish forms: so your sweet majesty, Looking awry upon your lord's departure, Finds shapes of grief more than himself to wail; Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious queen, More than your lord's departure weep not: more's not seen;

Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrow's eye, Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Queen.
It may be so; but yet my inward soul Persuades me, it is otherwise: howe'er it be, I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad, As,—though in thinking on no thought I think,— Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy.
'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen.
'Tis nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd From some forefather grief; mine is not so. For nothing hath beget my something grief; Or something hath the nothing that I grieve: 'Tis in reversion that I do possess, But what it is, that is not yet known: what I cannot name; 'tis nameless woe, I wot.

Enter Green.

Green.
God save your majesty! — and well met, gen tlemen. — I hope, the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen.
Why hop'st thou so? 'tis better hope he is, For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope: Then, wherefore dost thou hope, he is not shipp'd?

Green.
That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power, And driven into despair an enemy's hope, Who strongly hath set footing in this land, The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself, And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd At Ravenspurg.

Queen.
Now, God in heaven forbid!

Green.
Ah! madam, 'tis too true: and that is worse, The lord Northumberland, his son, young Henry Percy. The lords of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby, With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy.
Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland, And all the rest of the revolted faction, traitors?

Green.
We have: whereupon the earl of Worcester Hath broken his staff, resign'd his stewardship, And all the household servants fled with him To Bolingbroke.

Queen.
So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe, And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir: Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy, And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother, Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy.
Despair not, madam.

Queen.
Who shall hinder me? I will despair, and be at enmity With cozening hope: he is a flatterer, A parasite, a keeper-back of death, Who gently would dissolve the bands of life, Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter the Duke of York.

Green.
Here comes the duke of York.

Queen.
Queen.

With signs of war about his aged neck.
O! full of careful business are his looks.—
Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.
York.

[Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:] Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief.
Your husband, he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:
Here am I left to underprop his land,
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Servant.

My lord, your son was gone before I came.
York.

He was?— Why, so:— go all which way it will!—
The nobles they are fled, the commons they are cold.
And will I, fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—
SIRRah, get thee to PLaShy, to my sister GloSTer;
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.
Hold; take my ring.

Servant.

My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:—
To-day, as I came by, I called there;
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.
York.

What is't, knave?

Servant.

An hour before I came the duchess died.
York.

God for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!
I know not what to do:— I would to God,
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it).
The king had cut off my head with my brother's;
What! are there no posts dispatch'd for Ireland?—
How shall we do for money for these wars?—
Come, sister, — cousin, I would say: pray, pardon me.
Go, fellow, [To the Servant] get thee home;
provide some carts,
And bring away the armour that is there.—

[Exit Servant.

Gentlemen, will you go muster men?
If I know how, or which way, to order these Thus disorderly thrust into my hands, affairs,
Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen:—
Th' one is my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend; th' other again,
Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd;
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.
Well, somewhat we must do. — Come, cousin,
I'll dispose of you. — Gentlemen, go muster up
And meet me presently at BerkLY. [your men,
I should to PLaShy too,]
But time will not permit. — All is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.

[Exeunt York and Queen.

Bushy.

The wind sits fair for news to go for IrelaND,
But none returns. For us to levy power,
Proportional to the enemy, is all impossible.

Green.

Besides, our nearness to the king in love
Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot.

And that's the wavering commons; for their love
Lies in their purses, and who so empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

BusHy.

Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot.

If judgment lie in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.

Green.

Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle:
The earl of Willskirk is already there.

BusHy.

Thither will I with you; for little office
Will the hateful commons perform for us,
Except like curs to tear us all to pieces. —
Will you go along with us?

Bagot.

No; I will to Ireland to his majesty.
Farewell: if heart's presages be not vain,
We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

BusHy.

That's as York strives to beat back Boling-broke.

Green.

Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry;
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.
Farewell at once; for once, for all, and ever.

BusHy.

Well, we may meet again.

Bagot.

I fear me, never.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Wilds in GLoSTershire.

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland, with Forces.

Bolingbroke.

How far is it, my lord, to Berkly now?
Northumberland.

Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in GLOSTershire.
These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome;
And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.
But, I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspurk to Cotswold will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which, I protest, hath very much beguili'd
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweeter'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess:
And hope to joy is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done
By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Bolingbroke.

Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter Harry Percy.

Northumberland.

It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whenceso-
Harry, how fares your uncle? [ever. —

Percy.

I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

Northumberland.
Northumberland. Why, is he not yet with the queen?
Per. No, my good lord: he hath forsook the court,
Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd
The household of the king.

Northumberland. What was his reason?
Per. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor,
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspurg.
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me over by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there;
Then, with directions to repair to Ravenspurg.

Northumberland. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford, boy?
Per. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot,
Which me'er I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

Northumberland. Then learn to know him now: this is the duke.
Per. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Bolingbroke. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure,
I count myself in nothing else so happy,
As in a soul remembering my good friends;
And as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

Northumberland. How far is it to Berkley? And what stir Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?
Per. There stands the castle, by yond' tuft of trees,
Man'd with three hundred men, as I have heard;
And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Symour;
None else of name, and noble estimate.

Enter Ross and Willoughby.
Northumberland. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Bolingbroke. Welcome, my lords: I wit, your love pursues
A banish'd traitor: all my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which, more enrich'd,
Shall be thy love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes me rich, most noble lord.
Willoughby. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Bolingbroke. Evermore thanks, th' exchequer of the poor;
Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter Berkley.
Northumberland. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.
Berkley. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forebode the death or fall of kings.
 Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,
 As well assur'd Richard, their king, is dead.

Salisbury.
Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woeful and vast:
Thy friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Bolingbroke's Camp at Bristol.
Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, Percy, Willoughby, Ross; Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Bolingbroke.
Bring forth these men.—
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls,
Since presently your souls must part your bodies,
With too much urging your pensive lives.
For 'twere no charity; yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigur'd clean;
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret
Haward's good neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment,
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Dispar'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods,
From my own windows torn my household coat,
Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign,
Save men's opinions, and my living blood.
To show the world I am a gentleman. [this,
This and much more, much more than twice all
Condemns you to the death.—See them deliver'd
To execution, and the hand of death. [over

Bushy.
More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
Than Bolingbroke to England.—Lords, farewell.

Green.
My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Bolingbroke.
My lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd. [Exeunt Northumberland and others, with Bushing and Green.

Uncle, you say the queen is at your house;
For God's sake, fairly let her be entreated;
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York.
A gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large.

Bolingbroke.
SCENE II. The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

King Richard.

Barlaughly castle call they this at hand?

Aumerle.

Yea, my lord. How brooks your grace the air, after your late toasting on the breaking seas?

King Richard.

Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy, To stand upon my kingdom once again. —

Dane thieves and robbers range with a broad hand, Though rebels wound thee with their horses' As a long parted mother with her child [hoofs]: Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting, So, weeping, smiling, greet I, thee, my earth, And do thee favour with my royal hands. Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth, Nor with thy sweets confirm his ravenous sense; But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom, And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their way, Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet, Which with usurping steps do trample thee. Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies; And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower, Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder, Whose deadly tongue may with a mortal touch Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies. —

Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords: This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.

Bishop.

Fear not, my lord: that power that made you king,

Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all. [The means that heaven yields must be embrac'd, And not neglected; else, if heaven would, And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse, The proffer'd means of succour and redress.]

Aumerle.

He means, my lord, that we are too remiss; Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security, Grows strong and great in substance, and in power.

King Richard.

Discomfartable cousin I know'st thou not, That when the searching eye of heaven is hid Behind the globe, and lights the lower world, Then thievish and robbers range with a broad hand, In murders and In outrage, boldly here; But when from under this terrestrial ball He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines, And darts his light through every guilty hole, Then murders, treasons, and detested sins, The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs, Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves? So when this thief, this traitor Bolingbroke, Who all this while hath revel'd in the night, [Whilst we were wandering with the multitudes,] Shall see us rising in our throne, the east, His treasons will sit blushing in his face, Not able to endure the sight of day. But, if he escape, trample on his sin, Not all the water in the rough rude sea Can wash the balm from an anointed king:

The breath of worldly men cannot depose The deputy elected by the Lord. For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd, To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown, God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay A glorious angel; then, if angels fight [right, Weak men must fail, for heaven still guards the Enter Salisbury.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your power?

Salisbury.

Nor near, nor farther off, my gracious lord, Than this weak arm. Discomfort guides my tongue, And bids me speak of nothing but despair. One day too late, I fear, my noble lord, Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth. O! call back yesterday, bid time return, And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting To-day, to-day, unhappy day too late, [meu: O'erthrew thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state; For all the Welshmen, hearing thouwert dead, Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, and fled.

Aumerle.

Comfort, my liege! why looks your grace so pale?

King Richard.

But now, the blood of twenty thousand men Did triumph in my face, and they are fled; And till so much blood thisher come again. Have I not reason to look pale and dead? All souls that will be safe, fly from my side; For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aumerle.

Comfort, my liege! I remember who you are.

King Richard.

I had forgot myself. Am I not king? Awake, thou coward majesty! thou sleepest. Is not the king's name twenty thousand names? Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes At thy great glory. — Look not to the ground, Ye favourites of a king: are we not high? High be our thoughts. I know, my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Scroop.

More health and happiness betide my liege, Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.

King Richard.

Mine ear is open, and my heart prepar'd: The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold. Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 'twas my care; And what loss is it to be rid of care? Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we? Greater he shall not be: if he serve God, We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so. Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend; They break their faith to God, as well as us. Cry woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay, The worst is death, and death will have his day.

Scroop.

Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd To bear the tidings of calamity. Like an unseasonable stormy day, Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores, As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears; So high above his limits swells the rage Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel. [scalls White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless Against thy majesty; and boys, with women's voices, Strive Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown:
Thy very beardsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, dishonour-worn men carve rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel.
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

King Richard.

Too well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so ill.
Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bouay?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop.

Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord.

King Richard.

O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption,
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man! [talon
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd; that sting my heart.
Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!
Would they make peace? terrible hell make war
Upon their spotted souls for this offence!

Scroop.

Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncurse their souls: their peace is made
With heads and not with hands: those whom you curse,
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,
And lie full ground, gray'd in the hollow ground.

Aumerle.

Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire, dead?

Scroop.

Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.

Aumerle.

Where is the duke, my father, with his power?

King Richard.

No matter where. Of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills:
And yet not so— for what can we bequeath,
Save our doped bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war,
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd,
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping Killed.

All murder'd— for within the hollow crown,
That rounds the mortal temples of a king,
Keeps death his court, and there the antic sits,
Scolding his state, and grinning at his pump;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchical, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this flesh, which walks about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and, humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin [king! Bores through his castle wall, and—farewell Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood.
With solemn reverence: throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonial duties,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste grief, need friends; subjected thus,
How can you say to me—I am a king?

Bishop.

My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes,
But presently prevent the ways to wall.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
[And so your follies fight against yourself.] Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to fight:
And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

Aumerle.

My father hath a power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a body of a limb.

King Richard.

Thou child'st me well.— Proud Bolingbroke,
I come
To change blows with thee for our day of doom.
Thisague-fit of fear is over-blown:
An easy task it is, to win our goal.
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scroop.

Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer, by small and small,
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.
Your uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yield'd up,
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his party.

King Richard.

Thou hast said enough—
Beshrew thee, cousin, [to Aumerle] which didst lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in to despair! [now
What say you now? What comfort have we
By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint castle: there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none.—Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aumerle.

My liege, one word.

King Richard.

He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away.
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day.

Exeunt.

SCENE III. Wales. A Plain before Flint Castle.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Bolingbroke and Forces; York, Northumberland, and others.

Bolingbroke.

So that by this Intelligence we learn,
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.

Northumberland.

The news is very fair and good, my lord;
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.

York.

It would beseech the lord Northumberland.
ACT III. SC. III.

KING RICHARD II.

To say, king Richard:—Alack the heavy day, When such a sacred king should hide his head!
Northumberland.

Your grace mistakes; only to be brief, Left I his title out.

York.

The time hath been, Would you have been so brief with him, he would Have been so brief with you, to shorten you, For taking so the head, your whole head's length.

Bolingbroke.

Mistake not, uncle, farther than you should.
York.

Take not, good cousin, farther than you should, Lest you mistake: the heavens are o'er our heads.

Bolingbroke.

I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself Against their will. But who comes here?
Enter Percy.

Welcome, Harry. What, will not this castle yield?
Percy.

The castle royally is mann'd, my lord, Against thy entrance.

Bolingbroke.

Royally? Why, it contains no king.
Percy.

Yes, my good lord, It doth contain a king: king Richard lies Within the limits of yond' lime and stone; And with him are the lord Aumerle, lord Salisbury, Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergyman [bury, Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.

Northumberland.

O I belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.

Bolingbroke.
[To Northumberland.

Noble lord, Go to the rude ribs of this ancient castle; Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parle Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver.
Henry Bolingbroke.

On both his knees both kiss king Richard's hand, And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart, To his most royal person; hither come Even at his feet to lay my arms and power, Provided that, my banishment repeal'd, And lands restor'd again, be freely granted. If not, I'll use th' advantage of my power, And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood, Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;

Broke

The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke. It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench The fresh green lap of fair king Richard's land, My stooping duty tenderly shall show. Go; signify as much while here we march Upon the grassy carpet of this plain. [drum. Let's march without the noise of threatening That from the castle's tatter'd battlements Our fair appointments may be well perus'd. Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet With no less terror than the elements Of fire and water, when their thundering shock At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven. Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water: The rage be his, while on the earth I rain My waters; on the earth, and not on him.— March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A parley sounded, and answer'd by a Trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the walls a king Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury.

Bolingbroke.

See, see, king Richard doth himself appear, As doth the blushing discontented sun From out the fiery portal of the east, When he perceives the envious clouds are bent To dim his glory, and to stain the track Of his bright passage to the occident.

York.

Yet looks he like a king: behold, his eye, As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth Controlling majesty. Alack, alack, for woe, That any harm should stain so fair a show!

King Richard.

We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee, Because we thought ourself thy lawful king: And if we be, how dare thy joints forget To pay their awful duty to our presence? If we be not, show us the hand of God That hath dismisl'd us from our stewardship; For well we know, no hand of blood and bone Can grip the sacred handle of our sceptre, Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp. And though you think that all, as you have done, Have torn their souls by turning them from us, And we are barren and heretof of friends, Yet know, my master, God omnipotent, Is mastering in his clouds on our behalf Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike Your children yet unborn, and unbegot, That lift your vassal hands against my head, And threaten the glory of my precious crown. Tell Bolingbroke, for yond' methinks, he stands, That every stride he makes upon my land Is dangerous treason. He is come to ope The purple testament of bleeding war; But ere the crown he looks for live in peace, Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons Shall ill become the flower of England's face, Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace To scarlet indignation, and bedew Her pastures' grass with faithful English blood.

Northumberland.

The King of heaven forbid, our lord the king Should so with civil and uncivil arms Be rush'd upon! Thy thrice-noble cousin, Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand; And by the honourable tomb he swear's, That stands upon your royal grandsire's bones, And by the royalties of both your bloods, Currents that spring from one most gracious head, And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt, And by the worth and honour of himself, Comprising all that may be sworn or said, His coming hither hath no farther scope, Than for a lineal royalties, and to beg Enfranchisement immediate on his knees: Which on thy royal party granted once, His glittering arms he will command to rust, His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart To faithful service of your majesty. This swears he, as he is a prince, is just, And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

King Richard.

Northumberland, say,—thus the king returns. His noble cousin is right welcome hither; And all the number of his fair demands Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction.
KING RICHARD II.

ACT III. SC. III.

With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.—

[Northumberland retires to Bolingbroke.

We do debase ourself, cousin, [To Aumerle.] do we not,
To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?

Aumerle.
No, no, my lord: let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords.

King Richard.
O God! O God! that e'er this tongue of mine,
That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On yond' proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth. O! that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name,
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I must be now!
Swell'st thou, proud heart! I'll give thee scope to beat,
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

Aumerle.
Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.

King Richard.
What must the king do now? Must he submit?
The king shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
The king shall be contented. Must he lose
The name of king? o' God's name, let it go;
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
My gay apparel for an alms-man's gown,
My figur'd goblets for a dish of wood,
My sceptre for a palmer's walking-staff,
My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave:
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live,
And, buried once, why not upon my head?—
Aumerle, thou weep'st; my tender-hearted cousin:—
We'll make foul weather with despaired tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn,
And make a dearth in this revolting land;
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus:—to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid, there lies
Two kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eyes.
Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, we see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says ay.

Northumberland.
My lord, in the base court he doth attend
To speak with you: may't please you to come down?

King Richard.
Down, down, I come; like glistening Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Jades.
[Northumberland retires' again to Bolingbroke.

In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,

To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down? Down, court down, king! [should sing.

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks
[Exeunt, from above.

Bolingbroke.
What says his majesty?
Northumberland.
Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
Yet he is come.

Enter King Richard, and his Attendants, below.

Bolingbroke.
Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his majesty.—
My gracious lord,—

Kneeling.

Bolingbroke.
Your own is yours; and I am yours, and all.

Bolingbroke.
So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
As my true service shall deserve your love.

Kneeling.

Bolingbroke.
Well you desire:—they well deserve to have,
That know the strong'st and surest way to get—
Uncle, give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes;
Tears show their love, but want their remedies.—
Cousin, I am too young to be your father,
Though you are old enough to be my heir.
What you will have, I'll give, and willing too;
For do we must what force will have us do.—
Set on towards London.—Cousin, is it so?

Bolingbroke.
Yes, my good lord.

Kneeling.

Then, I must not say no.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter the Queen, and two Ladies.

Queen.
What sport shall we devise here in this garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of care?

First Lady.
Madam, we'll play at bowls.

Queen.
'Twill make me think the world is full of rubs,
And that my fortune runs against the bias.

First Lady.
Madam, we'll dance.

Queen.
My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:
Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

First Lady.
Madam, we'll tell tales.

Queen.
Of sorrow, or of joy?

First Lady.
Of either, madam.
Queen. Of neither, girl; For if of joy, being altogether wanting, It doth remember me the more of sorrow; Or if of grief, being altogether had, It adds more sorrow to my want of joy; For what I have I need not to repeat, And what I want it boots not to complain.

First Lady. Madam, I'll sing.

Queen. 'Tis well that thou hast cause; But thou shouldst please me better, would'st thou weep.

First Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing, would weeping do me good, And never borrow any tear of thee. But stay, here come the gardeners. Let's step into the shadow of these trees. — My wretchedness unto a row of pins, They'll talk of state, for every one doth so Against a change. Woe is forerun with woe.

Enter a Gardener and two Servants.

Gardener. Go, bind thou up yond' dangling apricocks, Which, like unruly children, make their sire Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight: Give some supportance to the bending twigs. — Go thou, and like an executioner, Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays, That look too lofty in our commonwealth: All must be even in our government. — You thus employ'd, I will go root away The noisome weeds, that without profit suck The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

First Servant. Why should we, in the compass of a pale, Keep law, and form, and due proportion, Showing, as in a model, our firm estate, When our sea-walled garden, the whole land, Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers chok'd up, Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd, Her knot disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs Swarming with caterpillars?

Gardener. Hold thy peace. He that hath suffer'd this disorder spring, Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf; The weeds that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter: That seem'd in eating him to hold him up, Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke; I mean, the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

First Servant. What are they dead?

Gardener. They are; and Bolingbroke Hath seized the wasteful king. — O! what pity is it, That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land, As we this garden. We at time of year Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees, Lost, being over-proud in sap and blood, With too much riches it confound itself: Had he done so to great and growing men, They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches We lop away, that bearing boughs may live: Had he done so, himself had borne the crown, Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown down.

First Servant. What! think you, then, the king shall be depos'd?

Gardener. Depress'd he is already; and depos'd, 'Tis doubt, he will be: letters came last night To a dear friend of the good duke of York's, That tell black tidings.

Queen. O! I am press'd to death, through want of speaking. [Coming forward. Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden, How dares thy harsh, rude tongue sound this unpleasing news? What Ease, what serpent hath suggested thee To make a second fall of cursed man? Why dost thou say king Richard is depos'd? Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth, Divine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how, Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gardener. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I, To breathe these news, yet what I say is true. King Richard, he is in the mighty hold Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weigh'd: In your lord's scale is nothing but himself, And some few vanities that make him light; But in the balance of great Bolingbroke, Besides himself, are all the English peers, And with that odds he weigh'st king Richard down. Post you to London, and you'll find it so; I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischiefe, that art so light of foot, Doth not thy embassage belong to me, And am I last that knows it? O! thou think'st To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. — Come, ladies, go To meet at London London's king in woe. — What! was I born to this, that my sad look Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke? — Gardener, for telling me these news of woe, Pray God, the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies retire.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. London. Westminster Hall.

The Lords spiritual on the right side of the Throne; the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below. Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzurse, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind, with Bagot.

Bolingbroke. Call forth Bagot. — Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind, What what thou dost know of noble Aumerle's death; who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd the bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot.
Then set before my face the lord Aumerle.

Bolingbroke.
Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.

Bagot.
My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scorns to unstate what once it hath deliver'd;
In that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted,
I heard you say, "Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English court,
As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head?"
Amongst much other talk, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand crowns,
Than Bolingbroke's return to England;
Adding withal, how best this land would be
In this your cousin's death.

Aumerle.
Princes, and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd
With the attainder of his slanderous lips. —
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell: I say, thouatest,
And will maintain what thou hast said is false
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Bolingbroke.
Bagot, forbear: thou shalt not take it up.

Aumerle.
Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitwater.
If that thy valour stand on sympathy,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine.
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,
I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death,
If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aumerle.
Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitwater.
Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.

Aumerle.
Fitwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Percy.
Aumerle, thou liest: his honour is as true
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust;
And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to th'e extremest point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it if thou dar'st.

Aumerle.
And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Lord.
I task the earth to the like, forsown Aumerle;
And spur thee on with full as many lies
As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun. There is my honour's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Aumerle.
Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all.

I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey.
My lord Fitwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fitwater.
'Tis very true: you were in presence then;
And you can witness with me this is true.

Surrey.
As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.

Fitwater.
Surrey, thou liest.

Surrey.
Dishonourable boy!
That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render revengeance and revenge,
Till thou, the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's scull.
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitwater.
How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!
If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies,
And lies, and lies. There is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.
As I intend to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble duke at Calais.

Aumerle.
Some honest Christian trust me with a gage.
That Norfolk lies, here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd to try his honour.

Bolingbroke.
These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his lands and signories. When he's return'd, Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.

Bishop.
That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesus Christ in glorious Christian field,
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens;
And toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy, and there, at Venice, gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Bolingbroke.
Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?

Bishop.
As surely as I live, my lord.

Bolingbroke.
Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham! — Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter York attended.

York.
Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee [soul
From plume-pluck'd Richard, who with willing Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand.

ACT IV. SC. I.

KING RICHARD II.

Ascend his throne, descending now from him,—
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!

_Bolingbroke._

In God's name I'll ascend the regal throne.

_Bishop._

Marry, God forbid!—
Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best be seeming me to speak the truth.
Would God that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard: then, true nobless would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judge'd but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judge'd by subject and inferior breath,
And be himself not present? O! forefend it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refo'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscure a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by God thus boldly for his king.
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Henry's king;
And if you crown him, let me prophesy
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act:
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And in the heat of peace tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Gogdath, and dead men's sculls.
O! if you raise this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed earth.
Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
[woe!]

Lest child, child's children, cry against you—

_Northumberland._

Well have you argu'd, sir; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here.—
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge to keep him safely till his day of trial. [suit.
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons'

Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender: so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.

_York._

I will be his conduct. [Exit.

_Bolingbroke._

Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Proceed your sureties for your days of answer.—
Little are we beholding to your lore.

[To the Bishop.

And little look for at your helping hands.

Re-enter York, with King Richard, and Officers bearing the Crown, &c.

King Richard.

Alack! why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
With which I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatten, bow, and bend my limbs:
Give sorrow leave a while to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The favours of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not set aside the crown? Should not I?
So Judas did to Christ; but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one: I, in twelve thousand, none.

God save the king!—Will no man say, amen?

Am I both priest and clerk? well then, amen.
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me—
To do what service am I sent for hither?

_York._

To do that office of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer;
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Harry Bolingbroke.

King Richard.

Give me the crown.—Here, cousin, seize the _..crown;_ [side, yours. Here, cousin, on this side my hand, and on that Now is this golden crown like a deep well,

That owes two buckets, filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air.
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my grief, whilst you mount up on high.

_Bolingbroke._

I thought you had been willing to resign.

King Richard.

My crown, I am; but still my griefs are mine.
You may my stories and my state depose,
But not my griefs: still am I king of those.

_Bolingbroke._

Part of your cares you give me with your _crown._

King Richard.

Your cares set up do not pluck my cares down.
My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give, I have, though given away;
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

_Bolingbroke._

Are you contented to resign the crown?

King Richard.

Aye, no;—no, aye;—for I must nothing be;
Therefore no no, for I resign to thee.
Now mark me how I will undo myself.—
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand.
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart:
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duties, rites:
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbrok'd that swear to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!
Long may't thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!
God save king Henry, unkind'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!—
What more remains?

_Northumberland._

No more, but that you read

[Offering a paper.

These accusations, and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person, and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the subject of men
May deem that you are worthy depos'd.

King Richard.

Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My wea'd up folly? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,
There should'st thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposit of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath, Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven.—
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth baffle myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

Northumberland.

My lord, dispatch: read o'er these articles.

King Richard.

Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see;
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;
For I have given here my soul's consent,
To undeck the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base, and sovereignty a slave,
Proud majesty a subject; state a peasant.

Northumberland.

My lord,—

King Richard.

No lord of thine, thou haught, insulting man,
Nor no man's lord: I have no name, no title,
No, not that name was given me at the font,
But 'tis usurp'd. — Alack, the heavy day!
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself.
O! that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water drops: —
Good king,—great king,—and yet not greatly good,
An if my name be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.

Bolingbroke.

Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass.

[Exit an Attendant.

Northumberland.

Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth
come.

King Richard.

Fiend! thou torment'st me ere I come to hell.

Bolingbroke.

Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland.

Northumberland.

The commons will not then be satisfied.

King Richard.

They shall be satisfied: I'll read enough,
When I do see the very book indeed,
Where all my sins are writ, and that's—myself.

Re-enter Attendant with a Glass.

Give me the glass, and therein will I read.—
No deeper wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds? — O, flattering
Like to my followers in prosperity! [glass!
Thou dost beguile me. Was this face the face,
That every day under his household roof Did keep ten thousand men? Was it this the face
That like the sun did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd so many follies,
And was at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?

A brittle glory shineth in this face:
As brittle as the glory is the face;
[Dashes the glass against the ground.
For they, it is, crack'd in a hundred shifts.—
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport:
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Bolingbroke.

The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your face.

King Richard.

Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow? I ha! let's see:—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the tortured soul;
There lies the substance: and I thank thee,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st [king,
Me cause to wall, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
And then begone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Bolingbroke.

Name it, fair cousin.

King Richard.

Fair cousin! I am greater than a king;
For, when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Bolingbroke.

Yet ask.

King Richard.

And shall I have it?

Bolingbroke.

You shall.

King Richard.

Why then give me leave to go.

Bolingbroke.

Whither?

King Richard.

Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

Bolingbroke.

Go, some of you; convey him to the Tower.

King Richard.

O, good! Convey?—Conveyers are you all,
That rise thus nimblily by a true king's fall.
[Exeunt King Richard, and Guard.

Bolingbroke.

On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.
[Exeunt all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.

Abbot.

A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

Bishop.

The woe's to come: the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp as thorn.

Aumerle.

You holy clergymen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot.

My lord, before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise.
I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day.

[Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I. London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter Queen, and Attendants.

Queen. This way the king will come; this is the way To Julius Cæsar's ill-erected tower, To whose high-born my condemned lord Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke. Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth Have any resting for its true king's queen.

Enter King Richard, and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see, My fair rose wither: yet look up, behold, That you in pity may dissolve to dew, And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.— Ah! thou, the model where old Troy did stand; Thou man of honour; thou king Richard's tomb, And not king Richard; thou most beauteous inn, Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee. When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

King Richard. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so, To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul, To think our former state a happy dream; From which awak'd, the truth of what we are Shows us but this. I am sworn brother, sweet, To grim necessity; and he and I Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France, And cloister thee in some religious house: Our holy lives must win a new world's crown, Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What! is my Richard both in shape and mind Transform'd and weakened? Hath Bolingbroke Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart? The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw, And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage To be o'erpow'red; and wilt thou, pupil-like, Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod, And fawn on rage with base humility, Which art a lion, and a king of beasts?

King Richard. A king of beasts, indeed; ifught but beasts, I had been still a happy king of men. [France. Good sometimes queen, prepare thee hence for Think I am dead; and that even here thou tak'st, As from my death-bed, my last living leave. In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales Of woeful ages long ago betid; And, ere thou bid good night, to quell their grief, Tell thou the lamentable tale of me, And send the hearers weeping to their beds. For why, the senseless brands will sympathize The heavy accent of thy moving tongue, And in compassion weep the fire out; And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black, For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter Northumberland, attended.

Northumberland. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd: You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—

And, madam, there is order ta'en for you: With all swift speed you must away to France.

King Richard. Northumberland, thou ladder, wherewithal The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne, The time shall not be many hours of age More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think, Though he divide the realm, and give thee half, It is too little, helping him to all: [way He shall think, that thou, which knowest the To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again, Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne. The love of wicked friends converts to fear; That fear to hate; and hate turns one, or both, To worthy danger and deserved death.

Northumberland. My guilt be on my head, and there an end. Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

King Richard. Doubly divore'd!—bad men, ye violate A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me, And then, betwixt me and my married wife. Let me unkiss the oath 'twixt thee and me; And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made. Part us, Northumberland; I towards the north, Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime; My wife to France: whence set forth, in pomp, She came adorning hither like sweet May, Sent back like Hallowmas, or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

King Richard. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.

Northumberland. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.

King Richard. So two, together weeping, make one woe. Were thou for me in France, I for thee here; Better far off, than near, be ne'er the near. Go; count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

King Richard. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short, And piece the way out with a heavy heart. Come, come, in wooring sorrow let's be brief, Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief. One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part; Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart. [They kiss. Queen. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part, To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart. [They kiss again. So, now I have mine own again, begone, That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

King Richard. We make woe wanton with this fond delay: Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say.

Enter York, and the Duchess.

Duchess. My lord, you told me, you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?

Duchess. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
While all tongues cried — 'God save thee, Bolingbroke!'

York. You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls
With painted imagery had said at once,—
"Jesus preserve thee! welcome Bolingbroke!"—
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespeak them thus: — 'I thank you, countrymen:
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.'

Duchess. Alas, poor Richard! where rode he the whilst?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious; [eyes
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's Did scowl on gentle Richard: no man cried,
God save him;
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience, [steel'd
That had not God, for some strong purpose,
The hearts of men; they must perforce have
And barbarism itself have pitted him. [melked,
But heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calm contents.
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for eye allow.

Duchess. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle that was;
But that is lost for being Richard's friend,
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now.
I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Enter Aumerle.

Duchess. Welcome, my son. Who are the violets now,
That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?

Aumerle. Madam, I know not; nor I greatly care not:
God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,

Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? hold those jests and triumphs?

Aumerle. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

York. You will be there, I know.

Aumerle. If God prevent not, I purpose so.

York. What seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Amerile. Yea, look at thou pale? let me see the writing.

Aumerle. My lord, 'tis nothing.

York. No matter then who sees it:
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aumerle. I do beseech your grace to pardon me.
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see.
I fear, I fear,—

Duchess. What should you fear?
'Tis nothing but some bond that he is enter'd
For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day. [into

York. Bound to himself? what doth he with a bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.—
Boy, let me see the writing.

Aumerle. I do beseech you, pardon me: I may not show it.

York. I will be satisfied: let me see it, I say.

[Snatch's it, and reads.]

Treason! foul treason! — villain! traitor! slave!

Duchess. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there? Saddle my horse.
God for his mercy! what treachery is here!

Duchess. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say: saddle my horse.—
Now by mine honour, by my life, my troth,
I will appease the villain.

Duchess. What's the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman.

Duchess. I will not peace. — What is the matter, Aumerle?

Aumerle. Good mother, be content: it is no more Than my poor life must answer.

Duchess. Thy life answer?

York. Bring me my boots: I will unto the king.

Enter Servant with boots.

Duchess. Strike him, Aumerle. — Poor boy, thou art away'd.

Hence, villain! never more come in my sight. —

Act V. Sc. III.

KING RICHARD II.

York.
Give me my boots, I say.

Duchess.
Why, York, what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?
Have we more sons, or are we like to have?
Is not my teeming date drunk up with time,
And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,
And rob me of a happy mother's name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

York.
Thou fond, mad woman.
Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have taken the sacrament,
And interchangeably set down their hands,
To kill the king at Oxford.

Duchess.
He shall be none;
We'll keep him here: then, what is that to him?

York.
Away, fond woman! were he twenty times
My son, I would appeach him.

Duchess.
Hast thou groan'd for him,
As I have done, thou would'st be more pitiful,
But now I know thy mind: thou dost suspect,
That I have been disloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard, not thy son.
Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind:
He is as like thee as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

York.
Make way, unwary woman. [Exit.

Duchess.
After, Aumerle! Mount thee upon his horse:
Spar, post, and get before him to the king,
And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
I'll be long behind: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:
And never will I rise up from the ground,
Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away! begone.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Bolingbroke as King; Percy, and other Lords.

Bolingbroke.
Can no man tell me of my unthrifty son?
'Tis full three months, since I did see him last:
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he.
I do to God, my lords, he might be found.
I enquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose companions;
Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;
While he, young wanton, and effeminate boy,
Takes on the point of honour to support
So dissolve a crew.

Percy.
My lord, some two days since I saw the prince,
And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Bolingbroke.
And what said the gallant?

Percy.
His answer was,—he would unto the stews;
And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
And wear it as a favour; and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Bolingbroke.
As dissolve, as desperate: yet, through both
I see some sparks of better hope, which elder days
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle, in great haste.

Aumerle.
Where is the king?

Bolingbroke.
What means our cousin, that he stares and
So wildly? [Looks

Aumerle.
God save your grace. I do beseech your majesty,
To have some conference with your grace alone.

Bolingbroke.
Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.—

[Exeunt Percy and Lords.

What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aumerle.
For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.

Bolingbroke.
Intended, or committed, was this fault?
If on the first, how heinous 'er it be,
To win thy after love I pardon thee.

Aumerle.
Then give me leave that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till my tale be done.

Bolingbroke.
Have thy desire. [Aumerle locks the door.

York. [Within.

My liege, beware! look to thyself:
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Bolingbroke.
Villain, I'll make thee safe. [Drawing.

Aumerle.
Stay thy revengeful hand: thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.

Open the door, secure, fool-hardy king:
Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

[Exeunt.]

Enter York.

Bolingbroke.
What is the matter, uncle? speak;
Recover breath: tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York.
Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aumerle.
Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise past,
I do repent me; read not my name there:
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York.
It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.—
I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king:
Fear, and not love, begets his penitence.
Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Bolingbroke.
O, heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy!—
O, loyal father of a treacherous son!
Thou show, immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream through muddy passages

Hath

RICHARD II.
Act 5, Sc 5.
As who should say,—I would thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart;
Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go:
I am the king's friend, and will rid him up.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King Richard.

King Richard.

I have been studying how I may compare
This prison, where I live, into the world:
And, for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it: yet I'll hammer't out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul, the father: and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world;
In humours like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things divine, are intermix'd
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:
As thus,—'Come, little ones; and then again,—
It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye.'
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And that they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves,
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last; like silly beggars,
Who, sitting in the stocks, refuse their shame
That many have, and others must sit there:
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of such as have before endured the like.
Thus play I, in one person, many people,
And none contented: sometimes am I king;
Then, treason makes me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am: then, crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king:
Then, am I king'd again: and by and by,
Think I am nothing'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing — but what'er I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be ear'd
Ha! ha! ha! keep time. — How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives:
And here have I the daintiness of ear,
To check time broke in a disorder'd string,
But for the concord of my state and time,
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me;
For now hath time made me his numbering clock:
My thoughts are minutes, and with sighs they jar,
Their watches on unto mine eyes the outward watch,
Whereeto my finger, like a dial's point,
Is hung, and flowing with my ram's tears.
Now, sir, the sound, that tells what hour it is,
Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell: so sighs, and tears, and groans,
Show minutes, times, and hours; but my time
Runs judging on in Bolingbroke's proud joy
While I stand fooling here, his Jack o'clock.
This music made me: let it sound no more,
For though it hath holpe madmen to their wits,
In me, it seems, it will make wise men mad.
Yet, blessing on his heart that gives it me!

For 'tis a sign of love, and love to Richard
Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter Groom.

Groom.

Hallo, royal prince!

King Richard.

Thanks, noble peer;
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
That brings me food to make misfortune live?

Groom.

I was a poor groom of thy stable, king,
When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York,
With much ado, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my sometimes royal master's face.
O! how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets that coronation day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbarv!/ That horse that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse that I so carefully have dress'd!

King Richard.

Rode he on Barbarv/ Tell me, gentle friend,
How went he under him?

Groom.

So proudly, as if he did disdain'd the ground.

King Richard.

So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back?
That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand; This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.

[down.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall (Since pride must have a fall) and break the neck.

Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse;
And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spur-gall'd, and tir'd, by jaunting Bolingbroke.

Enter Keeper, with a Dish.

Keeper.

Fellow, give place: here is no longer stay.

[To the Groom.

King Richard.

If thou love me, 'tis time thou went away.

Groom.

What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.

[Exit.

Keeper.

My lord, will you please me to fall to?

King Richard.

Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.

Keeper.

My lord, I dare not: sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary.

King Richard.

The devil take Sir Henry of Lancaster, and thee! Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Strikes the Keeper.

Keeper.

Help, help, help!

Enter Sir Pierce of Exton, and Servants, armed.

King Richard.

How now! what means death in this rude assault?

[Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instru-

Snatching a weapon, and killing one.

Go]
Go thou, and fill another room in hell.

(He kills another: Exton strikes him down.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggerst thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand

Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own
Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high,
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. )

Exton.

As full of valor, as of royal blood:
Both have I spilt: O, would the deed were good!
For now the devil, that told me I did well,
Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead king to the living king I'll bear.—

Take hence the rest, and give them burial here. )

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Windsor. An Apartment in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter Bolingbroke, and York, with Lords and Attendants.

Bolingbroke.

Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear Is, that the rebels have consum'd with fire Our town of Ciceter in Gloustershire;
But whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome, my lord. What is the news?

Northumberland.

First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness:
The next news is.—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and
The manner of their taking may appear. [Kent: At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper

Bolingbroke.

We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter Fitzwater.

Fitzwater.

My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Lords, Officers, Sheriff, Vintner, Chamberlain, Drawers, Carriers, Travellers, and Attendants.

SCENE, England.

ACT I.

Enter King Henry, Westmoreland, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King Henry.
S0 shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted peace to pant,
And breathe short-windèd accents of new broils
To be commenc'd in stronds afar remote.
No more the thirsty entrance of this soil
Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood;
No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
Nor bruise her bowrets with the armed hoofs
Of hostile paces: those opposed eyes,
Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
All of one nature, of one substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock
And furious close of civil butchery,
Shall now, in mutual, well-beseeming ranks,
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies:
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his master. Therefore, as far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
Friends, whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross,
We are impressed, and engag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy,

WESTMORELAND.

Whose arms were moulded in their mother's womb
To chase these pagans, in those holy fields,
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter cross.
But this our purpose is a twelve-month old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meet not now.—Then, let me hear
Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree,
In forwarding this dear expedition.

WESTMORELAND.

My liege, this haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the charge set down
But yesternight; when, all athwart, there came
A post from Wales laden with heavy news;
Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welchman taken,
A thousand of his people butchered;
Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welchwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of.

KING HENRY.
It seems, then, that the tidings of this brut
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

WESTMORELAND.
Westmoreland.

This, match'd with other, did, my gracious lord;
For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did import.
On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met;
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour,
As by discharge of their artillery
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

King Henry.

Here is a dear, a true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome
The earl of Douglas is discomfited; [news.
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
Balk'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains: of prisoners, Hotspur
Mordake earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas, and the earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith;
And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha! cousin, is it not?

Westmoreland.

In faith,
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

King Henry.

Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin.
In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father to so blest a son:
A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant;
Who is sweet fortune's minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O! that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet;
Then, would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts. — What think you, coz,
Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpriz'd,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

Westmoreland.

This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester,
Malevolent to you in all aspects; [up
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle
The crest of youth against your dignity.

King Henry.

But I have sent for him to answer this;
And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.
Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor: so inform the lords;
But come yourself with speed to us again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.

Westmoreland.

I will, my liege. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. Another Apartment
In the Palace.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, and Falstaff.

Falstaff.

Now, Hal; what time of day is it, lad?

Prince Henry.

Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou would'st truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd taffeta, I see no reason why thou should'st be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

Falstaff.

Indeed, you come near me, now, Hal; for we, that take purses, go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phoebus.—he, "that wandering knight so fair." And, I pray thee, sweet wag, when thou hast kindled me— as, God save thy grace, majesty, I should say, for grace thou wilt have none,—

Prince Henry.

What! none?

Falstaff.

No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

Prince Henry.

Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.

Falstaff.

Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's beauty: let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say, we be men of good government, being governed as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

Prince Henry.

Thou say'st well, and it holds well, too, for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men, doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most disolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay by; and spent with crying—bring in; now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Falstaff.

By the Lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

Prince Henry.

As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Falstaff.

How now, how now, mad wag! what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

Prince Henry.

Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Falstaff.

Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning, many a time and oft.

Prince
Prince Henry.

I see a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to purse-taking.

Falstaff.

Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation.

Polins. — Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match. — O! if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain, that ever cried, Stand up! to a true man.

Prince Henry.

Good morrow, Ned.

Polins.

Good morrow, sweet Hal. — What says monsieur Renmore? What says Sir John Sack-and-Sugar? Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good-Friday last, for a cup of Madeira, and a cold capon's leg?

Prince Henry.

Sir John stands to his word: the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs; he will give the devil his due.

Polins.

Then, art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

Prince Henry.

Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

Polins.

But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill. There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have visors for you all, you have horses for yourselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester; I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Falstaff.

Hear ye, Yedwards: If I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Polins.

You will, chaps?

Falstaff.

Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prince Henry.

Falstaff.

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou canst not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings.

Prince Henry.

Well then, once in my days I'll be a madcap.

Falstaff.

Why, that's well said.

Prince Henry.

Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Falstaff.

By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

Prince Henry.

I care not.

Polins.

Sir John, I pr'ythee, leave the prince and me alone: I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.
Falstaff.

Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap.

Prince Henry.

Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallowen summer! [Exit Falstaff.

Polonius.

Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Goodskill, shall rob those men that we have already way-laid: yourself and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head off from my shoulders.

Prince Henry.

How shall we part with them in setting forth?

Polonius.

Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fall; and then will they advance upon the exploit themselves, which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

Prince Henry.

Yea, but 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Polonius.

Tut! our horses they shall not see; I'll tie them in the wood: our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce, to imnask our noted outward garments.

Prince Henry.

Yea, but I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Polonius.

Well, for two of them, I know them to be true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtu of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper; how thirty at least he fought with; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof of this lie none the less.

Prince Henry.

Well, I'll go with thee: provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewell.

Polonius.

Farewell, my lord. [Exit Polonius.

Prince Henry.

I know you all, and will a while uphold The unyok'd humour of your idleness: Yet herein will I imitate the sun, Who doth permit the base contagious clouds To smother up his beauty from the world, That when he please again to be himself, Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at, By breaking through the soul and ugly mists Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him. If all the year were playing holidays, To sport would be as tedious as to work; But when they seldom come, they wish'd for And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents, [come, So, when this loose behaviour I throw off, And pay the debt I never promised, By how much better than my word I am, By so much shall I falsify men's hopes; And, like bright metal on a sullen ground, My reformation, glittering o'er my fault, Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes, Than that which hath no foil to set it off. I'll so offend, to make so perfect skill Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.

SCENE III. The same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King Henry.

My blood hath been too cold and temperate, Unapt to stir at these indignities, And you have found me; for, accordingly, You tread upon my patience: but, be sure, I will from henceforth rather be myself, Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition, Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down, And therefore lost that title of respect, [proud. Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the Worcester.

Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves The scourg of greatness to be used on it; And that same greatness, too, which our own Have hoip to make so poity. [hands

Northumberland.

My lord,—

King Henry.

Worcester, get thee gone; for I do see Danger and disobedience in thine eye, O, sir! your presence is too bold and peremptory, And majesty might never yet endure The moody frontier of a servent brow. You have good leave to leave us; when we need Your use and counsel, we shall send for you— [Exit Worcester.

You were about to speak. [To Northumberland.

Northumberland.

Yea, my good lord. [manned, Those princes in your highness' name de- Which Harry Percy, here, at Holmedon took, Were, as he says, not with such strength denied As is deliver'd to your majesty: Either envy, therefore, or misprision Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hotspur.

My liege, I did deny no prisoners; But, I remember, when the fight was done, When I was dry with rage, and extreme toil, Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword, Came there a certain lord, neat, and trimly dress'd, Fresh as a bridegroom: and his chin, new rapped, Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home: He was perfum'd like a milliner, And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held A pouncet-box, which ever and anon He gave his nose, and took't away again; Who, therewith angry, when it next came there, Took it in snuff,—and still he smil'd, and talk'd; And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly, To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse Betwixt the wind and his nobility. With many holiday and lady terms He question'd me; among the rest, demanded My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf. I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold, To be so pester'd with a popinjay, Out of my grief and my impatience, Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what,
Heshould, or he should not; for he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,
Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark!
And telling me, the sovereign'th thing on earth
Was fashioned for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous salt-petre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and, but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.
This baid, unjointed chat of his, my lord,
I answer'd indirectly, as I said;
And, I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation.
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt.
The circumstance consider'd, good my lord,
Whate'er Lord Harry Percy then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest conjoin'd,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.

King Henry.
Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
But with proviso, and exception,
That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against that great magician, damnd'Glendower,
Whose daughter, as we hear, that earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall our coffers, then,
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason, and intent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost,
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hotspur.
Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Seern's soldey, in
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower.
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink,
Upon agreement, of swift Seern's flood;
Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Hunt fearfully among the trebling reeds,
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
Blood-stained with these valiant combatants.
Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly:
Then, let him not be slander'd with revolt.

King Henry.
Thou dost belibe him, Percy, thou dost belie
He never did encounter with Glendower. [him: 1 tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
And thou not anathem'd allah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send you your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displeasure you.—My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son.—
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exit King Henry, Blunt, and Train.

Hotspur.
And if the devil come and roar for them,
I will not send them — I will after straight,
And tell him so; for I will case my heart.
Albeit I make a hazard of my head.

Northumberland.
What I drink with a cholér? stay, and pause
Here comes your uncle. [awhile:

Re-enter Worcester.

Hotspur.
Speak of Mortimer!
'Zounds! I will speak of him; and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
Yea, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop i' the dust,
But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer
As high i' the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrane and canker'd Bolingbroke.

Northumberland.
Brother, [To Worcester.] the king hath made your nephew mad.

Worcester.
Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hotspur.
He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
And when I urg'd the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother, then his check look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Worcester.
I cannot blame him. Was he not proclaim'd,
By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

Northumberland.
He was: I heard the proclamation:
And then it was when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon !) did set forth
Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he intercepted did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murdered.

Worcester.
And for whose death, we in the world's wide
Live scandaliz'd, and fouly spoken of. [mourn

Hotspur.
But, soft! I pray you, did king Richard, then, Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

Northumberland.
He did: myself did hear it.

Hotspur.
Nay then, I cannot blame his cousin king,
That wish'd him on the barren mountains starve.
But shall it be, that you, that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man,
And for his sake wear the detested blot
Of murderer's subornation, shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the agents, or base second means,
The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?—
O! pardon me, that I descend so low,
To show the line, and the predicament,
Wherein you range under this subtle king.
Shall it for shame be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power,
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf.—
(As both of you, God pardon it! have done)—
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose.
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke! And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken, That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off By him, for whom these shames ye underwent? No I yet time serves, wherein you may redeem Your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves Into the good thought of the world again. Revenge the jeering, and disdain'd contempt, Of this proud king; who studies day and night To answer all the debt he owes to you, Even with the bloody payment of your deaths. Therefore, I say,—

Worc. Peace, cousin I say no more. And now I will unclasp a secret book, And to your quick-conceiving discontents I'll read you matter deep and dangerous; As full of peril and adventurous spirit, As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud, On the unsteady-footing of a spear.

Hotspur. If he fall in, good night!—or sink or swim, Send danger from the east unto the west, So honour cross it, from the north to south, And let them grapple:—O! the blood more stirs, To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

Northumberland. Imagination of some great exploit Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hotspur. By heaven, methinks. It were an easy leap, To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon; Or dive into the bottom of the deep, Where Fathom-line could never touch the ground, And pluck up drowned honour by the locks, So he that doth redeem her thence might wear Without corrival all her dignities: But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Worc. He apprehends a world of figures here, But not the form of what he should attend.— Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hotspur. I cry you mercy.

Worc. Those same noble Scots, That are your prisoners,—

Hotspur. I'll keep them all. By God, he shall not have a Scot of them: No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not. I'll keep them, by this hand.

Worc. You start away, And lend no ear unto my purposes. Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hotspur. Nay, I will; that's flat. He said, he would not ransom Mortimer; Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer; But, I will find him when he lies asea! And in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer! Nay, I'll have a starving shall be taught to speak Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him, To keep his anger still in motion.

Worc. Hear you, cousin, and attend,

Hotspur. All studies here I solemnly defy, Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke: And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales, But that I think his father loves him not, And would be glad he met with some mischance, I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Worc. Farewell, kinman. I will talk to you, When you are better temper'd to attend.

Northumberland. Why, what a warp-stung and impatient fool Art thou to break into this woman's mood, Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own! Hotspur. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods, Netted, and stung with pismires, when I hear Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke. In Richard's time,—what do ye call the place? A plague upon't.—It is in Gloucestershire: —'Twas where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept, His uncle York,—where I first bow'd my knee Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke, 'Sblood! I was so you and he came back from Ravenspur.

Northumberland. At Berkeley castle.

Hotspur. You say true.— Why, what a cane'd deal of courtesy This fawning greyhound then did proffer me! Look,—"when his infant fortune came to age," And,—"gentle Harry Percy," and,—"kind cousin," [me!]:— O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive Good uncle, tell your tale: I have done.

Worc. Nay, if you have not, to't again, We'll stay your leisure.

Hotspur. I have done, i'th' faith.

Worc. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners. Deliver them up without their ransom straight, And make the Douglas' son your only mean For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons Which I shall send you written, be assur'd, Will easily be granted you.—My lord, [To Northumberland. Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd, Shall secretly into the bosom creep Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd, The archbishop.

Hotspur. Of York, is it not?

Worc. True; who bears hard His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop. I speak not this in estimation, As what I think might be, but what I know Is ruminated, plotted, and set down; And only stays but to behold the face Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hotspur. I smell it: Upon my life, it will do wondrous well.

Northumberland. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st slip.

Hotspur. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot.— And then the power of Scotland, and of York, To join with Mortimer, ha?—

Worc. And so they shall.

Hotspur. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Worc.
KING HENRY IV.

ACT II. SC. I.

Worcester.

And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head;
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt,
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home:
And see already how be doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hotspur.

He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd on him.

Worcester.

Cousin, farewell.—No farther go in this,
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, (which will be suddenly)
I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer;
Where you, and Douglas, and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

Northumberland.

Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust.

Hotspur.

Uncle, adieu. - Of let the hours be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a Lantern in his hand.

First Carrier.

H EIGH ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ostler.

Anon, anon.

First Carrier. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.

Enter another Carrier.

Second Carrier.

Pens and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor Jades the bots: this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

First Carrier.

Poor fellow! I never joyed since the price of oats rose: it was the death of him.

I think, this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am sting like a tench.

First Carrier.

Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit, than I have been since the first cock.

Second Carrier.

Why, they will allow us ne'er a Jordan, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach.

First Carrier.

What, ostler! I come away and be hanged; come away.

Second Carrier.

I have a gammon of bacon, and two rases of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

First Carrier.

'Od'sbody! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved.—What, ostler! - A plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An 'were not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain.—Come, and be hanged:—hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gadshill.

Gadshill.

Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

First Carrier.

I think it be two o'clock.

Gadshill.

I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

First Carrier.

Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick worth two of that, I' faith.

Gadshill.

I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

Second Carrier.

Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend me thy lantern, quoth a?—marr, I'll see thee hanged first.

Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

Second Carrier.

Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen: they will along with company, for they have great charges.

[Exeunt Carriers.

Gadshill.

What, ho! chamberlain!

Chamberlain.

At hand, quoth pick-purse.

Gadshill.

That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain: for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Chamberlain.

Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight: there's a franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper: a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gadshill.

Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Chamberlain.

No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman; for, I know, thou worship'st saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gadshill.

What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows; for, if I hang, old sir John hangs with me, and thou knowest he's no starving. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace, that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers, no long-staff, sixpenny strikers: none of these mud, mustachio purple-hued mail-worms; but with nobility and tranquillity; burgomasters, and great oneys; such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: and yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.

Chamberlain.

What! the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way? Gadsbhill.

She will, she will; justice hath liquored her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Chamberlain.

Nay, by my faith; I think you are more holding to the night, than to fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gadsbhill.

Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.

Chamberlain.

Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

Gadsbhill.

Go to; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Road by Gadsbhill.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins; Bardolph and Peto, at some distance.

Poins.

Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff’s horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet.

Prince Henry.

Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Falstaff.

Poins! Poins, and be hanged! Poins! Prince Henry.

Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a braving dost thou keep?

Falstaff.

Where’s Poins, Hal?

Prince Henry.

He is walked up to the top of the hill: I’ll go seek him. [Pretends to seek Poins.

Falstaff.

I am accursed to rob in that thief’s company: the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire further afoot I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I escape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forswept his company any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue’s company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I’ll be hang’d; it could not be else: I have drunk medicines.—Poins!—Hal! a plague upon you both!—Bardolph!—Peto!—I’ll starve, ere I’ll rob a foot further. An’twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight years of uneven ground is three score and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon’t, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle—Whew!—A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues: give me my horse, and be hanged.

Prince Henry.

Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down: lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Falstaff.

Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? ’Sblood! I’ll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father’s exchequer. What a plague mean ye to cot in me thus?

Prince Henry.

Thou liest: thou art not coltled, thou art uncolted.

Falstaff.

I pr’ythee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse; good king’s son.

Prince Henry.

Out, you rogue! I shall be your ostler?

Falstaff.

Go, hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta’en, I’ll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison: when a jest is so forward, and afoot too,—I hate it.

Enter Gadsbhill.

Gadsbhill.

Stand.

Falstaff.

So I do, against my will.

Poins.

O! ’tis our setter: I know his voice.

Enter Bardolph.

Bardolph.

What news?

Gadsbhill.

Case ye, case ye; on with your visors: there’s money of the king’s coming down the hill; ’tis going to the king’s exchequer.

Falstaff.

You lie, you rogue: ’tis going to the king’s tavern.

Gadsbhill.

There’s enough to make us all.

Falstaff.

To be hanged.

Prince Henry.

Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower: if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto.

But how many be there of them?

Gadsbhill.

Some eight, or ten.

Falstaff.

Zounds! will they not rob us?

Prince Henry.

What, a coward, sir John Paunch?

Falstaff.

Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

Prince
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Act 2, Sc. 2.
Prince Henry.
Well, we leave that to the proof.
Poins.

Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge:
when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him.
Farewell, and stand fast.
Falstaff.

Now cannot I strike him, if I should be

Prince Henry.
Ned, [Aside to Poins] where are our disguises?
Poins.

Here, hard by: stand close.
[Exeunt Prince Henry and Poins.
Falstaff.

Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say 1:
every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.
First Traveller.

Come, neighbour: the boy shall lead our horses down the hill; we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves.

Jesu bless us!
Falstaff.

Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats.
Ah! whorson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves!
their hate us youth: down with them: fleece them.

First Traveller.
O! we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.
Falstaff.

Hang ye, gorbellied knaves. Are ye undone?
No, ye fat chufffs; I would, your store were here! On, bacons, on! What! ye knaves, young men must live. You are grand-jurors are ye?
We'll jure ye, I' faith,
[Exeunt Falstaff, &c. driving the Travellers out.

Re-enter Prince Henry and Poins.

Prince Henry.
The thieves have bound the true men. Now could they and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laught for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins.

Stand close; I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Falstaff.

Come, my masters: let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring:
there's no more valour in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

Prince Henry.

Your money.
[Pushing out upon them.

Poins.

Villains. [As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. They all run away, and Falstaff, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.]

Prince Henry.

Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse:
The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear
So strangely, that they dare not meet each other;
Each takes his fellow for an officer.
Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death,

And lards the lean earth as he walks along:
Wer't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins.

How the rogue roard'd!

SCENE III. Warwick. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hotspur, reading a Letter.

—"But for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house."—He could be contented,—why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. "The purpose you undertake, is dangerous;"—Why, that's certain: 'tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord foul, out of this nestle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.
"The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain; the time itself unsorted, and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition."— Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow coward, and you lie.
What a lackbrain is this! By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid; our friends ture and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends.
"What a frosty-spirited rogue is this! Why, your lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. 'Zounds!
and I were now by this rascal, I could train him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and my my lord. Edmund Mortimer: my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month, and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action. Hang him! let him tell the king:
we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady Percy.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady Percy.

Q, my good lord! why are you thus alone?
For what offence have I this fortnight been A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? [Thee
Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth,
And start so often when thou sit'st alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks,
And given me treasures, and my rights of thee,
To thick-ey'd musing, and curst'ly melancholy?
In thy thin slumber. I by thee we wake'd, And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars:
Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed; Cry, "Courage!—to the field!" And thou hast hast talk'd
Of salles, and retires; of trenches, tents,
Of palisadoes, frontiers, parapets;
Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin:
Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,
And all the currents of a heavy fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath been so hot war;
And thus hast so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep,
That
That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
Like bubbles in a late disturbed stream:
And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden hest. O! what portents are these?
Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hotspur.

What, ho! is Gliddams with the packet gone?

Enter Servant.

Servant.

He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hotspur.

Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Servant.

One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hotspur.

What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Servant.

It is, my lord.

Hotspur.

That foan shall be my throne.
Well, I will back him straight: O, esperance!
Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady Percy.

But hear you, my lord.

Hotspur.

What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady Percy.

What is it carries you away?

Hotspur.

Why, my horse,
My love, my horse.

Lady Percy.

Out, you mad-headed ape!
A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen,
As you are toss'd with. In faith,
I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.
I fear, my brother Mortimer doth sit
About his title; and hath sent for you,
To line his enterprize: but if you go—

Hotspur.

So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady Percy.

Come, come, you paragon, answer me
Directly unto this question that I ask.
In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry,
An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hotspur.

Away!
Away, you trifler! — Love? — I love thee not,
I care not for thee, Kate. This is no world,
To play with mambets, and to tilt with lips:
We must have bloody noses, and crack'd crowns,
And pass them current too. — Gods me, my horse!
What say'st thou, Kate? what would'st thou have with me?

Lady Percy.

Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?
Well, do not then; for since you love me not,
I will not love myself. Do you not love me?
Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no?

Hotspur.

Come; wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am o' horseback, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;
I must not have you henceforth question me
Whither I go, nor reason whereabout;
Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,
This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.
I know you wise; but yet no farther wise
Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are;
But yet a woman; and I can see,
No lady closer; for I well believe
Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;
And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

Lady Percy.

How I so far?

Hotspur.

Not an inch farther. But hark you, Kate?
Whither I go, thither shall you go too;
To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.
Will this content you, Kate?

Lady Percy.

It must, of force. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter Prince Henry and Poin's.

Prince Henry.

Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poin's.

Where hast been, Hal?

Prince Henry.

With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four-score hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leath of drawers, and can call them all by their Christian names, as— Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but prince of Water, yet I am the king of courtesy, and tell me flatly
I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Co-rinthan, a lad of mettle, a good boy, (by the Lord, so they call me,) and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying scare; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry hem! and bid you play it off. — To conclude, I am so good a proficent in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennypworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an under-skinner; one that never spake other English in his life, than — Eight shillings and sixpence,— and —
"You are welcome!" with this shrill addition,—"Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-Moon," or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time fist Falstaff come, I pr'ythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling — Francis! that his tale to me may be nothing but — anon. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poin's.

Francis!

Prince Henry.

Thou art perfect.

Poin's.

Francis!

[Exit Poin's.

Francis.

Anon, anon, sir. — Look down into the Pomegranate, Ralph.

Prince
Enter Vintner.
Vintner.
What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit Francis.] My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the doors: shall I let them in?

Prince Henry.
Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Points!

Re-enter Points.
Points.
Anon, anon, sir.
Prince Henry.
Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

Points.
As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye: what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? what's the issue?

Prince Henry.
I am now of all humours, that have showed themselves humours, since the old days of goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [Re-enter Francis, with wine.] What's o'clock, Francis?

Francis.
Anon, anon, sir.
Prince Henry.
That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is — up stairs, and down-stairs: his eloquence, the pastil of a reek out of his mouth, am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the North: he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, — "Fie upon this quiet life! I want work." "O my sweet Harry," says she, "how many hast thou killed to-day?" "Give me your roan horse a drench," says he, and answers, "Some fourteen," an hour after: "a trifle, a trifle." — I pr'ythee, call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play dame Mortimer his wife. "Rivo!" says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter Falstaff, Gadshill, Bardolph, and Peto.
Points.
Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Falstaff.
A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! — Give me a cup of sack, boy. — Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! — Give me a cup of sack, rogue. — Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.

Prince Henry.
Didst thou never see Titian kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titian, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun! if thou didst, then behold that compound.

Falstaff.
You rogue, here's lime in this sack too: there is nothing but roguey to be found in villainous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it: a villainous coward. — Go thy ways, old Jack: die when thou wilt, if mankind, good mankind, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shoten herring. There lie not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or any thing. A plague of all cowards, I say still.
Act

Prince Henry.

How now, wool-sack! what matter you?

Falstaff.

A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

Prince Henry.

Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Falstaff.

Are you not a coward? answer me to that? and Pons there?

Pons.

'Zounds! ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Falstaff.

I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound, I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders; you care not who sees your back. Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing I give me them that will face me.—Give me a cup of sack: I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

Prince Henry.

O villain! thy lips are scarce wip'd since thou drunk't last.

Falstaff.

All's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

Prince Henry.

What's the matter?

Falstaff.

What's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

Prince Henry.

Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Falstaff.

Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prince Henry.

What, a hundred, man?

Falstaff.

I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw: ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man; all would not do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.

Prince Henry.

Speak, sirs: how was it?

Bardolph.

We four set upon some dozen,—

Falstaff.

Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Bardolph.

And bound them.

Peto.

No, no, they were not bound.

Falstaff.

You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Bardolph.

As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,—

Falstaff.

And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

Prince Henry.

What fought ye with them all?

Falstaff.

All? I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

Prince Henry.

Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Falstaff.

Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal,—if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward:—here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

Prince Henry.

What four? thou saldest but two even now.

Falstaff.

Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Pons.

Ay, ay, he said four.

Falstaff.

These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

Prince Henry.

Seven? why, there were but four even now.

Falstaff.

In buckram.

Pons.

Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Falstaff.

Seven, by these hilt's, or I am a villain else.

Prince Henry.

Pr'ythee, let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Falstaff.

Dost thou hear me, Hal?

Prince Henry.

Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Falstaff.

Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

Prince Henry.

So, two more already.

Falstaff.

Their points being broken,—

Pons.

Down fell their hose.

Falstaff.

Began to give me ground; but I followed me close, came in, foot and hand, and with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

Prince Henry.

O monstrous I eleven buckram men grown out of two.

Falstaff.

But, as the devil would have it, three mishapen knaves, in Kendal green, came at my back and let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy hand.

Prince Henry.

These lies are like the father that begats them; gross as a mountain; open, palpable.

Why;
KING HENRY IV.

Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-keech,—

Falstaff.

What art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prince Henry.

Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou could'st not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this?

Pols.

Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Falstaff.

What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! If reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

Prince Henry.

I'll be no longer guilty of this sin: this sanguine coward, this best-presser, this horse-buck-breaker, this huge hill of flesh; —

Falstaff.

Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, bull's pizzle, you stock-fish,— O, for breath to utter what is like thee! —you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck; —

Prince Henry.

Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Pols.

Mark, Jack.

Prince Henry.

We two saw you four set on four: you bound them, and were masters of their wealth. —Mark now, how plain a tale shall put you down. — Then did we two set on you, and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it: yea, and can show it you here in the house. — And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimblly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-caf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Pols.

Come, let's hear, Jack: what trick hast thou now?

Falstaff.

By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct: the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter, I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee, during my life; I, for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. —Hostess, clap to the doors: watch to-night, pray to-morrow. — Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellow-ship come to you! What shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

Prince Henry.

Content; — and the argument shall be thy running away.

Falstaff.

Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lov'st me.

Enter Hostess.

Hostess.

O Jesu! My lord the prince,—

Prince Henry.

How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me?

Hostess.

Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

Prince Henry.

Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Falstaff.

What manner of man is he?

Hostess.

An old man.

Falstaff.

What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? —Shall I give him his answer?

Prince Henry.

Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Falstaff.

"Faith, and I'll send him packing." [Exit.

Prince Henry.

Now, sirs; by your lady, you fought fair; - so did you, Peto; - so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no; — die!

Bardolph.

"Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prince Henry.

"Faith, tell me now in earnest: how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto.

Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bardolph.

Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear grass, to make them bleed; and then to beslobber our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

Prince Henry.

O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and went taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hast'd fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away: what instinct hadst thou for it?

Bardolph.

My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

Prince Henry.

I do.

Bardolph.

What think you they portend?

Prince Henry.

Hot livers and cold purses.

Bardolph.

Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

Prince Henry.

No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter Falstaff.

Here comes lean Jack; here comes bare-bone. How How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Falstaff.

My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal! I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thum- ring: a plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was sir John Bracy from thy father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy; and he of Wates, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh book,—what, a plaguy, call you him?—

Poins.

O! Glendower.

Falstaff.

Owen, Owen; the same;—and his son-in-law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular.

Prince Henry.

He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Falstaff.

You have hit it.

Prince Henry.

So did he never the sparrow.

Falstaff.

Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run.

Prince Henry.

Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running?

Falstaff.

O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not budge a foot.

Prince Henry.

Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Falstaff.

I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away to-night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news: you may buy land now as cheap as stinking seckarel.

Prince Henry.

Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Falstaff.

By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like, we shall have good trading that way,—But, tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly absurd? thou being heir apparent, couldst the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

Prince Henry.

Not a whit, I'faith: I lack some of thy instinct.

Falstaff.

Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou love me, practise an answer.

Prince Henry.

Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Falstaff.

Shall I content. This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

Prince Henry.

Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a lenden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

Falstaff.

Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king Cambyses' vein.

Prince Henry.

Well, here is my leg.

Falstaff.

And here is my speech.—Stand aside, nobility.

Hostess.

O, Jesu! This is excellent sport, i' faith.

Falstaff.

Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Hostess.

O, the father! how he holds his countenance.

Falstaff.

For God's sake, lords, convey my trustful queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Hostess.

O, Jesu! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see.

Falstaff.

Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle-brain!—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a fish-hanging of thy nether lip, that dost warrant me. If, then, thou be son to me, here lies the point—why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micer, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile: so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears: not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also. And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

Prince Henry.

What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Falstaff.

A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent: of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by'r lady, inclining to threescore, and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lightly given, he decideth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with the the rest banish. And tell me, now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prince Henry.

Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Falstaff.

Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poultier's hare.

Prince Henry.

Well, here I am set.

Falstaff.

And here I stand.—Judges, my masters.

Prince Henry.

Now, Harry! whence come you?

Falstaff.

My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

Prince Henry.

The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Falstaff.

'Sblood, my lord, they are false:—nay, I'll tickle thee for a young prince, I' faith.

Prince Henry.

Swarest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a ban of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-butch of beadliness, that swolln parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasting Manningtree-ox, with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein in villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falstaff.

I would your grace would take me with you: whom means your grace?

Prince Henry.

That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Salan.

Falstaff.

My lord, the man I know.

Prince Henry.

I know thou dost.

Falstaff.

But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it: but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and marry be a sin, then many an old host I know, is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and, therefore, more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

Prince Henry.

I do, I will.

[Exeunt Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]
Sheriff.
Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock. [Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier]

Prince Henry.
This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.

Peto.
Fait-ja!—fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

Prince Henry.
Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [Peto searches.]—What hast thou found?

Peto.
Nothing but papers, my lord.

Prince Henry.
Let's see what they be: read them.

Peto.
Item, A capon, 2s 2d.
Item, Sauce, 4d.
Item, Sack, two gallons, 5s 8d.
Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper, 2s 6d.
Item, Bread, ob.

Prince Henry.
O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!—What there is else, keep close: we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day, 'till to the court in the morning: we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so good morrow, Peto.

Peto.
Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Bangor, A Room In the Archbishop's House.
Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower.

These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hotspur.
Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower, will you sit down?—And, uncle Worcester. — A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.

Glendower.
No, here it is. Sit, cousin Percy! sit, good cousin Hotspur; For by that name as oft as Lancaster Doth speak of you, His cheek looks pale, and with a rising sigh He wisheth you in heaven.

Hotspur.
And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glendower.
cannot blame him: at my nativity,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning cressets; and at my birth,
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shak'd like a coward.

Hotspur.
Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born.

Glendower.
I say, the earth did shake when I was born.

Hotspur.
And I say the earth was not of my mind,
If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glendower.
The heavens were all on fire; the earth did tremble.

Hotspur.
O! then the earth shook to see the heavens
And not in fear of your nativity. [on fire, Disseased nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange eruptions: oif the teeming earth
Is with a kind of colic pinch'd: and vex'd
By the imprisoning of unruly wind
Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old beldame earth, and topples down
Steeples, and moss-grown towers. At your birth
Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, In passion shook.

Glendower.
Cousin, of many men
I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave
To tell you once again, — that at my birth,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes;
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields.
These signs have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men.
Where is he living, — clipp'd in with the sea
That chides the banks of England, Scotland,
Wales,—
Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hotspur.
I think, there is no man speaks better Welsh.
I'll to dinner.

Mortimer.
Peace, cousin Percy! you will make him mad.

Glendower.
I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hotspur.
Why, so can I, or so can any man;
But will they come, when you do call for them?

Glendower.
Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.

Hotspur.
And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
[devils.]—By telling truth: tell truth, and shame the
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither, [hence.
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him.
O! while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.

Mortimer.
Come, come;
No more of this unprofitable chat.

Glendower.
Three times hath Henry Bellingbroke made head [Wye.]
Against my power: thrice from the banks of
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him, Bootless home, and weather-beaten back.

Hotspur.

Home without boots, and in foul weather too! How 'scape he agues, in the devil's name?

Glendower.

Come, here's the map; shall we divide our right, According to our three-fold order ta'en?

Mortimer.

The archdeacon hath divided it Into three limits, very equally. England, from Trent and Severn hitherto, By south and east is to my part assign'd: All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore, And all the fertile land within that bound, To Owen Glendower:— and, dear coz, to you The remnant northward, lying off from Trent. And our indentures tripartite are drawn, Which being sealed interchangeably, (A business that this night may execute) To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I, And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth, To meet your father, and the Scottish power, As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury. My father Glendower is not ready yet, Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days. [Gather Within that space you may have drawn to Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentle-men.

Glendower.

A shorter time shall afford me to you, lords; And in my conduct shall your ladies come: From whom you now must steal, and take no For there will be a world of water shed, [leave; Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hotspur.

Methinks, my moyley, north from Burton In quantity equals not one of yours. [Here, See, how this river comes me cranking in, And cuts me from the best of all my land A huge half-moon, a monstrous castle out. I'll have the current in this place damn'd up, And here the snug and sliver Trent shall run, In a new channel, fair and evenly: It shall not wind with such a deep indent, To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Glendower.

Not wind? It shall; it must: you see, it doth.

Mortimer.

Yea, but mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up With like advantage on the other side; Gelding the opposed continent, as much As on the other side it takes from you.

Worcester.

Yea, but a little charge will trench him here, And on this north side win this cape of land; And then he runs straight and even.

Hotspur.

I'll have it so: a little charge will do it.

Glendower.

I will not have it alter'd.

Hotspur.

Will not you?

Glendower.

No, nor you shall not.

Hotspur.

Who shall say me nay?

Glendower.

Why, that will I.
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you,
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain:
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loreseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Reguling them over commendation.

Hotspur.
Well, I am school'd: good manners be your speed!
Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter Glendower, with the Ladies.
Mortimer.
This is the deadly spite that anger's me,
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glendower.
My daughter weeps: she will not part with She'll be a soldier too; she'll to the wars.
[you,
Mortimer.
Good father, tell her, that she, and my aunt
Shall follow in your conduct speedily.
[Percy,
[Glendower speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.
Glendower.
She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry, one
That no persuasion can do good upon.
[She speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Mortimer.
I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens,
I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley would I answer thee.
[She speaks again.
I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as dainties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glendower.
Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.
[She speaks again.
Mortimer.
O! I am ignorance itself in this.

Glendower.
She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
 Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mortimer.
With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glendower.
Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
Come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady Percy.
Go, ye giddy goose.
[The Music Plays.

Hotspur.
Now I perceive, the devil understands Welsh;
And 'tis no marvel, he is so humorous.
By'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady Percy.
Then, should you be nothing but musical,
For you are altogether governed by humours.
Lie still, ye thiefs, and hear the lady sing
In Welsh.

Hotspur.
I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.
Lady Percy.
Would'st thou have thy head broken?
Hotspur.
No.
Lady Percy.
Then be still.
Hotspur.
Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.
Lady Percy.
Now, God help thee!

Hotspur.
To the Welsh lady's bed.
Lady Percy.
What's that?

Hotspur.
Peace! she sings.
[A Welsh Song by Lady Mortimer.
Hotspur.
Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.
Lady Percy.
Not mine, in good sooth.

Hotspur.
Not yours, in good sooth!  'Heart! you swear like a comfit-maker's wife.  Not you, in good sooth; and, as true as I live; and, as God shall mend me; and, as sure as day:
And giv'at such sarcenet surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk'dst farther than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good-mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth,
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards, and Sunday-citizens.
Come, sing.

Lady Percy.
I will not sing.

Hotspur.
'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or he red-breast teacher.  An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will.
[Exit.

Glendower.

Come, come, lord Mortimer; you are as slow,
As hot lord Percy is on fire to go.
By this our book is draw'n; we'll but seal,
And to horse immediately.
[then Mortimer.
With all my heart.  [Exeunt.

SCENE II.  London.  A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Prince of Wales, and Lords.

King Henry.
Lords, give us leave.  The Prince of Wales and I, [at hand,
Must have some private conference: but be near
For we shall presently have need of you.
[Exeunt Lords.
I know
Act III. Sc. ii.
KING HENRY IV.

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
Thou in his service, and out of my blood,
He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe, that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the cold revenge,
To punish me, that mistakingly,
Tell me else,
Could such inordinate, and low desires, [temp
Such poor, such base, such low, such mean at Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art mark'd: without, every friend to,
According to the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

Prince Henry.

So please your majesty, I would, I could
Quitt all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal;
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,
By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers,
I have my share to some things true, and laid my youth
Hath faulty wander'd, and irregular
Find pardon on my true submission.

King Henry.

Godd pardon thee!—yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy matters.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court, and princes of my blood;
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophetically do fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stately and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession,
And left me in repeuteless banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But like a wonder it was to admire; [De:
That men would tell their children, "This is Others would say,—" Where? which is Boiling
And thou, that I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress'd myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new;
My presence, like a rebe pontifical,
Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,
Seldom, but summptuous, showed like a feast;
And won by rareness such solemnity.
The skimming king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jester, and rash knave wits,
Soon kindled, and soon burn'd: car'ded his state,
Mingled his royalty with capring fools;
Had his great name profan'd with their scorns;
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To such as gave in receipts, and stood the push
Of every beardless vain comparative:
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff'd himself to popularity;
That being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
That worn and weigh'd with vanity; and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.
So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes,
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afferd no extraordinary gaze,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes; [down,
But rather drov'd, and hung their eye-lids
Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries,
Being with his presence gladd'd, gorg'd, and, full.
And in that very line, Harry, stand at thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
With vile participation: not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine which hath desir'd so much thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

Prince Henry.

I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord,
Be more myself.

King Henry.

For all the world,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Raneupurg;
And even as I was then, is Percy now.
Now by my scepter, and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state,
Than thou the shadow of succession:
For of right, not colour like to inherit,
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm,
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws,
And, being more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas; whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Hol'ds from all soldiers chief major,
And military title capital.
[Christ.
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing
This infant warrior, in his enterprises [clothes,
Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him once,
Enlarg'd him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northum-
ber-land,
The arch-enemy's grace of York, Douglas, Morcapitulate against us, and are up. [timer
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my near'st and dearest enemy?
Though that art like enough, through touchful fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

Prince Henry.

Do not think so; you shall not find it so:
And God forgive them, that so much have way'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my honour, such as in a bloody mask,
[Wash'd, shall my shame with
And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of andHarry, chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm,
"Would they were multitudes; and on my head
My shames redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.

Percy
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up,
Yes, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which, if he be pleased, I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty, may save
The sirr-soured wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

King Henry.
A hundred thousand rebels die in this Thou shalt have charge, and sovereign trust herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt.
So hath the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word, that Douglas, and the English rebels met,
The eleventh of this month, at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever offer'd foul play in a state.

King Henry.
The earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day,
With him my son, lord John of Lancaster;
For this advertisement is five days old,—
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set for:
On Thursday we ourselves will march: [ward;
Our meeting is Bridgnorth; and, Harry, you
Shall match through Glosstershire; by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Eastcheap. A Room in the Boat's Head Tavern.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff.
Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle?
Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown: I am wither'd like an old apple-John.
Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church!
Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bardolph.
Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Falstaff.
Why, there is it,—Come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need be: virtuous enough: swore little; dined not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter,—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well, and in good company; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bardolph.
Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Falstaff.
Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop,—but 'tis in the nose of thee:
thou art the knight of the burning lamp.

Bardolph.
Why, sir John, my face does you no harm.

Falstaff.
No; I'll be sworn, I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head, or a momento mori: I never see thy face, but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face: my oath should be, By this fire, that's God's angel: but thou art altogether given over, and wert, indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gisli-hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wild-fire, there's no purchase in money. O! thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bomfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drank me would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the dearest Chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years: God reward me for it!

Bardolph.
'Sblood! I would my face were in your belly.

Falstaff.
God-a-mercy! I should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Partlet the hen? have you inquired yet who picked my pocket?

Hostess.
Why, sir John, what do you think, sir John?
Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the title of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Falstaff.
You lie, hostess: Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked. Go to, you are a woman; go.

Hostess.
was never called so in mine own house before.

Falstaff.
Go to; I know you well enough.

Hostess.
No, sir John; you do not know me, sir John:
I know you, sir John: you owe me money, sir
John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Falstaff.
Dowla's, filthy dowla's: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.

Hostess.
Now, as I am a true woman, hollard of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Falstaff.
Falstaff. He had his part of it: let him pay.

Hostess. He? alas! he is poor: he hath nothing.

Falstaff. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make me a younger of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal ring of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Hostess. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Falstaff. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, faith? must we all march?

Bardolph. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion?

Hostess. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

Prince Henry. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well: he is an honest man.

Hostess. Good my lord, hear me.

Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

Prince Henry. What sayest thou, Jack?

Falstaff. The other night I fell asleep, here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

Prince Henry. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Falstaff. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal ring of my grandfather's.

Prince Henry. A trifle; some eight-penny matter.

Hostess. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so; and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said, he would cudgel you.

Prince Henry. What! he did not?

Hostess. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Falstaff. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Hostess. Say, what thing? what thing?

Falstaff. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Hostess. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou should' s't know it; I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Falstaff. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Hostess. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Prince Henry. An otter, sir John: why an otter?

Falstaff. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Hostess. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

Prince Henry. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Hostess. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince Henry. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound?

Falstaff. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Hostess. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Falstaff. Did I, Bardolph?

Bardolph. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Falstaff. Yea; if he said my ring was copper.

Prince Henry. I say, 'tis copper: darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Falstaff. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

Prince Henry. And why not, as the lion?

Falstaff. The king himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God, my girdle break!

Prince Henry. O! if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long winded? If thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain: and yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not ashamed?
Falstaff.
Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocence, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you picked my pocket?

Prince Henry.
It appears so by the story.

Falstaff.
Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified. — Still? — Nay, pr'ythee, begone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad,—how is that answered?

Prince Henry.
O! my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee. — The money is paid back again.

Falstaff.
O! I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double labour.

Prince Henry.
I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Falstaff.
Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bardolph.
Do, my lord.

Prince Henry.
I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Falstaff.
I would, it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O, for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

Prince Henry.
Bardolph!

My lord.

Prince Henry.
Go bear this letter to lord John of Lancaster, To my brother John; this to my lord of Westmoreland.—Go, Pints, to horse, to horse! for thou, and I, Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.—Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall At two o'clock in the afternoon: There shalt thou know thy charge; and there Money, and order for their furniture. [receive The land is burning, Percy stands on high, And either they, or we, must lower lie. [Exeunt Prince, Pints, and Bardolph.

Falstaff.
Rare words! brave words! — Hostess, my breakfast; come. — O! I could wish, this tavern were my drum.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.
Enter Hotspur, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hotspur.
WELL said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth, In this fine age were not thought flattering,

Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. By God, I cannot flatter: I defy The tongues of soother; but a braver place In my heart's love hath no man than yourself. Nay, task me to my word; approve me, lord.

Douglas.
Thou art the king of honour:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground, But I will bear him.

Hotspur.
Do so, and 'tis well.—
Enter a Messenger, with Letters.

What letters hast thou there? — I can but thank you.

Messenger.
These letters come from your father.

Hotspur.
Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Messenger.
He cannot come, my lord: he's grievous sick.

Hotspur.
'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick, In such a justling time? Who leads his power? Under whose government come they along?

Messenger.
His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Worcester.
I pr'ythee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Messenger.
He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth; And at the time of my departure thence, He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Worcester.
I would the state of time had first been whole, Ere he by sickness had been visited: His health was never better worth than now.

Hotspur.
Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth in-
The very life-blood of our enterprize:

Tis catching bither, even to our camp. He writes me here,—that inward sickness— And that his friends by deputation could not So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet, To lay so dangerous and dear a trust On any soul remov'd, but on his own. Yet doth he give us bold advertisement, That with our small conjunction we should on, To see how fortune is dispose'd to us; For, as he writes, there is no quelling now, Because the king is certainly possess'd Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Worcester.
Your father's sickness is a maim to us.

Hotspur.
A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off! — And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want Seems more than we shall find it.—Were it To set the exact wealth of all our states [good, All at one cast? to set so rich a main On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour? It were not good, for therein should we read The very bottom and the soul of hope, The very list, the very utmost bound Of all our fortunes.

Douglas.
'Faith, and so we should, Where now remains a sweet reversion:

We
KING HENRY IV.

ACT IV. Sc. II.

We may boldly spend upon the hope Of what is to come in: A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hotspur.

A rendezvous, a home to fly unto, If that the devil and mishance look big Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Worcester.

But yet, I would your father had been here. The quality and hair of our attempt Brooks no division: it will be thought By some, that know not why he is away, That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence. And think, how such an apprehension May turn the tide of fearful faction, And breed a kind of question in our cause: For, well you know, we of the offering side Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement, And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence The eye of reason may pry in upon us.

This absence of your father's draws a curtain, That shows the ignorant a kind of fear Before not dreamt of.

Hotspur.

You strain too far.

I, rather, of his absence make this use:— It lends a lustre, and more great opinion, A larger dare to our great enterprise, Than if the earl were here: for men must think, If we, without his help, can make a head To push against the kingdom, with his help, We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.— Yet all goes well; yet all our joints are whole.

Douglas.

As heart can think: there is not such a word Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hotspur.

My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul. Vernon.

Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord. The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong, is marching hitherwards; with him, prince John.

Hotspur.

No harm: what more?

Vernon.

And farther, I have learn'd, The king himself in person is set forth, Or hitherwards intended speedily, With strong and mighty preparation.

Hotspur.

He shall be welcome too. Where is his son, The nimble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales, And his comrades, that daff'd the world aside, And bid it pass?

Vernon.

All furnish'd, all in arms, All plum'd like estridges, that with the wind Bated, like eagles having lately bated 'd; Glittering in golden cloaks, like images; As full of spirit as the mouth of May, And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer; Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls. I saw young Harry, with his beaver on, His cuisses on his shins, gallantly arm'd, Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury, And vaulted with such ease into his seat, As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds, To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus, And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hotspur.

No more, no more: worse than the sun in March.

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come: They come like sacrifices in their trim, And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war, All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them: The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit, Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire, To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh, And yet not ours.—Come, let me taste my horse, Who is to bear me, like a thunderbolt, Against the bosom of the prince of Wales: Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse, Meet, and ne'er part, till one drop down a O, that Glendower were come! [corse.— Vernon.

There is more news:

I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Douglas.

That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Worcester.

Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hotspur.

What may the king's whole battle reach unto?

Vernon.

To thirty thousand.

Hotspur.

Forty let it be:

My father and Glendower being both away, The powers of us may serve so great a day. Come, let us take a muster speedily: Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Douglas.

Talk not of dying: I am out of fear Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.

SCENE II. A public Road near Coventry.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff.

Bardolph, get thee to Coventry: fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton-Colfield to-night.

Bardolph.

Will you give me money, captain?

Falstaff.

Lay out, lay out.

Bardolph.

This bottle makes an angel.

Falstaff.

An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the colnagne. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bardolph.

I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.

Falstaff.

If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurret. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as have been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a struck foul or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts and butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought
FIRST PART OF

Westmoreland.

He is, sir John: I fear we shall stay too long.

Falstaff.

Well, to the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Rebel Camp near Shrews-

Hotspur.

We'll fight with him to-night.

Worcester.

Douglas.

It may not be.

You give him, then, advantage.

Vernon.

Not a whit.

Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Vernon.

So do we.

Hotspur.

His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Worcester.

Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Vernon.

Do not, my lord.

Douglas.

You do not counsel well.

You speak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Vernon.

Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life, and
I dare well maintain it with my life, if well-respected honour bid me on,
I hold as little counsel with weak fear,
As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:
Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,
Which of us fears.

Douglas.

Yea, or to-night.

Vernon.

Content.

Hotspur.

To-night, say I.

Vernon.

Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much,
Being men of such great leading as you are,
That you foresee not what impediments
Drag back our expedition: certain horse
Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up:
Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day,
And now their pride and mettle is asleep,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a horse is half the half of himself.
Hotspur.

So are the horses of the enemy,
In general, journey-bated, and brought low;
The better part of ours are full of rest.

Worcester.

The number of the king exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, Blunt, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.

Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt.

I come with gracious offers from the king,
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hotspur.
KING HENRY IV.

ACT IV. SC. IV.

Hotspur.

Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; and would to God You were of our determination! Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings, and good name, Because you are not of our quality, But stand against us like an enemy.

And God defend but still I should stand so, So long as out of limit and true rule, You stand against anointed majesty. But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to know The nature of your griefs; and whereupon You conjure from the breast of civil peace Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land Audacious cruelty? If that the king Have any way your good deserts forgot, Which he confesseth to be manifold, He bids you name your griefs, and with all speed, You shall have your desires with interest, And pardon absolute for yourself, and these, Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hotspur.

The king is kind; and, well we know, the king Knows at what time to promise, when to pay. My father, and my uncle, and myself, Did give him that same royalty he wears; And when he was not six-and-twenty strong, Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low, A poor unmind'd outlaw sneaking home, My father gave him welcome to the shore: And, when he heard him swear, and vow to God, He came but to be duke of Lancaster, To sue his livery, and beg his peace, With tears of innocence, and terms of zeal, My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, Sware him assistance, and perform'd it too. Now, when the lords and barons of the realm Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him, The more and less came in with cap and knee; Met him in boroughs, cities, villages, Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes, Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths, Gave him their heirs, as pages follow'd him, Even at the heels, in golden multitudes. He presently, as great man knows itself, Steps me a little higher than his vow, Made to my father, while his blood was poor, Upon the naked shore at Ravensburg; And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees, That lie too heavy on the common wealth; Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face, This seeming brow of justice, did lie win The hearts of all that he did angle for: Proceeded farther: cut me off the heads Of all the favourites, that the absent king In deputation left behind him here, When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt.

Tut! I came not to hear this.

Hotspur.

Then, to the point. In short time after he depos'd the king; Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life; And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state; To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March (Who, if every coward in England, indeed his king) to be engag'd in Wales, There without ransom to lie forfeited; Disgrac'd me in my happy victories; Sought to entrap me by intelligence; Rated my uncle from the council-board; In rage dismiss'd my father from the court; Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong, And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out This head of safety: and, withal, to pray Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt.

Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hotspur.

Not so, sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile. Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd Some surety for a safe return again, And in the morning early shall mine uncle Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt.

I would you would accept of grace and love.

Hotspur.

And, may be, so we shall.

Blunt.

'Pray God you do!' [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

Enter the Archbishop of York, and Sir Michael.

Archbishop.

Hee, good sir Michael; bear this sealed brief, With winged haste to the lord marshal; This to my cousin Scrope; and all the rest To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir Michael.

My good lord, I guess their tenor.

Archbishop.

Like enough, you do. To-morrow, good sir Michael, is a day, Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men Must blide the touch [for, sir, at Shrewsbury, As I am truly given to understand, The king, with mighty and quick-raised power, Meets with lord Harry; and, I fear, sir Michael, What with the sickness of Northumberland, Whose power was in the first proportion, And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence, Who with them was a rated sinew too, And comes not in, o'er-ru'd by prophecies, I fear, the power of Percy is too weak To wage an instant trial with the king.

Sir Michael.

Why, my good lord, you need not fear; There is Douglas, and lord Mortimer.

Archbishop.

No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir Michael.

But there is Mordake, Vernon, lord Harry Percy, And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Archbishop.

And so there is; but yet the king hath draw'n The special head of all the land together: The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster, The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt, And many more arrivals, and dear men Of estimation and command in arms.

Sir Michael.

Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well pos'd.

Archbishop.

I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear, And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael speed.
ACT V.

SCENE I. The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

King Henry.

How bloodily that day begins to peer
Above yond' busky hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

Prince Henry.

The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes;
And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretells a tempest, and a blustering day.

King Henry.

Then, with the losers let it sympathise,
For nothing can seem foul to those that win.

[Trumpet sounds.]

Enter Worcester and Farnham.

How now, my lord of Worcester! 'tis not well, That you and I should meet upon such terms
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff our easy robes of peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:
This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it? will you again unknit
This curishul knot of all-abhorred war,
And move in that obedient orb again,
Where you did give a fair and natural light,
And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
A prodigy of fear, and a portent
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Worcester.

Hear me, my liege.

For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life
With quiet hours; for, I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

King Henry.

You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

Prince Henry.

Peace, chewet, peace!

Worcester.

It pleas'd your majesty, to turn your looks
Of favour, from myself, and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord,
We were the first and dearest of your friends.
For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time; and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account,
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home, and boldly did outdare
The dangers of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no farther than your new-fall'n right,
The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster.
To this we swore our aid; but, in short space,
It rain'd down fortune showering on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent king,
What with the injuries of a wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the king.
So long in his unlucky Irish wars,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And, from this swarm of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
To grip the general way into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster,
And, being fed by us, you us'd us so
As that ungentle guil, the cuckoo's bird,
Useth the sparrow, did oppress our nest.
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk,
[flct, That even our love durst not come your
For fear of swallowing: but with nimble wing
We were enforce'd, for safety sake, to fly
Out of your sight, and raise this present head:
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself,
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

King Henry.

These things, indeed, you have articulate,
Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontent,
Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did Insurrection want
Such water-colours to imprint his cause;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pillmell havoc and confusion.

Prince Henry.

In both our armies, there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,
I do not think, a braver gentleman,
More active, valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry,
And so, I hear, he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty:
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight.

King Henry.

And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee.
Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. — No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's part:
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What will he do, but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair, take it advisably.

[Exeunt Worcester and Farnham.]

Prince Henry.
Prince Henry.

Enter Hotspur and Douglas; Officers and Soldiers, behind.

Hotspur.

My uncle is return'd:—Deliver up
My lord of Westmoreland.——Uncle, what news?

Worcester.

The King will bid you battle presently.

Douglas.

Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.

Hotspur.

Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Douglas.

Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.

Worcester.

There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hotspur.

Did you beg any? God forbid!

Worcester.

I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter Douglas.

Douglas.

Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth.
And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Worcester.

The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,
And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hotspur.

O! I would the quarrel lay upon our heads;
And that no man might draw short breath to-day,
But I and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me,
How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in contempt?

Vernon.

No, by my soul! I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,
Unless a brother should a brother dare to gentle exercise and proof of arms.
He gave you all the duties of a man,
Triumph'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a chronicler,
Making you ever better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise, valued with you;
And, which became him like a prince indeed,
He made a blushing cait if of himself;
And chid his truant youth with such a grace,
As if he master'd there a double spirit,
of teaching, and of learning, instantly.
There did he pause:—but let me tell the world,—
If he outlive the envy of this day.

England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconsrusted in his wantonness.

Hotspur.

Cousin, I think thou art enamoured
On his follies; never did I hear
Of any prince so wild o' liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
Arm, arm, with speed!—And, fellows, soldiers, friends,
Better consider what you have to do,
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Vernon.

Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

SCENE II. The Rebel Camp.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Worcester.

O, no I my nephew must not know, sir Richard,
The liberal kind offer of the king.

Vernon.

'Twere best, he did.

Worcester.

Then are we all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The king should keep his word in loving us;
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults;
Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
For treason is but trusted like the fox.
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad, or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks;
And we shall feel like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood;
And an adopted name of privilege,
A bare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
All his offences live upon my head,
And on his father's: we did train him on;
And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know
In any case the offer of the king.

Vernon.

Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Act v. Sc. II.  KINa HENRY IV. 459
Enter a Messenger.

Messenger.

My lord, here are letters for you.

Hotspur.

I cannot read them now.—O gentlemen! the time of life is short; To spend that shortness basely, were too long, If life did rise upon a dial's point, Still ending at the arrival of an hour. An if we live, we live to tread on kings; If die, brave death, when princes die with us. Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair, When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Messenger.

My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hotspur.

I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale, For I profess not talking. Only this— Let each man do his best: and here draw I A sword, whose temper I intend to stain With the best blood that I can meet withal In the adventure of this perils day. Now, — Esperance! — Percy! — and set on! — Sound all the lofty instruments of war, And by that music let us all embrace; For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall A second time do such a courtesy. [The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exequy.

SCENE III. Plain near Shrewsbury.

Excursions, and Parties' fighting. Alarum to the Battle. Then enter Douglas and Blunt, meeting.

Blunt.

What is thy name, that in battle thus Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Douglas.

Know, then, my name is Douglas; And I do haunt thee in the battle thus, Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt.

They tell thee true.

Douglas.

The lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry, This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee, Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt.

I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot; And thou shalt find a king that will revenge Lord Stafford's death.

[Douglas, and Blunt fall in battle.]

Enter Hotspur.

Hotspur.

O Douglas! hast thou fought at Holmeden I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. [thus, Douglas.

All's done, all's won: here breathless lies the king.

Where?

Douglas.

Here.

Hotspur.

This Douglas? no; I know this face full well: A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt, Semblably furnish'd like the king himself.

Douglas.

A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes! A Borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear: Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hotspur.

The king hath many marching in his coats.

Douglas.

Now, by my sword, I will kill all his costs; I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece, Until I meet the king.

Hotspur.

Up, and away! Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day.

Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Falstaff.

Falstaff.

Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I bear the shot here; 'here's no scoring, but upon the pate.—Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt: —there's honour for you; here's no vanity: I am as hot as moleen lead, and as heavy too; God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels.—I have led my raggamuffins where they are peppered: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince Henry.

Prince Henry.

What! stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff [sword: Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies, Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd.] I pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Falstaff.

O Hal! I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe a while.—Turk Gregory never did such deeds In arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

Prince Henry.

He is, indeed; and living to kill thee. I pr'ythee lend me thy sword.

Falstaff.

Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

Prince Henry.

Give it me. What, is it in the case?

Falstaff.

Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot: there's that will sack a city.

[The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.

Prince Henry.

What; is't a time to jest and daily now? [Throws it at him, and exit.]

Falstaff.

Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as sir Walter hath; give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the King, Prince Henry, Prince John, and Westmorland.

King Henry.

I pr'ythee, [much.— Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.]

Prince
Prince John.
Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince Henry.
I beseech your majesty, make up,
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

King Henry.
I will do so.—My lord of Westmoreland,
Lead him to his tent.

Westmoreland.
Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince Henry.
Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:
And heaven forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Prince John.
We breathe too long.—Come, cousin Westmoreland,
Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland.

Prince Henry.
By God thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John,
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

King Henry.
I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince Henry.
O 1 this boy,
Lends mettle to us all.

Alarums. Enter Douglas.

Douglas.
Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads.
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those [thou,
That wear those colours on them:—what art
That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

King Henry.
The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart,
So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very king; I have two boys
Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field;
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee; and defend thyself.

Douglas.
I fear thou art another counterfeit,
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[They fight: the King being in danger, enter Prince Henry.

Prince Henry.
Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again! the spirits [arms: Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blount, are in my
It is the prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but he means to pay.—

[They fight: Douglas flies.

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace?—
Sir Nicholas Gower's hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton; I'll to Clifton straight.

King Henry.
Stay, and breathe a while.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion;
And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prince Henry.
O God! they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearken'd for your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you;
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poisonous potions in the world,
And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

King Henry.
Make up to Clifton: I'll to sir Nicholas Gaw-sy.

[Exit King Henry.

Enter Hotspur.

Hotspur.
If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince Henry.
Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hotspur.
My name is Harry Percy.

Prince Henry.
Why, then I see
A very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
Nor can one England brook a double reign,
Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales.

Hotspur.
Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come
To end the one of us; and would to God,
Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

Prince Henry.
I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee;
And all the building honours on thy crest
I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hotspur.
I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.

Enter Falstaff.

Falstaff.
Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit Douglas.
Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hotspur.
O, Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth,
I better brook the loss of brittle life,
Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;
They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword
my flesh:—[foot;
But thought'st the slave of life, and life time's
And time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. 0! I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death
Lies on my tongue.—No, Percy, thou art dust,
And food for—

[Dies.

Prince Henry.
For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart!—
Ill- weave'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!
When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now, two paces of the vilest earth
[dead, Is room enough:—this earth that bears thee
Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should now make so dear a show of zeal:—
But let my favours hide thy mangled face,
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven:

Thy
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph!—

[He sees Falstaff on the ground.

What old acquaintance I could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell:—
I could have better spard a better man.
O! I should have a heavy miss of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray.—
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by;
Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.

Falstaff. [Rising.
Embowell'd if thou embowell me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me, too, to-morrow. 'Sblood! 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie; I am no counterfeiter: to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit it liveth, if a man, thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valour is discretion, in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead. How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise, as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me: therefore, sirrah, with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me.

[He takes Hotspur on his back.

Re-enter Prince Henry and Prince John.

Prince Henry.

Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd thy maiden sword.

Prince John.

But soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prince Henry.

I did; I saw him dead, breathless, and bleeding
On the ground.—

Art thou alive? or is it phantasy [Speak;
That plays upon our eyesight! I pr'ythee,
We will not trust our eyes, without our ears. Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Falstaff.

No, that's certain; I am not a double man; but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy: If your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

Prince Henry.

Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Falstaff.

Diddst thou? — Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying! — I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, 'zounds! I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

Prince John.

This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

Prince Henry.

This is the strangest fellow, brother John. —
Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back;
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have. [A Retreat is sounded.

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field.
To save what friends are living, who are dead.

[Exeunt Prince Henry and Prince John.

Falstaff.

I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, bearing off the body.

SCENE V. Another Part of the Field.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John, Westmorland, and others, with Worcester, and Vernon, prisoners.

King Henry.

Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. —
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send grace, Pardoned, and terms of love to all of you? —
And would'st thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Worcester.

What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

King Henry.

Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too: Other offenders we will pause upon. — [Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded.

How goes the field?

Prince Henry.

The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear fled with the rest; —
And falling from a hill, he was so bruised,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is, and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

King Henry.

With all my heart.

Prince Henry.

Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong.
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

Prince John.

I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall give away immediately.

King Henry.

Then this remains, — that we divide our power. —
You, son John, and my cousin Westmorland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,

To
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms: [Scroop, Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales.
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.

Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.

Exeunt.

SECOND PART

OF

KING HENRY IV.

Dramatis Personae.

KING HENRY THE FOURTH.

Henry, Prince of Wales,
Thomas, Duke of Clarence,
Prince John of Lancaster,
Prince Humphrey of Gloucester,
Earl of Warwick,
Earl of Westmoreland, Of the King's Party.
Gower, Harcourt,
Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.
A Gentleman attending on the Chief Justice.
Earl of Northumberland,
Scroop, Archbishop of York,
Lord Mowbray,
Lord Hastings,
Lord Bardolph,
Sir John Coleville,

his Sons.

Travers and Morton, Retainers of Northumberland.
Falstaff, Bardolph, Pistol, and a Page.
Poins and Peto.
Shallow and Silence, Country Justices.
Davy, Servant to Shallow.
Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, and Bulcalf, Recruits.
Fang and Snare, Sheriff's Officers.
Rumour, the Presenter.
A Porter. A Dancer, Speaker of the Epilogue.
Lady Northumberland. Lady Percy.
Hostess Quickly. Doll Tear-sheet.
Lords, and Attendants; Officers, Soldiers, Mes-tenger, Straunor, Beadles, Grooms, &c.

Scene, England.

Induction.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.
Enter Rumour, painted full of Tongues.

Rumour.

Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing, when loud Rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slander ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence;
Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop,
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
I run before King Harry's victory;
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury [troops,
Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury

And
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone, Where Hotspur’s father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on, And not a man of them brings other news Than they have learnt of me; from Rumour’s tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs.

ACT I.

SCENE I. The same.

The Porter before the Gate; Enter Lord
Bardolph.

Who keeps the gate here? ho! — Where is the earl?

Porter.

What shall I say you are?

Bardolph.

Tell thou the earl, That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Enter Northumberland.

Northumberland.

What news, lord Bardolph? every minute now Should be the father of some stratagem.
The times are wild: contention, like a horse Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, And bears down all before him.

Bardolph.

I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

Northumberland.

Good, an God will!

Bardolph.

As good as heart can wish.

The king is almost wounded to the death, And in the fortune of my lord your son. [Hunts Prince Hotspur slain outright; and both the Kill’d by the hand of Douglas; young prince John,
And Westmorland and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Montmouth’s brawn, the hulks Sir John, Is prisoner to your son. O! such a day, So fought, so follow’d, and so fairly won, Came not till now to dignify the times, Since Caesar’s fortunes.

Northumberland.

How is this deriv’d?

Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Bardolph.

I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence;
A gentleman well bred, and of good name, That freely render’d me these news for true.

Northumberland.

Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Bardolph.

My lord, I over-rod him on the way,

And he is furnish’d with no uncertainties, More than he haply may recall from me.

Enter Travers.

Northumberland.

Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Travers.

My lord, sir John Umfraville turn’d me back With joyful tidings; and, being better hords, Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard A gentleman, almost forspart with speed, That stopp’d by me to breathe his blooded horse. He ask’d the way to Chester; and of him I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury: He told me that rebellion had bad luck, And that young Harry Percy’s spur was cold. With that young his horse the head, And, bending forward, struck his armed heels Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head; and, starting so, He seem’d in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question.

Northumberland.

Ha! — Again. Said he, young Harry Percy’s spur was cold? Of Hotspur, coldspur? that rebellion Had met ill luck!

Bardolph.

My lord, I’ll tell you what: If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point I’ll give my barony: never talk of it.

Northumberland.

Why should that gentleman, that rode by Give, then, such instances of loss? [Travers, Bardolph.

Who, he? He was some hilding fellow, that had stolen The horse he rode on, and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

Northumberland.

Yea, this man’s brow, like to a title-leaf, Foretells the nature of a tragic volume: So looks the sword, whereon th’imperious flood Hath left a witness’d usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Morton.

I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord; Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask, To fright our party.

Northumberland.

How doth my son and brother? Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek Is ater than thy tongue to tell thy errand. Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam’s curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him, half his Troy was burn’d:
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue, And I my Percy’s death, ere thou report’st it This thou wouldst say.— Your son did thus, and thus:
Your brother, thus; so fought the noble Doug-
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds, But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with — brother, son, and all are dead.

Morton.
Morton.

Douglas is living, and your brother, yet; But for my lord your son,—

Northumberland. Why, he is dead. See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! He that but fears the thing he would not know, Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes, That what he fear'd is charg'd. Yet speak, Morton: Tell thou thy ear his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace, And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Morton. You are too great to be by me gainsaid: Your spirit is too true; your fears too certain.

Northumberland. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.— I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak'st thy head; and hold'st it fear, Or to speak a truth. If he be slain, say so: [sin, The tongue offends not, that reports his death; And he doth sin that doth belie the dead, Not he which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office; and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

Bardolph. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Morton. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen; But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint quittance, wearyd and out-breath'd, /down To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat The never-daunted Percy to the earth, From whence with life he never more sprung In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire [up. Even to the dullest peasant in his camp, Being bruited once, took fire and heat away From the best temper'd courage in his troops: For from his metal was his party steel'd; Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead. And as the thing that's heavy in itself, Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, /fear, Lend to this weight such lightness with their That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim, Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcestercaster Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot, The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword Had the three times slain th'appearance of the king, 'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out A speedy power, to encounter you, my lord, Under the conduct of young Lancaster, And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

Northumberland. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. In poison there is physic; and these news, Having been well, that would have made me sick; [well: Being sick, have in some measure made me And as the wretch, whose fever-weaken'd joints, Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire Out of his keeper's arms; even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now charg'd with grief, [nice crutch! Are thriche themselves. Hence, therefore, thou A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel, Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quail! Thou art a guard too wanton for the head, Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit. Now bind my brows with iron; and approach The ragged'et hour that time and spite dare bid To crow upon th' enrag'd Northumberland. Let heaven kiss earth; now, let not nature's hand Keep the wild flood confin'd: let order die; And let this world no longer be a stage, To feed contention in a lingering act, But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set On bloody courses, the rude scene may end, And darkness be the barrier of the dead! [Travels: This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord.]

Bardolph. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Morton. The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er To stormy passion, must perforce decay. You cast the event of war, my noble lord, And summ'd the account of chance, before you said Let us make head. It was your presurmisat, That, in the hole of blows your son might drop: You knew, he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, More likely to fall in, than to get o'er: You were advis'd, his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars; and that his high-born spirit Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd; Yet did you say,—Go forth: and none of this, Though strongly apprehended, could restrain The stubborn action; what hath then befallen, Or what hath this bold enterprize brought forth More than that being which was like to be? Bardolph. We all, that are engaged to this loss, Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas; That, if we wrougt out light, 'twas ten to one; And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chock'd the respect of likely peril fear'd, And, since we are o'erset, venture again. Come, we will all put forth; body, and goods.

Morton. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble lord, I hear for certain, and dare speak the truth, The gentle archbishop of York is up, With well-appointed powers: he is a man, Who with a double surety binds his followers. My lord your son had only but the corps, But shadows, and the shows of men, to fight; For that same word, rebellion, did divide The action of their bodies from their souls, And they did fight with quæsiveness, constrain'd As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side; but, for their spirits and souls, This word, rebellion, it had froze them up, As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop Turns insurrection to religion: Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts, He's
SECOND PART OF

He's follow'd both with body and with mind,
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
Of fair king Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones;
Derives from heaven his quarrel, and his cause;
Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gassing for life under great Bolingbroke,
And more, and less, do flock to follow him.

Northumberland.

I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,
This present grief hath wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel ever more
This aptest way for safety, and revenge. [speak]
Get posts and letters, and make friends with Never so few, nor never yet more need.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. London. A Street.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, with his Page bearing his Sword and Buckler.

Falstaff.

Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page.

He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Falstaff.

Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me:
the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than 1 invent, or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee, like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one: if the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then, I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now: but I will in-set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the jewel, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fleged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to it, his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never gain sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine,
I can assure him.—What said master Dumbleton about the satin for my short cloak, and my slots?

Page.

He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph; he would not take his bond and yours: he liked not the security.

Falstaff.

Let him be damned like the glutton: may his tongue be better!—A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yeas-forsooth knife, to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security!—The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then must they stand upon security. I had as lief they would put rattle in my mouth, as to offer to stop it with security.
I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security: for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him.—Where's Bardolph?

Page.

He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Falstaff.

I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the streets, I were manned, horset, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page.

Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Falstaff.

Wait close; I will not see him.

Chief Justice.

What's he that goes there?

Attendant.

Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Chief Justice.

He that was in question for the robbery?

Attendant.

He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Chief Justice.

What, to York? Call him back again.

Attendant.

Sir John Falstaff?

Falstaff.

Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page.

You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Chief Justice.

I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Attendant.

Sir John,—

Falstaff.

What! a young knave, and begging? Is there not wars? is there not employment? Dost not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Attendant.

You mistake me, sir.

Falstaff.

Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man?
setting my knighthood and my soldier'ship aside,
I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Attendant.

I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldier'ship aside, and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Falstaff.

I give thee leave to tell me so? I lay aside that which grows to me? If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me: if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter, hence! avaint!

Attendant.

Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Chief.
Chief Justice.

Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Falstaff.

My good lord!—God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time, and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Chief Justice.

Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Falstaff.

A'nt please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Chief Justice.

I talk not of his majesty.—You would not come when I sent for you.

Falstaff.

And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Chief Justice.

Well, heaven mend him.—I pray you, let me speak with you.

Falstaff.

This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tinging.

Chief Justice.

What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Falstaff.

It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Chief Justice.

I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Falstaff.

Very well, my lord; very well; rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Chief Justice.

To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Falstaff.

I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Chief Justice.

I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Falstaff.

As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Chief Justice.

Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Falstaff.

He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Chief Justice.

Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Falstaff.

I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Chief Justice.

You have misled the youthful prince.

Falstaff.

The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Chief Justice.

Well, I am loath to call a new-healed wound. Your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gad's-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Falstaff.

My lord.—

Chief Justice.

But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Falstaff.

To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Chief Justice.

What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Falstaff.

A wassal candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Chief Justice.

There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Falstaff.

His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Chief Justice.

You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Falstaff.

Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but, I hope, he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times, that true value is turned bearherd. Pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vanward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Chief Justice.

Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, sir John!

Falstaff.

My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with hollaiing, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth farther, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes, and sackcloth, but in new silk, and old sack.

Chief Justice.
Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Falstaff.
God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Chief Justice.
Well, the king hath sever'd you and prince Harry. I hear, you are going with lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop, and the earl of Northumberland.

Falstaff.
Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head, but I am thrust upon it: well, another last ever. [But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God, my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust, than to be scour'd to nothing with perpetual motion.]

Chief Justice.
Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition.

Falstaff.
Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me for it?

Chief Justice.
Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: commend me to your cousin Westmoreland. [Exeunt Chief Justice and Attendant.

Falstaff.
If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness, than he can part young limbs and lechery; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other, and so both the degrees prevent my curses.—Boy!

Page.
Sir?

Falstaff.
What money is in my purse?

Page.
Seven groats and two-pence.

Falstaff.
I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.—Go bear this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this to the prince; this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair of my chin. About it; you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one, or the other, plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter, if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of any thing; I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.

SCENE III. York. A Room In the Archbishop's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray Earl Marshal, and Bardolph.

Archbishop.
Thus have you heard our cause, and known our means:
And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes.—
And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mowbray.
I well allow the occasion of our arms; But gladly would be better satisfied,
How, in our means, we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough
Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hastings.
Our present musters grow upon the file
To five and twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an incensed fire of injuries.

Bardolph.
The question then, lord Hastings, standeth thus:—
Whether our present five and twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland.

Hastings.
With him, we may.

Bardolph.
Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far,
'Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For in a theme so bloody-face'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids uncertain should not be admitted.

Archbishop.
'Tis very true, lord Bardolph; for, indeed,
It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

Bardolph.
It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,
Eating the air on promise of supply,
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts;
And so, with great imagination,
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,
And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hastings.
But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt,
To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

Bardolph.
Yes, if this present quality of war,
Indeed the instant action, a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring [fruit,
We see th' appearing buds; which, to prove
Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model,
And, when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection;
Which if we find our strength and ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices. or, at least, desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work, (Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up) should we survey
The plot of situation, and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation;
Question surveyors, know our own estate,
ACT II.

SCENE I. London. A Street.

Enter Hostess; Fang, and his Boy, with her; and Snare following.

Hostess.

MASTER Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang.

To us, no more; nay, not so much, lord Bar-dolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take up us. So is the uniform king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Archbishop.

That he should draw his several strengths
together,
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hastings.

If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh
Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

Bardolph.

Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither?

Hastings.

The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland:
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth;
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Archbishop.

Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbrooke,
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be;
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beauteous feeder, art so full of him.
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, dist thou disgorge
Thy gluton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And how'st to find it. What trust is in these times?

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threwst at dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on After th' admired heels of Bolingbrooke,
Cry'st now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O, thoughts of men accurate!

Fang.

I am undone by his going: I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score.—Good master Fang, hold him sure:—good master Snare, let him not 'scape. He comes con-tinuantly to Pie-corner, (saving your manhoods) to buy a saddle; and he's invited to dinner to the lubber's head in Lumbert-street, to master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer.
A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.—

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmseynose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, master Fang and master
Snare: do me, do me, do me your offices.
Falstaff.

How now! whose mare’s dead? what’s the matter?

Fang.

‘Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.’

Falstaff.

Away, varlets! — Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain’s head; throw the queen in the channel.

Hostess.

Falstaff.

Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang.

A rescue! a rescue!

Hostess.

Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Falstaff.

Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I’ll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Chief Justice.

What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho! Hostess.

Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Chief Justice.

How now, sir John! what, are you brawling here? Business? Doth this become your place, your time, and You should have been well on your way to York — [him]? Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hangst on Hostess.

O! my most worshipful lord, an’t please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Chief Justice.

For what sum?

Hostess.

It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home: he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his; but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o’ nights, like the mare.

Falstaff.

I think, I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Chief Justice.

How comes this, sir John? Fei! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Falstaff.

What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Hostess.

Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun week, when the prince broke thy head for likening his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me thy lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Kecch, the butcher’s wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby I told thee, they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying, that are long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bld me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it, if thou canst.

Falstaff.

My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Chief Justice.

Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and make her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Hostess.

Yes, in troth, my lord.

Chief Justice.

Pr’ythee, peace, pray her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Falstaff.

My lord, I will not undergo this snip without reply. You call honourable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make court’y, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remember’d, I will not be your sitor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king’s affairs.

Chief Justice.

You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Falstaff.

Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside. Enter Gower.

Chief Justice.

The king, my lord, and Henry prince of Wales are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

Falstaff.

As I am a gentleman.

Hostess.

Faith, you said so before.

Falstaff.

As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Hostess.

By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Falstaff.
Falstaff.

Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy wall...—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed hangings, and these by bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, as it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Hostess.

Pray thee, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; 'tis faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Falstaff.

Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Hostess.

Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope, you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Falstaff.

Will I live?—Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Hostess.

Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Falstaff.

No more words: let's have her. [Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Page.

Chief Justice.

I have heard better news.

Falstaff.

What's the news, my good lord?

Chief Justice.

Where lay the king last night?

Gower.

At Basington keeper, my lord.

Falstaff.

I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Chief Justice.

Come all his forces back?

Gower.

No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse, Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland, and the archbishop.

Falstaff.

Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Chief Justice.

You shall have letters of me presently: come, go along with me, good master Gower.

Falstaff.

My lord!

Chief Justice.

What's the matter?

Falstaff.

Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gower.

I must wait upon my good lord here: I thank you, good sir John.

Chief Justice.

Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Falstaff.

Will you sup with me, master Gower?

Chief Justice.

What foolish master taught you these manners, sir John?

Falstaff.

Master Gower, if they come become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Chief Justice.

Now, the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Another Street.

Enter Prince Henry and Pains.

Prince Henry.

Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Pains.

Is it come to that? I had thought, weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

Prince Henry.

'Faith, it does me, though it discours the complacency of my greatness to acknowledge it.
Doth it not show vileny in me to desire small beer?

Pains.

Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied,
as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince Henry.

Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my truth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face tomorow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; e.g. these, and those that were thy peach colour'd ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts: as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen, shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say, the children are not in the fault, whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Pains.

How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince Henry.

Shall I tell thee one thing, Pains?

Pains.

Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good
th ing.

Prince Henry.

It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Pains.

Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince Henry.

Marry, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Pains.

Very hardly upon such a subject.
Poins.
What's this you think of me, if I should weep?
Poins.
I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.
Poins.
And to thee.
Poins.
By this light, I am well spoken on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands, and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.
Poins.
And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.
Enter Bardolph and Page.
Bardolph.
God save your grace.
Prince Henry.
And yours, most noble Bardolph.
Bardolph.
Come, you virtuous ass, [To the Page.] you bashful fool, must you be blushinf? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become? Is it such a matter to get a pottlepot's maidenhead?
Page.
He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes; and, methought, he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.
Prince Henry.
Hath not the boy profited?
Bardolph.
Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!
Page.
Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!
Prince Henry.
Instruct us, boy: what dream, boy?
Page.
Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand, and therefore I call him her dream.
Prince Henry.
A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There it is, boy. [Gives him money.

Poins.
O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.
Bardolph.
An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.
Prince Henry.
And how dost thy master, Bardolph? Bardolph.
Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.
Poins.
Delivered with good respect.—And how dost the martelmas, your master?
Bardolph.
In bodily health, sir.
Poins.
Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not.
Prince Henry.
I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins. [Reads.]
"John Falstaff, knight."—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself; even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger, but they say, "There is some of the King's blood split:" "How comes that?" "He says he, that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is as ready as a borrower's cap; "I am the king's poor cousin, sir."
Prince Henry.
Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:—

Poins.
"Sir John Falstaff, kight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting."—Why, this is a certificate.
Prince Henry.
Peace!
Poins.
"I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity:"—he sure means brevity in breath, short-winded. —"I command me to thee, I command thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou may'st, and so farewell.
"Thine, by yea and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou useth him,) Jack Falstaff, with my familiars; John, with my brothers and sisters; and John with all Europe."
My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.
Prince Henry.
That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?
Poins.
God send the wench no worse fortune! but I never said so.
Prince Henry.
Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us.—Is your master here in London?
Bardolph.
Yes, my lord.
Act II. Sc. iii.

Prince Henry.
Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bardolph. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince Henry. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old church.

Prince Henry. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

Prince Henry. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and akinswoman of my master's.

Prince Henry. Even such kin as the parish helpers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Points. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince Henry. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence.

Bardolph. I have no tongue, sir.

Prince Henry. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Points. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some rood.

Prince Henry. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Points. Put on two leathern jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince Henry. From a god to a bull? a heavy declension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.

Northumberland. I pray thee, loving wife and gentle daughter, Give even way unto my rough affairs: Put not you on the visage of the times, And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady Northumberland. I have given over, I will speak no more. Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

Northumberland. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn, And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady Percy. O, yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars! The time was, father, that you broke your word, When you were more endear'd to it than now; When your own Percy, when my heart-dear Harry, Threw many a northward look, to see his father Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain. Who then persuaded you to stay at home? There were two honours lost, yours, and your son's: For yours,—may heavenly glory brighten it! For his,—it stuck upon him, as the sun In the grey vault of heaven: and, by his light, Did all the chivalry of England move To do brave acts; he was, indeed, the glass Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves. He had no legs, that practised not his gait; And speaking thick, which nature made his blushing, Became the accents of the valiant; For those that could speak loud, and tardily, Would turn their own perfection to abuse, To seem them that, in speech, in gait, In dilet, in affections of delight, In military rules, honours of blood, He was the mark and glass, copy and book, That fashion'd others. And him,—O wondrous O miracle of men!—him did you love, [him]! (Second to none, unsecooned by you) To look upon the hideous god of war In disadvantage; to abide a field, Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name Did seem defensible:—so you left him. Never, O! never, do his ghost'ed to it now; To hold your honour more precise and nice With others, than with him: let them alone. The marshal,—and the archbishop, are strong: Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers, To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

Northumberland. Beshrew your heart, Fair daughter! you do draw my spirit's from me, With new lamenting ancient oversights. But I must go, and meet with danger there, Or it will seek me in another place, And find me worse provided.

Lady Northumberland. O! fly to Scotland. Till that the nobles, and the armed commons, Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady Percy. If they get ground and vantage of the king, Then join you with them, like a rib of steel, To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, First let them try themselves. So did your son; He was so suffer'd;—so came I a widow, And never shall have length of life enough, To rain upon me no more than mine eyes, That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven; For recordation to my noble husband.

Northumberland. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind, As with the tide swell'd up unto its height, That makes all resistless: and, running neither way: Fain would I go to meet the archbishop, But many thousand reasons hold me back.— I will resolve for Scotland: there am I, Till time and vantage crave my company.

[Exeunt.

SCENE
SCENE IV. London. A Room in the Bear's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

First Drawer.

Second Drawer.

Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him, there were five more sir John's; and, putting off his hat, said, "I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights." It angered him to the heart, but he hath forgot that.

First Drawer.

Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneh's noise; mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some music. [Dispatch:—the room where they supped is too hot; they'd come in straight.]

Second Drawer.

Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

First Drawer.

By the mass, here will be old uts: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Second Drawer.

I'll see, if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.

Enter Hostess and Dull Tear-sheet.

Hostess.

I'faith, sweet heart, methinks now, you are in an excellent good temperal: your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire, and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; but, I'faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say,— What this? How do you now?

Doll.

Better than I was, Hem.

Hostess.

Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes sir John.

Enter Falstaff, singing.

Falstaff.

"When Arthur first in court."—Empty the jordan.—"And was a worthy king." [Exit Drawer.

How now, mistress Doll?

Hostess.

Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Falstaff.

You mudy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Falstaff.

You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Doll.

I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Falstaff.

If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll; we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Doll.

Yea, joy; our chains, and our jewels.

Falstaff.

"Your brooches, pearls, and ooches:"—for to serve bravely, is to come hatting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely.—

Doll.

[Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!]

Hostess.

By my troth, this is the old fashion: you two never meet, but you fall to some discord. You are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good year I one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel; as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll.

Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hoghead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Drawer.

Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll.

Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul mouth'd rogue in England.

Hostess.

If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith! I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door;—there comes no swaggerers hence: I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now.—Shut the door, I pray you.

Falstaff.

Dost thou hear, hostess?—

Hostess.

Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Falstaff.

Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Hostess.

Tilly-valley, sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Trick, the deputy, tother day; and, as he said to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—"Neighbour Quickly," says he;—master Dumb, our master, was by them:—"Neighbour Quickly," says he, "receive those that are civil; for," said he, "you are in an ill name:”—now, he said so, I can tell whereupon: "For," says he, "you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive; receive," says he, "no swaggering companions."—There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said.—No, I'll no swaggerers.

Falstaff.

He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i'faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbarian, heh, hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Hostess.

Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggery: by my troth, I am the worse, when one says—swaggery. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Doll.

So you do, hostess.

Hostess.

Do I? yea, in very truth do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swaggery.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pistol.

God save you, sir John!

Falstaff.

Welcome, ancresse! Here, Pistol; I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pistol.

I will discharge upon her, sir John, with two bullets.

Falstaff.

She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Hostess.

Come, I'll drink no poofs, nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, 1.

Pistol.

Then to you, mistress Dorothy: I will charge you.

Doll.

Charge me? I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pistol.

I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Doll.

Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you!—Since when, do you, sir?—God's light! with two points on your shoulder! much!

Pistol.

I will murder your ruff for this.

[Falstaff.

No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol."

Hostess.

No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Doll.

Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would trunchoon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house?—He a captain! Hang him, rogue!—He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. A captain! these villains will make the word captain as odious [as the word occupy, which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted.] therefore captains had need look to 't.

Bardolph.

Pray thee, go down, good ancent.
Hostess.
Here's goodly stuff toward!

Falstaff.
Give me my rapier, boy.

Doll.
I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, doe not draw.

Falstaff.
Get you down stairs. [Drawing.

Hostess.
Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tensils and frigts. So; murder, I warrant now. — Alas, alas! I put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Bardolph and Pistol.

Doll.
I pray thee, Jack, be quiet: the rascal is gone. Ah! you whoreson little villain, you.

Hostess.
Are you not hurt i’ the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter Bardolph.

Falstaff.
Have you turned him out of doors?

Bardolph.
Yes, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Falstaff.
A rascal, to brave me!

Doll.
Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face; — come on, you whoreson chops. — Ah, rogue! I've faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Falstaff.
A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Doll.
Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.
Page.
The music is come, sir.

Falstaff.
Let them play. — Play, sirs. — Sit on my knee, Doll. — A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Doll.
I've faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Barholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o'days, and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince Henry and Poins, disguised like Drawers.

Falstaff.
Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Doll.
Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Falstaff.
A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Doll.
They say, Poins, has a good wit.

Falstaff.
He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Teviotbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Doll.
Why does the prince love him so then?

Falstaff.
Because their legs are both of a bigness; and he plays at quotts well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flappadragons; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoordups.

Prince Henry.
Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins.
Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince Henry.
Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poil clawed like a parrot.

Poins.
Is it not strange, that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Falstaff.
Kiss me, Doll.

Prince Henry.
Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins.
And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Falstaff.
Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Doll.
Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Falstaff.
I am old, I am old.

Doll.
I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Falstaff.
What stuff will have a kittle of? I shall receive money on Tuesday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song I come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me, when I am gone.

Doll.
By my troth, thou'lt set me a weeping, an thou say'st so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. — Well, hearken the end.

Falstaff.
Some sack, Francis!

Prince Henry, and Poins.
Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing.

Falstaff.
Ha! a bastard son of the king's. — And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince Henry.
Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Falstaff.
A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless thee, sweet face of thine! O Jesus! are you come from Wales? Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome. [Placing his hand upon Doll:]

How, you fat fool? I scorn you.

My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman?

God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Diddst thou hear me?

Yes; and you knew me, as you did, when you ran away by Gad's-hill: you knew, I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

I shall drive you, then, to confess the wilful abuse: and then I know how to handle you.

No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no abuse.

Not to dispraise, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what?

No abuse, Hal.

No abuse!

No abuse, Ned, I the world; honest Ned, none. I displeased him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him;—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend, and a true subject, and thy father: to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal;—none, Ned, none;—no, 'faith boys, none.

See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms.

For the boy,—there is a good angel about him, but the devil outbids him too.

For the women?

For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns, poor souls. For the other, I owe her money, and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Do not I warrant you.

No, I think thou art not; I think, thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for which, I think, thou wilt howl.

All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

What says your grace?

His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

Who knocks so loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

Peto, how now? what news?

By heaven, Peto, I feel me much to blame, So idly to profane the precious time, When tempest of commotion, like the south Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarm'd heads. [night. Give me my sword, and cloak.—Falstaff, good [Vexed! Prince Henry, Peto, Falstaff, and Bardolph] Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door?

Re-enter Bardolph.

How now? what's the matter?

You must away to court, sir, presently; A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Pay the musicians, sirrah. [To the Page.—] Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Falstaff. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

I cannot speak;—if my heart be not ready to burst.—Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Falstaff.
Falstaff.

Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Bardolph.]

Hostess.

Well, fare thee well! I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honourer, and truer-hearted man,—Well, fare thee well.

Bardolph. [Within.]

What's the matter?

Hostess.

Bid mistress Tear-sheet come to my master.

Bardolph. [Within.]

O! run, Doll; run; run, good Doll. Come. —Yea—will you come, Doll?

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry in his Nightgown, with a Page.

King Henry.

Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick; But ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters, And well consider of them. Make good speed. [Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep,—O sleep! O gentle sleep! Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee; That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down, And steep my sense in forgetfulness? Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, [slumber, And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopys of costly state, And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody? O, thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile, In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch, A watch-case, or a common larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge, And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian bills by the top, [them Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging With deaf'ning clamours in the slippery clouds, That with the hurly death itself awakes? Can't thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude; And in the calmest and most stilllest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

Warwick.

Many good morrows to your majesty!

King Henry.

Is it good morrow, lords?

Warwick.

'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King Henry.

Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords, Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

Warwick.

We have, my liege.

King Henry.

Then you perceive, the body of our kingdom How foul it is; what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.

Warwick.

It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd, With good advice, and little medicine. My lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King Henry.

O God! that one might read the book of fate, And see the revolution of the times Made by the tyrannous, and levellent, Weary of solid firmness, melt itself Into the sea: and, other times, to see The beachy girdle of the ocean Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock, And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! [O, if this were seen, Thehappiest youth, viewing his progress through, What perils past, what crosses to ensue, Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.]

'Tis not ten years gone, [friends, Since Richard, and Northumberland, great Did feast together, and in two years after Were they at war! it is but eight years, since This Percy was the man nearest my soul; Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs, And laid his love and life under my foot; Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard, Gave him defiance. But which of you was by, (You, cousin Neville, as I may remember) To Warwick.

When Richard, with his eye brimfull of tears, Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy: "Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne:"— Though then, God knows, I had no such intent, But that necessity so bow'd the state, That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss. "The time shall come," thus did he follow it, "The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head, Shall break into corruption:"—so went on, Foretelling this same time's condition, And the division of our amity. Warwick.

There is a history in all men's lives, Figuring the nature of the times decreas'd; The which observ'd, a man may prophesy, With a near aim, of the main chance of things As yet not come to life, which in their seeds, And weak beginnings, lie untreasured, Such things become the hatch and brood of time; And, by the necessary form of this, King Richard might create a perfect guess, That great Northumberland, then false to him, Would, of that seed, grow to a greater falseness, Which should not find a ground to root upon, Unless on you.

King Henry.

Are these things, then, necessities? Then let us meet them like necessities; And that same word even now cries out on us. They say, the bishop and Northumberland Are fifty thousand strong.

Warwick.

It cannot be, my lord: Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, The numbers of the fear'd.—Please it your To go to bed; upon my soul, my lord, [grace, The HENRY IV. PART 2.
Act 3, Sc. 2.
ACT III. Sc. II. KING HENRY IV.

The powers that you already have sent forth, shall bring this prize in very easily. To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd a certain instance that Glendower is dead. Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, and these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add unto your sickness.

King Henry. I will take your counsel; and were these inward wars once out of hand, we would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

SCENE II. Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; Monthly, Shadow, Wart, Fleebe, Bull-calf, and Servants, behind.

Shallow. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence? Silence.

Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shallow. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter, and mine, good-daughter Ellen? Silence.

Alas! I a black ouzel, cousin Shallow. Silence.

Shallow. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford, still, is he not? Silence.

Indeed, sir; to my cost. Silence.

He must then to the lins of court shortly. I was once of Clement's-inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet. Silence.

You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin.

Shallow. By the mass, I was called anything; and I would have done any thing, indeed, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barret, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the lins of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk. Silence.

This sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers? Shallow. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high: and the very same day I did fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. Jesu! Jesu! the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead! Silence.

We shall all follow, cousin.

Shallow. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good vole of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Silence. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shallow. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Silence. Dead, sir.

Shallow. Jesu! Jesu! Dead!—he drew a good bow;—and dead!—he shot a fine shot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapped in the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Silence. Thereafter as they be; a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shallow. And is old Double dead?

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Shallow. Here come two of sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Good morrow, honest gentlemen. Bardolph. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow? Shallow. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me?

Bardolph. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shallow. He greets me well, sir: I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask, how my lady his wife doth?

Bardolph. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. Shallow. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated?—it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated:—it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bardolph. Pardon me, sir: I have heard the word. Phrase, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase: but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is,—being, whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shallow. It is very just. —Look, here comes good sir John. — Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you like well; and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.
Falstaff.
I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow.—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shallow.
No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Falstaff.
Good master Silence, it will befit you should be of the peace.

Silence.
Your good worship is welcome.

Falstaff.
Fie! this is hot weather. Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shallow.
Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Falstaff.
Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shallow.
Where’s the roll? where’s the roll? where’s the roll?—Let me see, let me see: so, so, so, so. Yea, marry, sir:—Ralph Mouldy!—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.
—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Mouldy.
Here, an it please you.

Shallow.
What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Falstaff.
Is thy name Mouldy?

Mouldy.
Yea, an it please you.

Falstaff.
’Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shallow.
Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, ’tis faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; very well said.

Falstaff.
Prick him. [To Shallow.]

Mouldy.
I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery. You need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Falstaff.
Go to; peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Mouldy.
Spent I

Shallow.
Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are?—For the other, sir John:—let me see.—Simon Shadow!

Falstaff.
Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he’s like to be a cold soldier.

Shallow.
Where’s Shadow?

Here, sir.

Shallow.
Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shadow.
My mother’s son, sir.

Falstaff.
’Tis my mother’s son! like enough; and thy father’s shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so, indeed; but not of the father’s substance.

Shallow.
Do you like him, sir John?

Falstaff.
Shadow will serve for summer, prick him; for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shallow.
Thomas Wart?

Falstaff.
Where’s he?

Wart.
Here, sir.

Falstaff.
Is thy name Wart?

Wart.
Yea, sir.

Falstaff.
Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shallow.
Shall I prick him, sir John?

Falstaff.
It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shallow.
Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Feeble.
Here, sir.

Falstaff.
What trade art thou, Feeble?

Feeble.
A woman’s tailor, sir.

Shallow.
Shall I prick him, sir?

Falstaff.
You may; but if he had been a man’s tailor, he would have pricked you.—Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy’s battle, as thou hast done in a woman’s petticoat?

Feeble.
I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Falstaff.
Well said, good woman’s tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.
—Prick the woman’s tailor well, master Shallow, deep master Shallow.

Feeble.
I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Falstaff.
I would thou wert a man’s tailor, that thou might’st mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Feeble.
It shall suffice, sir.

Falstaff.
I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Shallow.
Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Falstaff.
Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf.

Bull-calf.
Here, sir.

Falstaff.
KING HENRY IV.

ACT III. SC. II.

Falstaff. 'Fore God, a likely fellow!—Come, prick me Bull-calf till he roar again.

O lord! good my lord captain,— Falstaff.

What, dost thou roar before thou art prick'd?

O lord! sir, I am a diseased man.

What disease hast thou?

A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir; which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir.

Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order, that thy friends shall ring for tizzazione.

—Is here all?

Here is more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir!—and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Falstaff.

Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, master Shallow.

O, sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

No more of that, good master Shallow; no more of that.

Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane Night-work alive?

She lives, master Shallow.

She never could away with me.

Never, never: she would always say, she could not abide Master Shallow.

By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. DOTH she hold her own well.

Old, old, master Shallow.

Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old, and had Robin Night-work by old Night-work, before I came to Clement's-inn.

That's fifty-five year ago.

Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hast seen that that this knight and I have seen!—Ha, sir John, said I well?

We have heard the chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, sir John, we have. Our watch-word was, 'Hem, boys!'—Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner.—O, the days that we have seen!—Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.

Bull-calf. Good master corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here is four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bardolph.

Good to; stand aside, Mouldy.

And good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bardolph.

Go to; stand aside.

Feeble.

By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once:—we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind:—an't be my destiny, so: an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bardolph.

Well said; thou art a good fellow.

Feeble.

'Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter Falstaff, and Justices.

Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Four, of which you please.

Sir, a word with you.—I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bull-calf.

Go to; well.

Come, sir John, which four will you have?

Do you choose for me?

Marry then,—Mouldy, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Mouldy, and Bull-calf. For you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service:—and, for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shallow.

Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Shallow.

Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man? Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Warte:—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbets-on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy: the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bardolph.

Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Falstaff.

Come, manage me your caliver. So.—very good:—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—
O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot.—Well said, Falstaff, Wart; thou't a good scab; hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shallow.

He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's-inn,) I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's show, there was a little guiver fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus: and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: "rach, tah, tah," would he say; "bounce," would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come.—I shall never see such a fellow.

Falstaff.

These fellows will do well, master Shallow.—
God keep you, master Silence! I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give me the soldiers coats.

Shallow.

Sir John, the Lord bless you, and God prosper your affairs, and send us peace! At your return, visit our house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure, I will with you to the court.

Falstaff.

"Fore God, I would you would.

Shallow.

Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

Exeunt Shallow and Silence.

Falstaff.

Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bar-dolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recreation, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but privy to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Tarnhill-street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Tudor's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inns, like a man made after supper of a cheeparing; when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: he was the very genius of famine; [yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake.] He came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; [and sung those tunes to the over-softened huswives that he heard the Carmen whistle, and sware—there were his fancies, or his good-nights.] And now is this Flee's daggar become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Till-yard, and then he burst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin;
the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beeses.
Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a phirosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hasting, and others.

Archbishop.

WHAT is this forest call'd?

Hastings.

'Tis Gauletree forest, an't shall please your grace.

Archbishop.

Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers
To know the numbers of our enemies. [forth,

Hastings.

We have sent forth already.

Archbishop.

'Tis well done.—

My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:—
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality,
The which he could not ley; whereupon
He is retir'd, to rippe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your attempts may overlive the hazard,
And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowbray.

Thus do the hopes we have in him touch
And dash themselves to pieces. [ground,

Enter a Messenger.

Hastings.

Now, what news?

Messenger.

West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy:
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowbray.

The just proportion that we gave them out.
Let us away on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

Archbishop.

What well-appointed leader front us here here?

Westmoreland.

I think it is my lord of Westmoreland.

Westmoreland.

Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, lord John and duke of Lancaster.

Archbishop.

Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace,
What doth concern your coming?

Westmoreland.

Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Led on by bloody youth, guaridled with rage,
And countenanced by boys, and beggary;
I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, And in the most bloody and most horrid shape, You, reverend father, and these noble lords, Had not been here, to dress the ugly form Of base and bloody insurrection With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop, Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd; Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd; [tutor'd; Whose learning and good letters peace hath Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself, Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace, Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war? Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood, Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine To a loud trumpet, and a point of war? Archbishop Wherefore do I this?—so the question stands: Briefly to this end,—We are all diseas'd; And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours, Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, And we must bleed for it: of which disease Our late king, Richard, being infected, died. But, my most noble lord of Westmorland, I take not on me here as a physician, Nor do I, as an enemy to peace, Troop in the throngs of military men; But, rather, show a while like fearful war, To diet rank minds, sick of happiness, And purge th' obstructions, which begin to stop Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly: I have in equal balance justly weigh'd [suffer, What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we And find our griefs heavier than our offences. We see which way the stream of time doth run, And are enforce'd from our most quiet there By the rough torrent of occasion; And have the summary of all our griefs, When time shall serve, to show in articles, Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king, And might by no suit gain our audience. When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our We are denied access unto his person, [griefs, Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone, When memory is written on the earth With yet appearing blood, and the examples Of every minute's instance, present now, Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms; Not to break peace, or any branch of it, But to establish here a peace indeed, Concurring both in name and quality.

Westmorland.

When ever yet was your appeal denied? Wherein have you been galled by the king? What peer hath been suborn'd to grante on you, That you should seal this lawless bloody book Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, [And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?] Archbishop.

My brother general, the commonwealth, [To brother born an household cruelty,] I make my quarrel in particular.

Westmorland.

There is no need of any such redress; Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowbray.

Why not to him, in part, and to us all, That feel the bruises of the days before, And suffer the condition of these times To lay a heavy and unequal hand Upon our honours?

Westmorland.

O! my good lord Mowbray, Construe the times to their necessitates, And you shall say indeed, it is the time, And not the king, that doth you injuries. Yet, for your part, it not appears to me, Either from the king, or in the present time, That you should have an inch of any ground To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd To all the duke of Norfolk's signories, Your noble and right-well-remember'd father's?

Mowbray.

What thing, in honour, had my father lost, That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me? The king that lov'd him, as the state stood then, Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish him: And then, when Harry Bolingbroke, and he, Being mounted, and both roosed in their seats, Their neighing coursers daring of the spur, Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down, Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of And the loud trumpet blowing them together; Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, O! when the king did throw his wander down, His own life hung upon the staff he threw: Then throw the down himself, and all their lives, That, by indictment, and by dint of sword, Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

Westmorland.

You speak, lord Mowbray, now you know not what. The soul of Hereford was reputed, then, In England the most valiant gentleman: Who knows, on whom fortune would then have small'd? But if your father had been victor there, He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry; For all the country, in a general voice, Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers, and love, Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on, And bless'd, and grac'd, indeed, more than the king. But this is mere digression from my purpose. Here come I from our princedly general, To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace, That he will give you audience; and wherein It shall be our care that your demands are just You shall enjoy them; every thing set off, That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowbray.

But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer, And it proceeds from policy, not love.

Westmorland.

Mowbray, you overween, to take it so. This offer comes from mercy, not from fear; For, lo! within a ken our army lies, Upon mine honour, all too confident To give admittance to a thought of fear. Our battle is more full of names than yours, Our men more perfect in the use of arms, Our armour all as strong, our cause the best: Then, reason will our hearts should be as good; Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd?

Mowbray.

Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.

Westmorland.

That argues but the shame of your offence: A rotten case abides no handling.

Hastings.

Hath the prince John a full commission, In
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

Westmoreland.
That is intended in the general's name.
I muse you make so slight a question.

Archbishop.
Then take, my lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,
For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form;
And present execution of our wills
To us, and to our purposes, confin'd;
We come within our awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

Westmoreland.
This will I show the general. Please you,
lords,
In sight of both our battles we may meet:
And either end in peace, which God so frame,
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.

Archbishop.
My lord, we will do so.

Mowbray.
There is a thing within my bosom tells me,
That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hastings.
Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowbray.
Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,
Shall to the king taste of this action:
That were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall with winnow'd with so rough a wind,
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.

Archbishop.
No, no, my lord. Note this,—the king is weary of dainty and such pickling grievances;
For he hath found, to end our doubt by death
Revives two greater In the heirs of life.
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory,
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance. For full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this land,
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to undo an enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolved correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hastings.
Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Archbishop.
'Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowbray.
Be it so.
Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

Westmoreland.
The prince is here at hand. Pleadeth your lordship,
[armies?
To meet his grace just distance 'tween our
Mowbray.
Your grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Archbishop.
Before, and greet his grace, my lord: we come.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.
Another part of the Forest.
Enter, from one side, Mowbray, the Archbishop,
Hastings, and others: from the other side,
Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland,
Officers and Attendants.

Prince John.
You are well encounter'd here, my cousin
Mowbray.—
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop:
And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all. —
My lord of York, it be better shew'd with you.
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text,
Then now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would be abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischiefs might he set abroad,
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord
bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken.
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us, th' imag'nd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer,
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings: O! who shall believe,
But you miseuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father;
And, both against the peace of heaven and him,
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Archbishop.
Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
The time disorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us, and crush us to this monstrous form
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief;
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,
Whereon this Hydra:son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd anpp.
With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowbray.
Mowbray. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes To the last man.

Hastings. And though we here fall down, We have supplies to second our attempt; If they miscarry, theirs shall second them; And so success of mischief shall be born, And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up, Whiles England shall have generation.

Prince John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow, To sound the bottom of the after-times.

Westmoreland. Pleaseth your grace, to answer then directly, How far-forth you do like their articles.

Prince John. I like them all, and do allow them well; And swear, here, by the honour of my blood, My father's purposes have been mistook; And some about him have too lavishly Wreasted his meaning, and authority.— My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redres'd: Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please Discharge your powers unto their several counties, As we will ours: and here, between the armies, Let's drink together friendly, and embrace, That all their eyes may bear those tokens home, Of our restored love, and amity.

Archbishop. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Prince John. I give it you, and will maintain my word: And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hastings. Go, captain, [to an Officer] and deliver to the army: This news of peace: let them have pay, and I know, it will well please them: Hie thee, captain. [Exit Officer:]

Archbishop. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.

Westmoreland. I pledge your grace: and, if you knew what pains I have bestow'd to breed this present peace, You would drink freely: but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Archbishop. I do not doubt you.

Westmoreland. I am glad of it.— Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray. Mowbray. You wish me health in very happy season; For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Archbishop. Against ill chances men are ever merry, But heaviness foreruns the good event.

Westmoreland. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow Serves to say thus,— some good thing comes to-morrow.

Archbishop. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowbray. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.

Shouts within.

Prince John. The word of peace is render'd. Hark, how they shout!

Mowbray. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Archbishop. A peace is of the nature of a conquest, For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser.

Prince John. Go, my lord, And let our army be discharged too... [Exit Westmoreland.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains March by us, that we may peruse the men We should have cop'd withal.

Archbishop. Go, good lord Hastings; And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by. [Exit Hastings.]

Prince John. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.— Re-enter Westmoreland.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

Westmoreland. The leaders having charge from you to stand, Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Prince John. They know their duties.

Re-enter Hastings.

Hastings. My lord, our army is dispers'd already. Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses [up, East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke Each hurries toward his home, and sporting-place.

Westmoreland. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for which I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:— And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mow- Of capital treason I attach you both. [bray; Mowbray.]

Is this proceeding just and honourable?

Westmoreland. Is your assembly so?

Archbishop. Will you thus break your faith?

Prince John. I pawn'd thee none.

I promise'd you redress of these same grievances, Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour, I will perform with a most christian care. But, for you, rebels, look to taste the due Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours. Most shallowly did you these arms commence, Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.— Strike up our drums I pursue the scatter'd stray; Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.— Some guard these traitors to the block of death; Treason's true bed, and yielded up of breath. [Exeunt.]

SCENE 111. Another part of the Forest.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Falstaff and Cleeve, meeting.

Falstaff. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray?

Cleeve.
Colevile.
I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colevile of the dale.

Falstaff.
Well then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place, the dale: Colevile shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colevile of the dale.

Colevile.
Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Falstaff.
As good a man as he, sir, who'ere I am. Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore, rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

I think, you are sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Falstaff.
I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me.—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, and others.

Prince John.
The heat is past, follow no farther now.—
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—
[Exit Westmoreland.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come; These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back.

Falstaff.
I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility: I have foundered nine-score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate value, taken sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and overcame.

Prince John.
It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Falstaff.
I know not; here he is, and here I yield him, and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Colevile kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gill twopences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Prince John.
Thine too heavy to mount.

Let it shine then.

Prince John.
Thine's too thick to shine.

Falstaff.
Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Prince John.
Is thy name Colevile?

Falstaff.
It is, my lord.

Prince John.
A famous rebel art thou, Colevile.

Falstaff.
And a famous true subject took him.

Colevile.
I am, my lord, but as my betters are, That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me, You should have won them dearer than you have.

Falstaff.
I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

Prince John.
Now, have you left pursuit?

Westmoreland.
Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

Prince John.
Send Colevile, with his confederates, To York, to present execution.

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

[Exit Westmoreland guarded.]

And now despatch we toward the court, my lords. I hear, the king my father is sore sick: Our news shall go before us to his majesty; Which, cousin, you shall bear,—to comfort him; And we with sober speed will follow you.

Falstaff.
My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloucestershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Prince John.
Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition, Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exit.

Falstaff.
I would, you had but the wit; 'twere better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never any of these demure boys come to any proof, for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenchers. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and cruddy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which, delivered o'er to the voice, (the tongue) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, leit the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great, and puffed up with this retnue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of serris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it, and sets it in act and use.

Hereof comes it, that prince Henry is valiant for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his hather, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, amured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent effort of drinking good, and good store of fortile serris, that he is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potatoes, and to addit themselves to sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph?

Bardolph.
The army is discharged all, and gone.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.  Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Prince Humphrey,
Warwick, and others.

King Henry.
Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish;
Only, we want a little personal strength,
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

Warwick.
Both which, we doubt not but your majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

King Henry.
Humphrey, my son of Gloster,
Where is the prince your brother?

Prince Humphrey.
I think, he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King Henry.
And how accompanied?

Prince Humphrey.
I do not know, my lord.

King Henry.
Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Prince Humphrey.
No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Clarence.
What would my lord and father?

King Henry.
Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.
How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? [Thomas.

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him,
SECOND PART OF

IN THE DEAD CARRIAGE. [Enter Westmoreland.] Who's here? Westmoreland?

Westmoreland.

Health to my sovereign, and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver! [hand:
Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's
Mowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unheath'd,
But peace puts forth her olive every where.
The manner how this action hath been borne,
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

King Henry.

O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter sing.
The lifting up of day. [Enter Harcourt.]
Look! here's more news.

Harcourt.

From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of.
The Earl Northumberia, and the Lord Bardolph,
With a great power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the Sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and true order of the fight,
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

King Henry.

And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach, and no food.—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,
And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight falls, and my brain is dizzy.—
O me! come near me, now I am much ill. [Swoons.

Prince Humphrey.

Comfort, your majesty!

Clarence.

O my royal father!

Westmoreland.

My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself; look up! Warwick.

Be patient, princes: you do know, these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary. [well.
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be

Clarence.

No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs.
Th' incessant care and labour of his mind [in,
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it
So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

Prince Humphrey.

The people fear me! for they do observe
Unfather'd heirs, and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them over.

Clarence.

The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say, it did so, a little time before [died.
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and

Warwick.

Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Prince Humphrey.

This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.

King Henry.

I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.
[They place the King on a bed in an inner part of the room.
Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

Warwick.

Call for the music in the other room.

King Henry.

Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Clarence.

His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

Warwick.

Less noise, less noise.

Enter Prince Henry.

Prince Henry.

Who saw the duke of Clarence?

Clarence.

I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

Prince Henry.

How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
How doth the king?

Prince Humphrey.

Exceeding ill.

Prince Henry.

Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him.

Prince Humphrey.

He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

Prince Henry.

If he be sick with joy, he will recover
Without physic.

Warwick.

Not so much noise, my lords.—Sweet prince,
speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Clarence.

Let us withdraw into the other room.

Warwick.

Will't please your grace to go along with us?

Prince Henry.

No; I will sit and watch here by the king.
[Exeunt all but Prince Henry.

Why doth the crown lie there, upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide;
To many a watchful night, sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,
As he, whose brow with homely biggin bound,
Shrouds out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety.
By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:
Did he espire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move.—My gracious lord! my father!
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep,
That from this golden rigid hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father! pay thee plentifully:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits,
[Putting it on his head.

Which
Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole strength Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me. This from thee Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.

King Henry.
Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!

Re-enter Warwick, and the rest.

Clarence.

Doth the king call?

Warwick.

What would your majesty? How fares your grace?

King Henry.

Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Clarence.

We left the prince, my brother, here, my liege, Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King Henry.

The prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him:

He is not here.

Warwick.

This door is open; he is gone this way.

Prince Humphrey.

He came not through the chamber where we stayed.

King Henry.

Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

Warwick.

When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King Henry.

The prince hath taken it hence:—go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?—Find him, my lord of Warwick; chide him hither.

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are;
How quickly nature falls into revolt,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry:
For this they have engrossed and pli'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtfull to invest
Their sons with arts, and martial exercises;
When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste Yield his engrossments to the ending father.—

Re-enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long,
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

Warwick.

My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow, That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King Henry.

But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me, Harry.—

Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exeunt Clarence, Prince Humphrey, Lords, &c.

Prince Henry.

I never thought to hear you speak again.

King Henry.

Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought: I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair, That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity [thee. Is held from falling with so weak a wind, That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that, which, after some few hours,
Were thine without offence, and at my death Thou hast seiz'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself,
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all thy tears that should bedew my hearse,
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head;
Only compound me with forgotten dust:
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form.
Harry the fifth is crown'd!—Up, vanity! Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence;
And to the English court assemble now.
From every region, aspers of idleness! [scum:
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways? Be happy, he will trouble you no more.
England shall double gild his treble guilt,
England shall give him office, honour, might;
For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog Shall flish his tooth in every innocent,
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.

Prince Henry.

O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears,

Kneeling

The most impediments unto my speech, I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke, Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And He that wears the crown immortally,
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more, Than as your honour, and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obduracy rise,
Which my most true and inward duteous spirit Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending. Heaven witness me, when I here came in, And found no course of breath within your majesty,
How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die,
SECOND PART OF

ACT IV. Sc. IV.

And never live to show th' incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown, as having sense,
And thus upbraided: "The care on thee depending,
Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold.
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable: [now'n'd,
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most re-
Hale, thy bearer up." Thus, my most royal Accusing it, I put it on my head; [liege,
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor:
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
Give it entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
King Henry.

O my son!
God put in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st win the more thy father's Pleading so wisely in excuse of it. [love,
Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed,
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me,
But as an honour snatch'd with bolsterous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid,
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace. All these hold fears,
Thou seest, with peril I have answered;
For all my reign but been but as a scene
Acting that argument, and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchased,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So, thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
[green,
Thou art not firm enough; since griefs are
And all thy friends, which thou must make thy friends.
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advance'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd. Which to avoid,
I cut them off, and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lost rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy piddly minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
That strength of speech is utterly denied me,
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive,
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!
Prince Henry.
My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain, and right, must my possession be:

Which I, with more than with a common pain,
Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick,
Lords, and others.

King Henry.
Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

Prince John.
Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!

King Henry.
Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace, son
John;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my lord of Warwick?

Prince Henry.

My lord of Warwick!

King Henry.
Dost any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

Warwick.
'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

King Henry.
Laud be to God!—even there my life must end;
It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I suppose the Holy Land.—
But, bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shallow.
By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away tonight.—What, Davy, I say!

Falstaff.
You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shallow.
I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.
—Why, Davy!

Enter Davy.

Davy.

Here, sir.

Shallow.
Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy;
let me see:—yes, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy.
Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir,—shall we sow the head-land with wheat?

Shallow.
With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook:—are there no young pigeons?

Davy.
Yes, sir.—Here is, now, the smith's note for shoeing, and plough irons.

Shallow.
KING HENRY IV.

 seguintic.

It be cast, and paid. — Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy.

Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had: — and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shallow.

He shall answer it. — Some pigeons, Davy: a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy.

Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shallow.

Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend I the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy.

No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shallow.

Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy.

I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincest against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shallow.

There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy.

I grant your worship, that he is a knave, sir: but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shallow.

Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots. — Give me your hand, master Bardolph.

Bardolph.

I am glad to see your worship.

Shallow.

I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph. — And welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, sir John. [Exit Shallow.

Falstaff.

I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices: he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing-out of six fashions, (which is four terms, or two actions) and he shall laugh without interval. O! It is much, that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak till laid up.

Sir John! [Within.

I come, master Shallow: I come master Shallow. [Exit Falstaff.

SCENE II. Westminster. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice.

Warwick.

How now, my lord chief justice! whither away?

Chief Justice.

How doth the king?

Warwick.

Exceding well: his cares are now all ended.

Chief Justice.

I hope, not dead.

Warwick.

He's walk'd the way of nature, and to our purposes he lives no more.

Chief Justice.

I would, his majesty had call'd me with him: The service that I truly did his life, Hath left me open to all injuries.

Warwick.

Indeed, I think the young king loves you not.

Chief Justice.

I know he doth not, and do arm myself, To welcome the condition of the time; Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Prince John, Prince Humphry, Clarence, Westmoreland, and others.

Warwick.

Here come the heavy issue of deal Harry: O! that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen! How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort.

Chief Justice.

O God! I fear, all will be overturn'd.

Prince John.

Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

Prince Humphry, and Clarence.

Good morrow, cousin.

Prince John.

We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

Warwick.

We do remember; but our argument Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Prince John.

Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Chief Justice.

Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!
SECOND PART OF

ACT V. SC. II.

Prince Humphrey.
Of good my lord, you have lost a friend, indeed;
And I dare swear, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow: it is, sure, your own.

Prince John.
Though no man be assured what grace to find,
You stand in coldest expectation:
I am the sorrier; 'would, 'twere otherwise.

Clarence.
Well, you must now speak sir John Falstaff fair,
Which swins against your stream of quality.

Chief Justice.
Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,
Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul;
And never shall you see, that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.
If truth and upright innocency fail me,
I'll to the king, my master, that is dead,
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

Warwick.
Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry V,
Chief Justice.
Good morrow, and heaven save your majesty!

King.
This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
Sits not so easy on me as you think,—
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court:
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.
For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares
Yet weep, that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,
By number, into hours of happiness.

Prince John, &c.
We hope no other from your majesty.

King.
You all look strangely on me;—and you must.

To the Chief Justice.
You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Chief Justice.
I am assur'd, if I be measured rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King.
No!
How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?
What I rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Chief Justice.
I then did use the person of your father;
The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in th' administration of his law
While I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment:
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,
Have a son set your decrees at nought;
To pluck down justice from your awful bench;
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person:
Nay, more; to spurn at your most royal image,
And mock your workings in a second body.
Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours,
Be now the father, and propose a son;
Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd,
And then imagine me taking your part,
